EDITOR BUFFALO GAZETTE:—Have been tempted to write another epistle for the columns of your paper "from the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." It has always been a saying and a true one too, that agitation brings reform; and again reform always comes from the majority. Now it is claimed by those in authority of this government from road supervisor to president of the United States that there is a class of chronic kickers in this country and they infest every town county and state in this glorious union now we have no dought such is the fact, for we have always had this class of people since the days of Cain and Abel, and they tell us these fellows are doing nothing but breeding turmoil and strife without any cause or provocation. If a man objects to certain laws enacted by the government for individuals and classes and corporations he is termed a kicker, and he has no rights which they are bound to respect; therefore, we must acquiese in the most humble terms, and like the young robin in the nest swallow down what ever the mother bird puts in our mouths. Free press and free speech has been the watchword of this country for more than a century. They ask the farmer about his crops, in reply he says the prospect for a good crop is very flattering. They say then what are you kicking about? But we would kindly inform them that it is Providence that causes the sun to shine that warms the earth, sends forth the copious showers that causes the crops to grow, and not the republican party or the present administration, but no doubt the love of party is so strong in their imagination, that they think the republican party not only rules the people of their country but the heaven above us also (atmospheric heavens.) Abraham that typical Moses, who handed down the law from Washington, D. C. to his people the republicanites, they have disannulled; gone into bye and forbidden paths, made for themselves a golden calf and are now bowing the knee at the shrine of their altars. The money lords of the country want to make gold the only legal standard of money in this country, and then they can have every thing their own way by its scarcity and fineness it is the most costly metal the world over and by getting congress to make gold the only legal standard of money, the bankers and money lords of this country will be able to control everything, state and national from Alpha to Omega: make gold the only legal tender and siver a commodity and the poor of this country might as well march to the guillotine, for it is plain enough if the money power ever gets the advantage over the working class of this country then we must expect nothing but the bitter dregs of the cups. But give us free coinage of silver with gold and silver as a basis for our monetary system, treasury notes issued direct from the government, and then middle men cannot so easily control our monetary system. They tell us there is plenty of money in the banks yes so there is but there is a lack of confidene in our business men of this country and they will not take it out. Business is at a standstill, and this is one reason there is not more money in circulation. Some one tell me who is to blaim for this? and this will become more and more so as the money of this country gets into the hands of the few. The income tax we had a few years ago was a very good thing to help the government along, but congress thought it come to hard on the rich so it was repealed. The internal revenue tax in most respects is a very good thing to help keep up the expense of the government, it draws from whiskey, tobacco, oleomargerine and we think one or two other things, it is rather small on tobacco now: Blaine was in favor of taking it off entirely. But the most perplexing thing in this country is to get through the heads of the people the workings of the high Protective tariff, men will tell you right to your face that a high protecive tariff does not increas the goods to the consumer. Let us make a simple illustration, a man buys a lot of jackknives over in Shefield, England, on an average he pays 50 cents apiece for them, over there, and on bringing them to this country he must pay 10 cents duty apiece on them making each knife cost him 60 cents here: now if he did not have to pay the 10 cent duty on the knife he could sell it for 60 cents and make 20 per cent profit on the dollar on his investment but he must sell the knife for 70 cents in order to give him a fair profit on his investment. Now does not the man who buys the knife and pays 70 cents for it pay the duty. It seems to me this is too plain for any reasonable man to dispute. We favor as the democrat party has always done hard money as a basis and a low protective tariff. Every little industry that starts up in this country wants a wall of protection around it, if they have a plant in some copper or tin mine that the business calls for 3 or 4 men and a mule to run it they begin to cry out we must have protection and they get it. Some fellow, do not know who he was, but think it must be somewhere in Ohio, bought a couple of old roosters and two dozen hens started a poultry yard, then he says to congress you must give me protection in this enterprise I have a large amount of capital invested in this business, so they put a duty of 5 cents on eggs from Canada into the United States does this cheapen eggs to the consumer? yes. They have taken the duty off of sugar, and given a bouty of 2 cents per pound to all manufacturers in this country who will make 500 lb or over, but the law did not take effect soon enough for the manufactuer of maple sugar to get any bounty last spring. Why not have reciprocity with Canada on sugar and you would see the half breed squaw coming over from Canada to the United States with a hump of maple sugar on her back big as a side show to a common circus, to get her 2 cts per pound bounty on sugar but the Scripture says, all things work together for our good.

Next comes the wool industry. The flock masters of Ohio wanted high protection wool and they got it, but it seems by statistical reports that during the last year it has not worked just right for some reason for the first 4 months of 1890 the importation of wool of all kinds was as follows:

January	7,917,747 pounds.
February	5,214,604 " "
March	6,226,104 " "
April	8,466,401 " "
Total,	28,324,856 pounds

In 1891 under the operation of the increased protection of the McKinley law during the same months the importations were:

January	11,881,683 pounds.
Febuary	11,789,019 " "
March	17,318,183 " "
April	15,333,776 " "
Total	56,322,652 pounds

By this it seems that protection does not always protect.

Some claim that manufacturers prefered the imported wool because the fleeces are clean, while in buying the American fleece it is poorly trimed up and they get a good deal of goods that is suitable for fertilizing but not good for making cloth out of. There is more that might be said on the wool question but this will suffice for the present. Perhaps Major McKinley will explain it all in this fall's campaign in Ohio. I find that in every thing almost, the moneyed man has had favors shown him by our congress. Again this money question comes in, the government bonds are based upon the wealth of the nation, and are no better than a treasury note would be issued by the government. Then why not give us treasury notes as a circulating mediun having gold and silver as a basis and do away with the government bonds, and save millions of money. The first national banking law was passed on the 25th of February 1863, and was introduced by Hon John Sherman, of Ohio and he has been helping legislate for the rich ever since. The bankers, moneyed men and there followers claim that the national bonds as a banking basis was a war measure, and could not be got along without but that is just talk and nothing more for it is untrue. Now Mr. Editor, I have got no ax to grind, all I want is equal rights for all, special favors to none.

The poor of this country should be looked after for they are the hardy sons of toil. We have no grudge against any one on account of there religious or political belief for this is a privilege they have guaranteed unto them by our forefathers and let us not make out the constitution of the united states as did William Lloyd Garrison in his paper called the Liberator in 1831, in which he says no country with slavery, if so the constitution is a covenant with death an agreement with hell and the flag a floating lie. This country has resources enough and is productive enough to bring wealth enough if properly distributed so that every child in the land could have butter on boath sides of the bread, shoes and stockins on their feet every day in the year. Then let us be careful and not enslave the many to make a rich lord in every community. Some say there is no cause for complaint or alarm. Every thing is as it was from the begining. Yes only more so. They tell us the party in power has not legislated for combines and corporations. Let us see. From 1862 to 1872 grants of lands were made to railroad corporations amounting in all to 296,000,000 acres of the public domain. Equal to all of New England New York, New Jersey, Deleware, Maryland Ohio and Indiana. How is this? Give them land enough to build there railroad but charge the actual settler within the limits of the road double price. But enough for this time. "In the world's broad field of battle in the bivouac of life be not like dumb driven cattle be a hero in the strife."

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, July 17, 1891.

"I was not for Campbell first" said a member of the democratic National Committee, "but recently, after looking carefully over the field, I became convinced that Campbell's hold on the farmers of the State made him the most available man, that is to say the one who could under the peculiar circumstances surrounding the Ohio campaign this year, pole the most votes, and now that he has been nominated I trust that every democrat in Ohio will recognize the national importance of the election in that State and lay aside all personal objection to the candidate and work as hard as he knows how for the success of the democratic party. The adoption of the free coinage plank in the platform leaves the Farmer's Alliance no excuse for putting a third ticket in the field and if they vote as they have talked, Campbell should receive their support. Of course I cannot say that he will; but anyway I am confident that we can elect Campbell and the legislature, if all of the democrats of the State can be persuaded to actively assist."

Secretary Proctor is on one of his perioidical visits to the War department, over which he is supposed to preside. It is not known how long he will remain, but it is safe to say that he will only be here for a few days, as it isn't probable that he has any intention of breaking his record by remaining for any extended period.

Representative Crisp, of Georgia, whose chances of being the next Speaker of the House have taken such a decided upward spurt recently, is in town this week. He talks confidently but not boastfully of the Speakership prospects, and has nothing but good words for his competitors in what he calls "the friendly competition". He says that whether he or one of the other candidates gets the prize there will be no soreness or hard feelings, as every one of them cheerfully accept the decree of the causes as final.

Secrefary Rusk is to attend the annual encampment of the G. A. R. at Detroit next month, and he is expected to help fix up things for Mr. Harrison with the old soldiers.

Look out for a break between the Harrison and Blaine people. It may be avoided, but it may also occur at any time. The Blaine people have long suspected that most of the misrepresentations concerning Mr. Blaine's health were the work of Mr. Harrison's friends, but it was only the other day that they succeeded in running one of the fakes down—the one saying that Blaine had placed his resignation in Harrison's hands because he never expected to get well again—and in placing the authorship mighty close to "Lige" Halford, it having been telegraphed from here by the correspondent who represents the Indianapolis Journal, the paper which "Lige" used to edit, and which has for years been regarded as Mr. Harrison's personal organ. This correspondent is known to be on the closest terms with Halford and it is charged by the Blaineities that Halford inspired this fake dispatch, which the correspondent did not dare to wire his own paper although it was sent to several other papers in the West. To say that the Blaineities are mad is to draw it very mildly indeed. One of them—a man with an international reputation—has gone to Bar Harbor to lay the facts that he has discovered about the systematic attempts of the Harrison crowd to create the impression that Mr. Blaine is a wreck, mentally and physically, before that gentleman, and to implore him to grant the use of his name as a Presidential candidate, which would of itself put an end to the Harrison candidacy at once.

Senator Call, of Florida, is now in Washington. He says that his opponents are at work on several schemes by which they hope to keep him out of his seat in the Senate on the ground that his election was illegal, but that he isn't alarmed, as he knows that he was legally elected and hasn't the least doubt of being able to establish that fact before either a legislative or legal tribunal.

The count of cash in the Treasury was completed this week, and some republicans are disposed to shout because the total reaches more than $900,000,000 forgetting that there are liabilities outstanding against this amount in the shape of gold certificates, silver certificats silver Treasury notes and United States notes (greenbacks) amounting to $813,746,984, which puts a very different face on the matter.

Representative Oates, of Alabama, says if the democratic party in the South does not wake up and do some lively fighting it will be swallowed lock, stock and barrel by the Farmers Alliance.

IT has been estimated that Sarah Bernhardt has saved more than $1,000,000 in the course of her successful career on the stage.

HENRY M. STANLEY is reported to have made $181,000 from his American tour. One-half of this sum came from his book and the other half from his lectures.

THE profits of the Monte Carlo gambling tables are estimated at $6,000,000 a year. Of this amount $240,000 a year is paid to Prince Charles, of Monaco, in royalties.

CONDUCTOR MACE, of Belfast, who has been connected with the Maine Central railroad for twenty-five years, figures that he has traveled 1,039,160 miles in that time.

CHARLES DAVENPORT, of Cambridge, Mass., who is said to have built the first railroad car in the United States, has just started for a tour of Europe. He is over eighty years of age and "as sound as a nut."

THE death of Mr. Hamlin, says the Boston Transcript, recalls the curious fact that when he was vice president the second officer of the government was bodily included in that of the first, thus: Abra-Ham Lin-coln.

THERE are more women in British India (124,000,000) than there are men, women and children in Great Britain, France and Germany put together, with the population of several minor European states cast in as well.

IN the towns and cities of Chili all the shopping of any consequence is done in the evening. In Santiago the stores are open till midnight, and during the hot afternoons, when everybody takes a siesta, they are locked up.

GEN. BOOTH, of the Salvation Army, who asked for £100,000 with which to regenerate some of the social conditions of London, announces that he has received £10,000 more than that sum, and is promised an additional £10,000.

CHARLES CARROLL, of Carrollton, was the richest man in America when the national constitution was signed. He was worth $500,000. It's plain he didn't want the earth, but that didn't stop him from helping to take the best part of it—the United States—from England.

ASTRONOMERS agree upon three motions of the earth. The rotation on its axis in one day of twenty hours, the revolution around the sun in one year of 365¼ days, and a very slow gyratory motion of its poles around and outside of a line at right angles to the plane of the ecliptic, and coinciding with the line of axal rotation at its center in 25,868 years.

MRS. ELLA WHEELER WILCOX, Mrs. Charles Collis, Lillian Russell and Miss Elita Proctor Otis, the amateur actress, are among the few New York women who wear thumb rings. That which adorns the thumb of Mrs. Wilcox is set in diamonds and is very valuable. The fad does not number many votaries in this country, although the wearing of such rings is said to be rather common in France and England.

PRESIDENT CARNOT, of France, receives $120,000 as salary and as much more for house rent and traveling expenses. The next highest salaries are those paid to the president of the chamber of deputies, the president of the senate and the governor of Algeria, these three officials receiving $20,000 a year each. The best consulate is that of New York, held at present by Count d'Abzac, who receives $11,000 a year.

CAPT. STAIRS, who was one of Stanley's favorite officers during his last journey across Africa, has gone back to Africa in the service of the Katanga Company to help explore the great region of the upper Congo, which has recently been ceded to that company by the free state. It was Capt. Stairs who climbed the remarkable snow-capped mountain, Rowenzori, which Stanley discovered between Lakes Albert Nyanza and Muta Nzige.

THE women in Prussia, according to statistical reports, far outnumber the men. The latest estimate shows a difference of about 600,000 in favor of the women. To the great regret of the fair sex each year shows a larger increase in the excess of the number of women. In 1867 there were only 229,415 more women than men in Prussia. At present of every 1,000 persons 490.9 are men and 509.1 are women. The proportions are about the same in the city and in the country.

JULES VERNE published his first novel when he was thirty-five years old. Since then he has written an average of two books a year, and is now the author of sixty volumes of more or less fascinating interest. Writing a book with Verne is a work of prodigious toil. Before putting a single line to paper he mentally prepares all his material, makes his maps, lays out his routes and reflects upon his work for months. Then, when the story has been written he corrects it at least ten times before giving the final proofs to the printer. The majority of his books are works of fiction.

MASSACHUSETTS is excited over white caps and Long Island is up in arms hunting for a wild bandit who defies all law. The east and the west must indeed be exchanging places. Years ago the west was the home of the cyclone, the tornado, the bandit and the white caps. But now it is the center of culture and the highest form of benevolence, such as was once believed to be located near Boston, to designate it as the Hub of the universe. The white caps, the bandit and the cyclone now frequent the eastern shores of the continent, and the old taunt is now "the wild and woolly east."

A STRANGE sect has come to public notice in Madrid. The most extraordinary practice encouraged by this sect is their mode of contracting marriages. Any woman is entitled to rise in meeting and cry out: "I wish to marry" so and so, naming the man. The man upon whom her choice has fallen is doomed to become a husband. It is useless for him to protest prior engagements. The pontiff marries the couple then and there. Over three hundred such marriages have been carried out, and the popularity of the pontiff among women desiring matrimonial partners is unbounded.

LATER.

The Fight.

ST. PAUL, July 22.—The coming, or advertised prize-fight between Fitzsimmons and Hall to-night has been about the only topic of conversation upon the streets. Yesterday morning a delegation of citizens headed by Thos. Cochran, Jr., Bishop Ireland and others waited upon Gov. Merriam and called his attention to the matter and asked his aid to suppress the affair. The Governor decided it was beyond his jurisdiction but he issued a proclamation citing the facts and called upon all of the peace officers to enforce the laws. Late yesterday afternoon Fitzsimmons was arrested and brought before Judge Cory who placed him and his trainers under $200 bonds to preserve the peace and appear for trial on Friday morning July 24th. There were two prize fights at the Olympic in St. Paul last night and two in Minneapolis.

Cruise of a Whaleback.

LONDON, July 21.—The new American steel steamer Charles W. Wetmore, Capt. Saunders, which sailed from Duluth during the latter part of June, arrived at Liverpool to-day. The Wetmore is an inland built steamer and her cargo, which consists of 95,000 bushels of grain, is the first grain cargo shipped from a lake port direct to Liverpool without being rehandled. Her route was down the lakes from Duluth, through the Welland canal and thence down the St. Lawrence river and across the Atlantic.

The success of the voyage is evidence that the proposition to establish direct communication between European and other ports and the port of Chicago is entirely feasible.

AN eight-year-old boy named McLeod was attacked by a pack of train dogs at Hudson Bay post on Nelson river, Manitoba. His scalp was torn off completely and his face and body badly mangled. The latest arrival from the north says the boy is still living.

THE hull of the Anchor line steamer Utopia, which was wrecked at Gibraltar some months ago, has been safely lodged on the beach. The skeletons of nine grown-up males and several children have been found on the steamer.

INTENSE distress prevails throughout the Argentine Republic. At Buenos Ayres a barrel of flour is worth $29 in paper money. Men are frequently seen picking food from offal heaps. Public feeling is very bitter against the English.

EDITORS IN COUNCIL.

Brief Outline of the Proceedings at the Recent National Editorial Convention at St. Paul, Minn.

The largest editorial convention that ever assembled in the world was held recently at St. Paul, Minn. Besides the regular delegates there were scores of visiting editors in attendance. President Stephens called the convention to order. Archbishop Ireland invoked the Divine grace upon the assembly and Gov. Merriam delivered the state's welcome. His words were well chosen, gracefully delivered and very favorably received. Mayor Smith briefly tendered the freedom of the city and Senator Davis delivered the final address of welcome.

The regular order at the first evening session was the annual address by President E. W. Stephens, of Columbia, Mo. His first recommendation was the establishment of national headquarters. "It will never be possible," said he, "to set on foot any permanent or organic plan of work until this association has a place of abode at some central and accessible point." Considerable attention was paid the matter of advertising rates, and a protest was made against the United States government discriminating against the weekly press when making advertising contracts.

J. W. Scott, managing editor of the Chicago Herald, addressed the association on the subject of the management of a metropolitan newspaper office. Adolph Ochs, of the Chattanooga Times, followed with a paper on "Interior Dailies." After producing figures showing the total publications and circulation of the dailies of the United States, the speaker put as a basis for establishing a daily that it should have at least five hundred regular paying subscribers within three months from the first issue. He then gave several instances of towns having a population of thirty-five hundred and upwards that are supporting daily papers. All the towns mentioned were in the western and northern states. Mr. Ochs said it required six thousand people in a southern city to support a daily. Col. J. R. Hoyt, of the Greenville (S. C.) Courier, read a paper on the "Country Weekly," describing a model weekly and how it should be conducted.

W. E. Tabor, of Denver, read a communication from the members of the Baltimore yearly meeting of Women Friends of Maryland, Virginia and Pennsylvania, alleging that some action be taken on the omission of details in report of crimes, including suicides, scandals and breaches of faith and honor. He offered a resolution expressing sympathy with all efforts made to preserve the purity of the press, and urging the judicious use of the blue pencil on sensational and criminal reports, believing that the purer the tone of the paper the more powerful for good it becomes, and the more effective and exalting its moral influence.

Mr. Scott stated that every arrangement had been made for the entertainment and accommodation of the press of the country at the world's fair. In conclusion he suggested that in 1893 the association should meet in Chicago. His suggestion was warmly received. A number of papers of interest to the craft were read during the session. In the afternoon President Stephens announced the following commiitee to visit the world's fair commissionsers and confer with them regarding the newspaper exhibit: Maj. Bundy, of Chicago; H. M. Woods, of Illinois; Owen Scott, of Illinois; J. A. Hossler, of Indiana, and J. A. Schleiser, of New York.

The last day was confined to the reports of committees and the election of officers. The legislative committee recommended that active steps be taken to secure such legislation as will repeal the present law which permits the government to print return requests on envelopes. The resolutions adopted tendered the thanks of the association to the railway officials, the citizens of St. Paul and all who have taken part in the entertainment of the visitors. The new officers selected are as follows: President, W. S. Capellar, of Ohio; first vice president, B. B. Price, of Wisconsin; second vice president, T. Sambola Jones, of Louisiana; corresponding secretary, J. M. Page, of Illinois; secretary, W. Kennedy, of Pennsylvania; recording secretary, Miss Virginia Clay, of Alabama; treasurer, A. B. Lowrie.

The selection of the next place of meeting was left to the executive committee to decide.

President Stephens was presented with a handsome diamond ring and Corresponding Secretary Page was surprised with a diamond pin.

DESTITUTION IN TEXAS.

Hundreds of People Suffering — Many Driven to Crime.

RIO GRANDE CITY, Tex., July 21.—The destitution on both sides of the Rio Grande for hundreds of miles is appalling. For three years a continuous drouth has caused many deaths from actual starvation, and as starvation begets desperation the ranks of the professional murderers and bandits will be swelled by those driven there by hunger. In Brownsville and Matamoras beggary was never greater nor means to relieve less. It is too late for a fall crop and the prospect is dismaying. In Hidelgo county cattle are daily dying for want of grass and water. In Cameron and Starr they are fast reaching that condition.

Texas Fever in Kentucky.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., July 21.—Developments of the last few days show that Texas fever is raging with terrible violence at a score of points in this state, and farmers are rushing their cattle to market. In the back counties 1,000 head are dead. The loss is already $250,000.

Six Persons Drowned While Yachting.

VICTORIA, B. C., July 21.—A sailing yacht containing seven citizens of this place capsized off Victoria Sunday. One was rescued unconscious, but the others were all drowned. The bodies have not yet been recovered.

Died at a Remarkable Age.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., July 21.—Sarah Davis, a colored woman, was buried here Monday. She was probably the oldest woman in the United States. Her death return shows her to have reached the age of 133 years. It is authoritatively known that she was 115.

Natalie Sues for Three Millions.

PARIS, July 21.—Ex-Queen Natalie, of Servia, who was recently expelled from that country, is suing her husband, Ex-King Milan, in the courts of this city, where he now resides, for 8,000,000 francs, which she claims is a portion of her personal property.

TERRIBLE DEEDS.

Awful Acts of a Couple of Maniacs—An Illinois Farmer Thought to Have Murdered Four Members of His Family, Set Fire to His House and Killed Himself—The Bodies Found in the Ruins of the Burned Dwelling—A Woman in Tennessee Slays Her Three Children and Herself.

FLORA, Ill., July 21.—Early Monday morning a dairyman discovered the farmhouse of H. P. James, 2 miles east of this city, to be burning. Neighbors who responded to the alarm found the bodies of James and his family in the blazing ruins. There were five inmates of the house, Mr. James, his wife and son, and a married daughter, Mrs. Chaney, and her babe. The bodies were recovered. The origin of the fire and the cause of the death of the inmates are yet a mystery. The coroner's jury is in session. It is generally believed that James in a fit of insanity murdered his family, fired the house and then committed suicide.

For some time past it has been whispered among the neighbors that Mr. James was losing his mind, but nothing serious was thought of it. A post-mortem examination was held over one of the bodies, and it was found that a pistol ball had pierced the lungs. A large revolver and a knife were found near one of the bodies, and it is believed that some time during the night Mr. James had got on one of his tantrums and murdered the entire family, set fire to the dwelling and then shot himself.

A MOTHER'S AWFUL ACT.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., July 21.—Sunday Mrs. Lechridge, of Spring Hill, Maury county, after writing a long letter to her husband, who was attending church, secured a double-barreled shotgun, and placing the muzzle at the breast of each of her three children in turn, pulled the trigger, horribly mutilating them. Then turning the weapon upon herself she ended her awful work. The children were aged 4 years, 2 years and 4 months respectively. The mother had been a melancholiac for several years and attempted to take her life before she was married.

A SAD STORY.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., July 21.—The body of Sarah Kramer, aged 35 years, of No. 1339 Crea street, was found floating in the Delaware river Sunday morning. Attached to the waist of the dead woman by means of a stout rope was the body of her 5 months' old son, Willie. The woman was the mother of five other children. Her last boy was deformed, having what are known as club feet. The child's deformity had the effect of making the mother at times depressed, and it is believed that while in that condition she took her deformed child, attached it to her waist, and jumped into the river.

G. A. R. ENCAMPMENT.

DETROIT, Mich., July 21.—The executive committee of the Grand Army of the Republic reunion at its session Monday afternoon adopted the following as the programme during the silver encampment:

Monday, August 3—reception of guests.

Tuesday, August 4—10:30 a. m., grand parade of Grand Army naval veterans and Sons of Veterans; 8 p. m., reception and greeting to Commander in Chief Veazy and members of the Grand Army, Sons of Veterans and the Women's Relief Corps at the Detroit rink; 9 p. m., reception at Camp Sherman to the commander in chief of the G. A. R. and veterans.

Wednesday, August 5—10:30 a. m., twenty-fifth annual session of the national encampment of the grand army at Beecher's hall; 10:30 a. m. ninth annual convention of the Woman's Relief Corps at the Church of Our Father; all day, reunions of the veterans at the various halls, school buildings and offices by regimental and brigade organizations. Evening—Grand naval and pyrotechnical display, closing with the fireworks spectacle of "Perry's Victory." Campfires at the rink, at the expositiou building and at the Central Methodist church.

Thursday—10:30 a. m., adjourned session of the twenty-fifth annual encampment of the grand army at the rink. 10:30 a. m., adjourned session of the ninth annual convention of the Women's Relief Corps at the Church of Our Father. All day, regimental and brigade reunions. Evening, banquet at the rink to the officers and delegates to the national encampment, camp fires at Camp Sherman and at the churches.

Friday — General pleasure seeking, riding about the city, excursions to various river and lake resorts, etc., at will of guests.

Invitations to war governors, ex-presidents of the United States, to the president and his cabinet, to the general in command of the United States army and to all noted living generals of the union army have been extended, and, in most instances, have been accepted.

OUR TRADE WITH MEXICO.

Surprising Statistics of Consul General Guenther.

CHICAGO, July 21.—Ex-Congressman Richard Guenther, the present consul general of the United States to Mexico, is at the Grand Pacific en route to his home at Oshkosh, Wis. "I went to Mexico with the impression that the United States was third or fourth on the list in the way of trade with our southern neighbor," said the consul general, carefully unrolling a sheet covered with figures and spreading it on the table before him. "Now here are the facts as yet unpublished:

"The importations of Mexico from the United States are more than those from all the other countries of the world combined. The common report that England and Germany each export more products to Mexico than the United States is not true, for this country sends $16,000,000 worth more to the Mexican republic than England, $18,000,000 worth more than France, $21,000,000 worth more than Germany, and nearly $5,000,000 worth more products than Germany, England, France, and all the other nations of the earth combined. I will disprove some of the erroneous reports that are being circulated about the commercial relations of Mexico to the United States."

They Want the Cash.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Indian Agent Schuller, who is at the White Earth Chippewa agency in Minnesota, telegraphed the Indian office Monday that the Chippewa Indians to a man declined to accept oxen or wagons or anything else in lieu of cash for the $150,000 which the government owes them. Commissioner Morgan has declined to pay cash, as the money, he claims, would be squandered on Indian traders. It is likely, however, that the government authorities will have to yield, for this usually peaceable tribe threatens trouble to the Minnesota settlers if they are not paid in cash.

Want the New Lake Let Alone.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Acting Secretary Chandler of the interior department recently received a letter from Mr. Wood McKnight at Riverside, Cal., calling attention to a report that the Southern Pacific Railroad Company is about to attempt to stop the overflow of the Colorado river, which has formed a new lake in the Colorado desert, the property of the company being placed in jeopardy, and requesting that the department intervene in behalf of the interests of the people of southern California, whom it is presumed the new body of water will greatly benefit.

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS

LEFT A SNUG SUM.

Nearly two years ago a sensation was caused in Winona by the suicide of Lena Weinberg, for thirty years housekeeper of the old Huff house, and the discovery after her death of about $12,000 in gold coin stowed away under false bottoms in her trunks. With this money she was about to return to Sweden, her native land, and shipped the trunks to Baltimore, but in a moment of frenzy took her life just as the time arrived for her departure. The money was paid over to the heirs in Sweden. A sequel now turns up scarcely less interesting than the initial chapter. The other evening the executor of Mrs. Weinberg's estate, E. A. Goedtzen, had his attention drawn to an old piano stool that had been used by the woman Lena, and, taking it to pieces, there was found a further sum of $13,000 in gold, which the miserly housekeeper had evidently stowed away.

Secretary Windom's Estate.

The appraisers of the estate of the late secretary of the treasury, William Windom, filed their report in the probate court at Winona, showing the total value of the estate to be $199,700. Of this sum $89,000 is in real estate and $41,000 in mortgages and bonds, the balance being divided into small holdings all over the country. As an evidence of the secretary's simplicity of habit the inventory showed only $100 worth of wearing apparel and ornaments.

Fatal Result of a Fire.

During a fire at Chaska which destroyed the Bierline brick machine works, foundry and wagon factory, and several houses and barns, two men were terribly burned, one of them fatally. Jerry Ehman, an employe of the factory, in trying to save machinery had his flesh burned to a crisp. Rev. C. A. Haehnle, pastor of the Moravian church, was also terribly burned about the hands and face. The loss to buildings was about $20,000.

Total Abstinence Union.

The organization of the Total Abstinence union of the Winona diocese has been perfected. This is a new diocese, including twenty-one counties in the southern part of Minnesota, formerly belonging to the St. Paul diocese. Officers of the union were elected as follows:

P. J. Warren, Winona, president; William Burns, Winona, secretary; M. P. Madden, Rochester, first vice president; William Kelly, Carrollsville, second vice president; C. O'Hara, Lanesboro, treasurer.

Dr. Bartlett Exonerated.

The trustees of the Minnesota hospitals for the insane have exonerated Dr. Bartlett, of the St. Peter asylum, from all blame in his connection with the somewhat celebrated case of Mrs. Sophronia Northrop, who, it has been charged, was detained in this state institution without a proper commitment.

Twin Cities May Unite.

The first step toward the union of St. Paul and Minneapolis was taken by the chamber of commerce at St. Paul in the adoption of a resolution appointing a committee of seven to confer with a committee of the Minneapolis board of trade upon the best means of bringing about permanent union.

A Duluth Hotel Burned.

The hotel St. Louis, the second principal hotel in Duluth, was discovered to be on fire in the seventh story just before midnight. The guests escaped, many in their night clothes. It was estimated that the value of the four stories destroyed would reach $75,000.

The News Briefly Chronicled.

Mrs. Hislop, of Fond du Lac, was drowned while rescuing her babe from the water.

The Park theater was destroyed by fire at St. Paul, causing a loss of $48,000; insurance, $35,000.

At a preliminary hearing at Worthington John Dunn positively identified one James Ryan as the man who committed a murderous assault on him.

Mrs. George W. Smith, of Eyota, dropped dead in her yard of heart disease.

S. W. Cushman, aged 70 years, died at Millersburg. He leaves a son and two daughters.

Thieves broke into the store of John A. Cumming at Delhi and stole notes and cash to the amount of $600.

The jewelry store of F. H. Fay at Worthington was entered by burglars and about $350 worth of goods stolen.

William Hoefling, of Fergus Falls, was elected county commissioner to succeed Peter Hughes, who has moved to West Superior, Wis.

Harry, the 7-year-old son of Anthony Raymond, of Little Falls, while playing on the log boom slipped into the Mississippi and was drowned.

The corner stone of the $3,000,000 courthouse and city hall was laid at Minneapolis by the grand lodge A. F. A. M. of the state. Frank F. Davis delivered the oration.

Boys ran two box cars down from a side track at Alexandria on to the main track of the Great Northern railroad and the engine on the west-bound freight ran into them, wrecking one.

The towns of Northfield and Faribault were visited by a terrific windstorm and buildings were unroofed, trees blown down and fences and sheds swept away.

The St. Paul police have recovered the $4,000 in money, diamonds and watches stolen from Pugilist Fitzsimmons' training cottage at White Bear lake. The thieves became frightened and gave up their plunder.

In the trial at St. Paul of J. M. Egan and C. H. Holdridge, of the Chicago, St. Paul & Kansas City road, for alleged violation of the interstate commerce law, Judge Thayer instructed the jury to acquit the defendants.

An effort will be made to have St. Paul and Minneapolis represented in the American association baseball league next season.

Gracie Crandall, aged 4 years, was fatally burned at Winona. She was playing with matches and her dress caught fire.

Hans Manson, who was struck on the head with a club at Henning July 4 by Charles Brandborg, president of the Otter Tail County alliance, died from concussion of the brain.

PERSONAL AND LITERARY.

—After preaching two hours and fifteen minutes in Chattanooga one warm night recently Rev. Sam Jones asked permission of his congregation to take off his coat, which was readily granted.

—Sara Bernhardt's tips completely astounded bell-boys and servants of the California hotel. To the waiting maid who attended her the divine gave two twenty-dollar pieces, and on the garcon who served her meals she conferred four twenties.

—Miss Isabel Hapgood, whose excellent translations of Tolstoi and other Russian novelists have won her well-deserved fame, is a tall, fine-looking woman, with gray hair and a winning smile. Her voice and manner in conversation are delightful, and make her a great favorite in the social circles of New York, which is her home.

—Henry Labouchere says: "I write a detestable hand. But I would advise even those who do not make an illegible scrawl for their signatures to adopt my plan. It is to have my name printed, with my address, at the top of my letters. I am sure that I spend an hour every week trying to decipher signatures, and all those who receive many letters must do the same.

—The Imperial library of St. Petersburg has acquired a collection of 2,575 engraved pictures of historical personages from the time of Grecian antiquity down to the beginning of the present century. This collection completes the set of engravings which the library has accumulated. It is especially rich in the pictures of the German notabilities of the last five centuries.

—The young king of Spain, who has just completed his fifth year, is beginning to ride on ponies. His activity, wilful disposition and inquisitive curiosity make him a sharp contrast to his more tranquil-minded sisters. In two years his majesty will have a separate household, and already he has shaken off the attendance of his Austrian nurse, showing a preference for male attendants.

—Ellen Terry played for several years under the management of Charles Reade, whom she characterizes in one sentence as "dear, lovable, aggravating, childlike, crafty, gentle, obstinate and entirely delightful and interesting." During the progress of a play Mr. Reade would sit and watch her and between the acts send her little notes pointing out what he deemed the defects and merits of her work.

—Emperor William, to the surprise of many people, has appointed Prince Albrecht of Prussia, at present regent of Brunswick, the successor of Count von Moltke as president of the national commission of defense. The prince is a cousin of the late Emperor Frederick. He is the handsomest living member of the Hohenzollern family. He is one of the tallest officers in the army, being almost six feet six inches in height.

—"Florry, dear," faltered the Washington youth, "I—I couldn't summon courage to tell you what was in my heart, and I wrote it. You got my letter, didn't you?" "Yes, George, I got it." "And you read it, didn't you?" "Yes, I read it. In fact, I—I read it over twice." "And now, Florry," he said, growing bolder, "I have come to learn my fate." "The best I can promise you, George," said the blushing daughter of the distinguished congressman, withdrawing her hand from the ardent grasp of the infatuated young man, "is that I will advance your letter to a third reading to-morrow."—Hartford Courant.

Their Artistic Talents.

"Yes," said the hostess, "both my sons have inclinations toward art. One paints very well and the other has done some beautiful carving."

"My boy is pretty good in the last mentioned," said one of the visiting ladies.

"Indeed?"

"Yes, he can do a chicken or a turkey beautiful, though I must say a duck kind of floors him."—Washington Post.

A FLIRTATION.

I've been flirting to-day with a baby
In the window right over the way,
And the neighbors are gossiping, maybe;
But I don't care a bit what they say.

He's a dear little curly-lashed fellow,
With eyes that are laughing and sweet;
His hair was like grain, golden yellow,
He'd blue shoes—for he showed me his feet.

He glanced at me, pleasantly smiling,
As though saying: "I wish you'd remain."
Then he tapped on the window beguiling
And flattened his nose 'gainst the pane.

He threw me a kiss for a greeting,
He showed me the lace on his dress;
But, ah! why are moments so fleeting?
The time came for luncheon, I guess.

Then I waved him good-by—oh, the saddest,
And smiled to him over the way,
And he looked, of all babies, the maddest,
When the nurse came and took him away.

But sometimes he will peep thro' the curtain
And hold the lace edges apart,
So I'll watch every day, for I'm certain
That baby has broken my heart!

A NEEDY OUTSIDER.

And the Pathetic Story He Told the Reporters.

THERE was animation at the Nocturnal club at three o'clock in the morning. The city reporters who had been dropping in since midnight were now reinforced by telegraph editors — for the country editions of the big dailies were already being rushed in light wagons over the sounding stones to the railroad stations. The cheery and urbane African—naturally called Delmonico by the habitues of the Nocturnal club—found his time crowded in serving bottled beer, sandwiches or boiled eggs to the groups around the tables.

To a large group in the back room Fetterson related how he had once missed the last car at the distant extremity of West Philadelphia, and, failing to find a cab west of Broad street, had walked fifty blocks after midnight, and had still succeeded in getting his report in the second edition, and thus making a "beat on the town."

Then spoke up a needy outsider whom Fetterson had brought in at one o'clock.

I neglected to mention Fetterson's penchant for queer company. It is quite right that reporters know policemen, are on chaffing terms with nights cabmen, and have large acquaintance with pugilists and even with "crooks." But Fetterson picks up the most remarkable and out-of-the-way—not to speak of out-at-elbows—specimens of mankind, craft in distress on the sea of humanity. The needy outsider was his latest acquisition.

It is enough to say of this destitute acquaintance of Fetterson's that he was a ragged man needing a shave. In daylight, in the country, you would have termed him a tramp. Hitherto he had sat in our group in silence. When he opened his mouth to discourse, it was natural that he should have a prompt and somewhat curious hearing.

"Speaking of walking," he said, "I have walked a bit in my time. Mostly, though, I've rode—on freight cars. The longest straight tramp I ever made was from Harrisburg to Philadelphia once when the trains weren't running. The cold weather made walking pleasant. But what do you think of a woman—no tramp woman, either—starting from Pittsburgh to walk to Philadelphia?"

"Oh, there is a so-called actress who recently walked from San Francisco to New York," put in someone.

"Yes, but she took her time, and had all the necessaries of life on the way. She walked for an advertisement. The woman I speak of walked in order to get there. She walked because she hadn't the money to pay her fare. Her husband was with her to be sure. He was a pal o' mine. You see it was a hard winter, years ago, and work was so scarce in Pittsburgh that the husband had to remain idle until the two had begun to starve. He had some education, and had been an office clerk. At that time of his life he couldn't have stood manual labor. Still he tried to get it, for he was willing to do anything to keep a lining to his skin. If you've never been in his predicament you can't realize how it is and you won't believe it possible. But I've known more than one man to starve because he couldn't get work and wouldn't take public charity. Starvation was the prospect of this young fellow and his wife. So they decided to leave Pittsburgh and come to Philadelphia, where they thought it would be easier for the husband to get work.

"'But how can we get there?" the husband asked.

"She was a plucky girl and had known hardship, although she was frail to look at.

"'Walk,' she replied.

"And two days later, they started."

The outsider paused, and lighted a forbidding-looking pipe.

When he resumed his narrative he spoke in a lower tone. The recollections that he called up seemed to stir him within, although he was calm enough of exterior.

"I won't describe the experiences of my pal on that trip. It was his first tramp. He knew nothing of the art of vagabondage. Of course they had to beg. That was tough, although he got used to it and to many tricks in the trade. They slept in barns and they ate when and where they could. It cut him to the heart to see his wife in such hunger and fatigue. But her spirits kept up better than his—or at least they seemed to. Often he repented of having started upon such a trip. But he kept that to himself.

"When the wife at last did give in to the cold, the hunger and the weariness, it was to collapse all at once. It happened in the mountain country. In the evening of a cold, dull day they were trudging along on the railroad ties, keeping on the westbound track so they could face approaching trains and get off the track in time to avoid being run down.

"'We'll stop in the town ahead,' the husband said; 'we can get warm in the station, and you shall have supper if we have to knock at every door in the town.'

"And the wife said:

"'Yes, we'll stop; for I feel, Harry, as if—as if I couldn't—go any fur—Harry, where are you?'

"She fell forward on the track. When the man picked her up she was unconscious. Clasping her in his arms he set his teeth and fixed his eyes on the lights of the town ahead and hurried forward.

"But before he reached the town he found it was a dead body he was carrying.

"You see she had kept up till the very last moment in the hope of reaching the town before dark.

"What the man did, how he felt when he discovered that her heart had ceased to beat there in the solitude upon the mountains, with the town in sight at the foot of the slope in the gathering night, I can leave to the vivid imaginations of you newspaper men. For four hours he mourned over her body by the side of the track, and those in the trains that passed could not see him for the darkness.

"Then my pal took the body in his arms and started up the mountain, for the track at that point passed through what they call a cut, and the hills rise steep on each side of it. He had his prejudices against pauper burial, my pal had, and he shrunk from going to the town and begging a grave for her. He didn't need a doctor's certificate to tell him that life had gone forever from her fragile body. He knew that she had died of cold and exhaustion.

"As he turned the base of the hill to begin to ascend it, he saw in the clouded moonlight a deserted railroad toolhouse by the track. In front of it lay a broken, rusty spade. He shouldered this and proceeded up the mountain.

"It was a long walk and he had to stop more than once to rest, but he got to the top at last. There was a little clearing in the woods here, where some one had camped. The ruins of a shanty still remained.

"My pal laid down the body of her who had been his wife, with the dead face turned toward the sky, which was beginning to be cleared of its clouds. Then he began to dig.

"It was a longer job than he had expected it to be, for my pal was tired and numb. But the grave was made at last, upon the very summit of the mountain.

"He lifted the body of the brave girl, he kissed the cold lips, and he took off his coat and wrapped it carefully about the head, so that the face would be protected from the earth. He stooped and laid the body in the shallow grave, and he knelt down there and prayed.

"He filled the grave up with earth with the broken spade that he had used in digging it. All these things required a long time. He didn't observe how the night was passing, nor that the sky became clear and the stars shone and the moon crossed the zenith and began to descend in the west. He didn't notice that the stars began to pale. But he worked on until he had finished. And then he stopped and prayed again.

"When he arose his face was toward the east; and over the distant hill-tops he saw the purple of the dawn."

The outsider ceased to speak.

"What then?"

"That's all. My pal walked down the mountain, jumped upon the first freight train that passed, and has been a wanderer on the face of the earth ever since."

There were various opinions expressed of this narrative. I quietly asked the needy outsider, as we left the club at sunrise:

"Will you tell me who your pal was—the man who buried his wife on the mountain top?"

There was contemptuous pity in the outsider's look as it dwelt for a moment upon me before he replied: "The man was myself."

And then he condescended to borrow a quarter from me.—R. N. Stephens, in Philadelphia Press.

Pay for Being Virtuous.

A gentleman in Buffalo many years ago promised his nephew five thousand dollars if he would neither chew, smoke, drink nor gamble until he became of age. The conditions were agreed to, and after the death of the uncle, the executor having refused to pay the claim, the case was tried in court and finally decided in favor of the nephew. No one should practice virtue for money. Virtue itself is worth more than gold. Yet this young man is not the first one who has made money by avoiding vices.—Golden Days.

—Modern Childhood.—Madge—"Mamma, please play something on the piano for my doll to learn to dance." Mamma—"Oh, not now, dear, I have no time." Madge—"No time! Oh! of course novel reading is more necessary than the entertainment of your children!"—Demorest's Monthly.

—"And what is the trouble?" inquired the young wife of the physician. "Well, I don't think the case is really bad enough for a season at the seashore. I think a cure may be effected by the judicious application of a nice summer hat."—Fliegende Blaetter.

SCHOOL AND CHURCH.

—The university of the city of New York has just added a school of the science of education to itself, and hereafter will confer the degrees of master and doctor of pedagogy.

—The Church Missionary society had a very successful year financially last year. Its receipts amounted to $1,235,000. The number of new missionaries sent out was seventy-nine.

—Six denominations are now operating missions in Alaska—Presbyterians, Methodists, Friends, Moravian, Episcopal and Swedish. There are a total of eighteen Protestant mission stations.

—The numerical strength of Calvanistic Methodism in Wales may be conjectured from the statement that out of a population of 51,416 in Anglesey, 31,466 are said to belong, as members or adherents, to that church.

—Bishop Tucker writes that the native Christians of Uganda are so eager to get a copy of the New Testament in the Swahili language that a man will work for three months to obtain it. Only a limited edition of the completed volume has as yet reached the country.—Living Church.

—The university of the state of New York includes 410 institutions—97 academies, 234 high schools and 79 degree-conferring institutions, including 18 colleges of arts and science for men, 9 for women, 4 for men and women, 5 law schools, 16 medical schools, 4 schools of pharmacy, 12 theological schools, 3 polytechnic and 11 special institutions.

—School studies should be condensed and deepened rather than extended and shallowed. When this is done, education worthy of the name may be obtained, and the youth of the nation better prepared to meet the struggle for existence which ever increases in intensity and in its demands upon the reserves of mental force.—Spokane Review.

—The American Congregational Union organized in 1853 has aided in erecting 2,044 houses of worship and 270 parsonages in 48 states and territories. From loans and grants on parsonages $236,454.82 have been paid back to the union, and the insurance and sales of churches have increased the amount to $309,507.62, which has been reloaned to other new church organizations.

—Recent legislation in connection with education lays the railroads of Kentucky under tribute for the benefit of her schools; provides that the schools of Louisiana shall profit by the proceeds of the sale of freight left unclaimed in the hands of common carriers, and exempts from taxation all associations in New York state which provide libraries, night-schools, lecture courses, etc.

A REAL RULER.

Ishmail Pasha, the Former Khedive of Egypt.

The extravagance of Ismail Pasha, the former khedive of Egypt, provoked English and French holders of Egyptian bonds to ask him to abdicate. Their governments pressed the request, and the khedive, deposed in 1879 by the sultan, left Egypt and now lives in exile. But although Ismail's faults were very great, he was a real ruler.

While M. de Lesseps was building the Suez canal, the public opinion of Europe was against the enterprise, and money was hard to get. The khedive sent for Mr. Hawkshaw, an eminent English engineer, and said to him.

"Examine the ground, study the plans and report to me confidentially. If you report the work to be impracticable, the works will be brought to an end."

Mr. Hawkshaw reported not only that the canal was practicable, but that it could be made and maintained at a reasonable expense. He was among the guests invited by the khedive to attend the opening of the canal. On his landing at Port Said, M. Lesseps presented him to the engineers about him, saying: "This is the gentleman to whom I owe the canal."

The khedive was anxious that the Aigle, the steamer on which was the empress of France, should have a free course through the canal. But the Latiff, which he sent to clear the way, stuck, and blocked the canal. Word was brought to the khedive at Port Said between eleven and twelve o'clock at night.

He got into his own vessel, took three hundred men with him, and by six o'clock in the morning had got the Latiff off, and saw her shunted at one of the stations, and went on through the canal in his own yacht, so as to have the course clear for the Aigle, which was to start at seven in the morning.

"If," said he, "I had not got the Latiff off, I should have blown her up, so that the Aigle might have gone on clear."—Youth's Companion.

A SUMMER TRAGEDY.

The Small Boy with the Knife Gets In His Deadly Work.

He was sitting in a hammock, a young man in the pride and beauty of his budding manhood and his new summer suit. Close, very close, to him was a fair young creature in the freshness and innocence of girlhood and a tailor-made gown. He had his arm around her waist, which was fitting and proper, for they had been engaged nearly five minutes.

"My darling," he had said, and she had said so, too.

"And you really love me, my own Marguerite?"

"Love you? Oh, Clarence?"

"My Marguerite!"

"My Clarence!"

"You are all mine now."

"And you are mine."

"Yes, darling."

"Oh, Clarence!"

"And you are truly happy, Marguerite?"

"Happy? Oh, Clarence!"

"It seems like a sweet dream to me. I am afraid of walking, and finding that it is not true."

"But it is true, Clarence."

"Yes, darling, and you are glad?"

"Yes, Clarence—more than glad."

"What heights of happiness we have reached, Marguerite. May the memory of this moment linger ——."

Now, there was in the family of Marguerite one of those destroyers of much earthly happiness, one of those creatures that no degree of civilization can impress with a proper sense of decorum—a small boy. He was Marguerite's brother. Nothing was sacred to this small boy. Not even Marguerite's beau. The small boy had a knife. It was whipped out just as Clarence had said, "The memory of this moment." In the gloom of the deepening twilight the knife was whipped out to do its fatal work, and "the memory of the moment" is still a mortification of the flesh of Clarence and Marguerite.—Jury.

HOME HINTS AND HELPS.

—Glass jars of a small size, or large tumblers, are better for preserves than china, for should they not keep well it can be detected immediately.

—Lemon Jelly: One-half a box of gelatine, soaked in one-half pint of cold water one hour, add one pint of boiling water, one and one-half cupfuls of sugar, juice of three lemons; stand on stove until boiling. Strain into molds, set in a cool place till ready to serve.—Housekeeper.

—Mutton Chops with Lemon: Wash the chops, wipe them dry, grease the bars of your gridiron, and broil them over hot coals. When they are done lay them on a dish and season them with pepper and salt, and baste them with butter; peel and slice lemons, lay a slice on each chop and send them to the table. This is the French method of serving them.—Boston Budget.

—To make ice-cream take one-half gallon new milk, one ounce of gelatine dissolved in cold milk and poured into the milk, three eggs, the whites beaten separately, and four cupfuls of granulated sugar. Mix well and pour into the freezer; soon as it begins to freeze add one pound of chopped almonds, one of grated cocoanut, one pound of ripe strawberries or preserves and one pint of seeded cherries.—Ladies' Home Journal.

—Tapioca Jelly: One cupful of tapioca, four cupfuls of cold water, juice of a lemon and part of rind; sweeten to suit the taste. Soak tapioca in the water four hours. Set within a saucepan of boiling water and stir frequently. If too thick after it begins to clear add a little boiling water. Add rind and juice of lemon when quite clear, and pour into a mold. To be eaten cold with cream. It is also very nice flavored with orange.—Good Housekeeping.

—Stuffed Beefsteak: Take a rump steak about one inch thick, make a stuffing of cracker crumbs seasoned with salt, pepper and sage, add a few oysters and one egg, spread the dressing over the steak, turn it, roll up, tie securely, put it into a deep baking-pan with a good quantity of water and corn well, cook slowly about two hours, occasionally basting it. When the meat is done thicken the gravy and pour over it, carve in slices through steak and dressing.—Boston Herald.

—Cheap and good-looking screens are made out of palm leaves, and are ornamented with great clusters of beautiful foreign grasses. One large and very effective screen consisted of five palm leaves painted white and gold, and arranged as a fan. It was decorated with a large posy formed of pampas grass, silky pompons, bulrushes, everlasting daisies, thistles and pretty colored grasses. The wall decorations consisted of single palm leaves painted a lively color and adorned with a bunch of flowers and grass.

SILK CULTURE.

The silk worm is the larva of a small moth known as the silk-worm moth, and exists in four different stages—the egg, the larva, chrysalis and adult. The eggs should be procured in cold weather and kept at sufficiently low temperature to prevent them hatching until the food is ready for them, and the weather suitable, the latter being a very necessary condition for the success of the business. When ready to have them hatch, the eggs should be kept at a regular heat, seventy-five degrees, when they will begin to hatch in five or six days. The leaves of the white mulberry, or osage orange, must then be gathered and placed near the little insects, which should be in shallow pasteboard boxes. Netting should be placed lightly over the feeding boxes and fresh leaves placed on it. The little worms will at once crawl through the meshes, and they can thus be removed from the trash and dry leaves. Fresh leaves should be gathered two or three times a day, or as often as they appear wilted, the firmness of the cocoons and texture of the silk depending greatly on the frequency of feeding. The first feed should be given about five o'clock in the morning and the last at twelve o'clock at night. Care must be taken to spread the leaves evenly.

As the fifth or sixth day approaches, signs of the first moult begin to appear. The little worms begin to lose their appetites and dark spots show on the head. Feeding can now be discontinued and the boxes cleaned. No food should be given until they have cast the skin, when it should be resumed and given very freely. The space they occupy must now be increased, as worms too closely crowded do not thrive. The same treatment is necessary for the three succeeding months as in the first one. The temperature of the raising room should now be kept about eighty degrees, and all variation should be avoided.

After passing through the last moulting stage, the worms will begin to shrink and become restless, and throw out the silk. The trays should now be placed convenient to small branches or limbs of trees. The worms will mount at once and commence spinning. In two or three days the work will be done, and in six or eight the chrysalis will be formed and the cocoons ready for gathering. Various modes of choking the chrysalis are used. Exposure to heat of the sun, or steaming will answer, but it is best to sell them before suffocation is necessary.

White mulberry leaves are considered the best food, the black mulberry is also suitable and the osage orange is quite as good as either. Several excellent books on the subject of silk culture are published and those desiring to engage in the business would do well to supply themselves with such, as a thorough knowledge of the nature and habits of the silk worm will insure success in the business.—Eliza R. Parker, in The Home.

Unique Form of Dress Skirts.

French modistes are making dress skirts closely gored in front and on the sides, with a bias back arranged in a new way that gives stylish scantiness at the top and great breadth at the foot. To get this effect the back is composed of three straight breadths of silk sewed together and hung to the belt from one corner, instead of from their top. This makes a straight side next each gored side breadth, and leaves the middle of the back perfectly bias. The point at the foot is cut off and the end of the skirt is gracefully rounded. It is well in making the back to cut off the upper corner about eight inches across, and gather this slightly instead of literally hanging the back from a point. In double-width goods, such as ladies cloth, a single breadth forms the back, and the slanting seams seen in silk skirts are thus avoided.—Chicago Post.

The Leading Story of the August Wide Awake.

A delightful reminiscence of Lafayette's last visit to America, is contributed by Sarah O. Jewett; it is entitled "Peg's Little Chair," and has a full-page illustration by Garrett. "The Bride's Bouquet" is a charming story of a good deed, and "The Silent Lie" is an admirable school story. "Pokeberry Juice and Mullein," by Kate Upson Clark, is a little tale that reveals some of the funny toilet secrets of country girls a generation ago. "Mr. Brown's Playfellow," by J. Loxley Rhees, "Shells of Sea and Land," by Will M. Clemens, "The Poppy Bee," by Mrs. Hall, and "How to Dry Starfishes," by Louisa Lyndon, are good short articles for the lovers of natural history. "How the Cossacks Play Polo" is a terrible and dramatic story of a Russian field-sport indulged in by officers of the Imperial Guard; it is by Madame de Meissner of the Russian legation. "What Seven Indian Boys Did" is a true account of some knowledge-loving Alaska boys, by Francis C. Sparhawk. Margaret Sidney's "Peppers" serial in this number has all the interest of a good novel. "Miss Matilda Archambeau Van Dorn," the serial by Miss Cumings, is full of amusing developments. "Marietta's Good Times" are really good times. "Men and Things" pages abound with original anecdotes. The poems are by Kate Putnam Osgood, Maria Johns Hammond, Eli Shepperd, Jane Ellis Joy and Richard Burton. Especially good things for veranda reading are the Margaret-Patty Letter, by Mrs. William Claflin, and the fine ballad by Mrs. Harriet Prescott Spofford, "Pope's Mother at Twickenham."

Wide Awake is $2.40 a year; 20 cents a number. A specimen (back number) will be sent on receipt of 5 cents. D. Lothrop Company, publishers, Boston.

Making Literature.

She—Miss Grayson has somehow produced the impression that she comes of a very literary family.

—The current suspicion that blood oranges are often artificially stained is put to rest by Medical Director Males, of Washington, who has examined some suspected blood oranges. He found that they were naturally colored and declared that it was impossible to stain an orange by injecting any artificial staining fluid into the fruit either before or after plucking from the tree.

"August Flower"

The Hon. J. W. Fennimore is the Sheriff of Kent Co., Del., and lives at Dover, the County Seat and Capital of the State. The sheriff is a gentleman fifty-nine years of age, and this is what he says: "I have "used your August Flower for several years in my family and for my "own use, and found it does me "more good than any other remedy. "I have been troubled with what I "call Sick Headache. A pain comes "in the back part of my head first, "and then soon a general headache "until I become sick and vomit. "At times, too, I have a fullness "after eating, a pressure after eating "at the pit of the stomach, and "sourness, when food seemed to rise "up in my throat and mouth. When "I feel this coming on if I take a "little August Flower it relieves "me, and is the best remedy I have "ever taken for it. As she enters womanhood, every young girl needs the wisest care. Troubles beginning then may make her whole life miserable.

But the troubles that are to be feared have a positive remedy. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription builds up and strengthens the system, and regulates and promotes every proper function. It's a generous, supporting tonic, and a quieting, soothing nervine—a legitimate medicine, not a beverage, free from alcohol and injurious drugs. It corrects and cures, safely and surely, all those delicate derangements, weaknesses, and diseases peculiar to the sex.

A remedy that does cure is one that can be guaranteed. That's what the proprietors of "Favorite Prescription" think. If it doesn't give satisfaction, in every case for which it's recommended, they'll refund the money. No other medicine for women is sold on such terms.

Away with the wash-board Use Pearline

As long as you use the old wash-board there'll be hard work and waste. That's what goes with it, and can't be taken from it. That's what it was made for. It's the rub, rub, rub, on it that ruins the clothes. It's the wash-board that wears you out. You don't need it.

Away with wash-day! You don't need that, either. You don't set apart a day for washing the dishes. Wash the clothes in the same way, with no more work, a few at a time.

But you'll have to use Pearline to do it. Pearline only can rid you of wash-board and hard work; with it you can do your washing when you like. And you can do it safely, too. Directions on every package.

"IGNORANCE of the law excuses no man," and ignorance is no excuse for a dirty house or greasy kitchen. Better clean them in the old way than not at all; but the modern and sensible way is to use SAPOLIO on paint, on floors, on windows, on pots and pans, and even on statuary. To be ignorant of the uses of SAPOLIO is to be behind the age.

A SERIOUS MISTAKE.

Much mischief is done in the treatment of constipation. The common opinion is that all requirements are fulfilled if the medicine forces unloading of the bowels. A great error. Medicine simply purgative, corrects no morbid condition, consequently their use is followed by greater costiveness. A remedy, to be effectual and permanent, must be composed of tonic, alterative, corrective and cathartic properties. These are admirably combined in Dr. Tutt's Liver Pills. They will, in a short time, cure all the sufferings that result from inactive bowels. They give tone to the intestines, stimulate the secretions, and correct imperfect functional action of the stomach and liver.

—The Catholic parsonage is drawing towards completion and will rank among the best residences in our village.

—Several of our citizens enjoyed a musicale at C. G. Roosen's this week. Mrs. Kissing, of Minneapolis, was the principal performer.

—Hay making is progressing in fine shape, and an abundance of first class hay is likely to be the result. Good hay and plenty of it makes good stock.

—We are in receipt of a letter from S. E. Farnham, of Charleston, W. Va. former editor of the Cokato Observer. He is not satisfied there, has been sick, and expects soon to return to Minnesota.

—Next Sunday the Base ball nine are to take a rest, good for them. Last Lord's day they played a game with the Waverly club resulting in the following score. Waverly 17 tallies, Delano 41.

—Quarterly meeting services at the M. E. Church, on Tuesday at 2:30 P. M. Preaching in the evening by presiding Elder John Stafford at 7:30. Sunday evening the usual services at 7:30 P. M. Come all.

—The Catholic Society of St. Michaels will give an entertainment at Delano in the City Hall, on Sunday, July 26, for the benefit of the new church at St. Michaels. Tickets 25cts, children 15cts.

—The Eagle has its usual scolding this week. This time Senator Eaton is the mark, with an occassional side shot at William Ziebarth and once in a while a crack at Dave Cochran who has left the state quite a while ago.

—Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Mowatt, celebrated their tin wedding on the 19th inst. Mrs. M. has not forgotten how to make first class wedding cake, and the McKinley tin tariff did not injure the ice cream which was excellent.

—M. A. O'Hair visited Woodland, on Wednesday, last, and entertained Justice J. H. Ferrell, with the defense of the case against Thomas Steele, son of Capt. Steele, of the regular U. S. Army, who was charged with shooting a dog. M. A. says he cleared his client.

—J. W. McDonald, returned yesterday evening from a trip through Red River Valley. He says crops are fine and people happy. He met Rutlidge the "Kid orator" formerly of this place Ed is Insuring, and as usual twirling the sphere by way of amusement.

—Geo. W. Bolton Mrs. Cross, William Lewis and wife were among Delanoits in attendance at the funeral of Mrs. Thomas S. Gunn, at Montrose on Sunday. Sim Gunn of the Pacific coast came home but did not arrive until Sunday evening after the funeral was over.

—Messrs John and Con O'Leary and Charley Guptil, of this place, left, on Thursday morning with their teams, for the western prairies to assist in harvesting. Con rigged up a regular prairie schooner to serve as a house for the crowd. He also purchased a fine gray horse from Montrose.

—The "fats" are not satisfied with their defeat on Wednesday, by the "leans" and their captain "Tub" Eppel is industriously engaged in looking up some "fats" solid enough to stop a ball and wants another game, on Monday afternoon. The "leans" will most likely be there and furnish them some fun.

—On Wednesday afternoon the "fats" and the "leans" took a lively game ot ball on the Delano grounds, which are now in excellent condition, we mean the grounds. After playing the five innings agreed upon the score stood 5 tallies for the "fats" and 9 for the "leans." A pretty good game considering.

—Now that our progressive village Trustees have caused a sidewalk to be built on Franklin Avenue, and considerable travel will go that way, and our neighbor in the newspaper business has accumulated so much wealth as he boasts, it would be in order for him to pay a little attention to the embellishment of his property on that street and if a small portion of the surplus were expended in putting a few panes of glass in the front of the old quarters it would be more pleasing to the eye than at present. Come old Eagle spare a few feathers from your abundance for your old nest.

—The Village Council have called a mass meeting for Wednesday evening to listen to the different views of our citizens in regard to some provision for better fire extinguishers for the parts of the village too for from the river to make that source of supply available, with present apparatus. Several tanks on the highest places filled with water would be sufficient to drown out almost any fire we are liable to have if taken in time. But, how to fill the tank is the question? Shall water be pumped from the river or shall artesian wells be made? Or is there some better way yet to be suggested? Water works of some kind must be had in the near future. Come out to the meeting and bring along your views on the subject, and don't be afraid to lay them before the meeting.

—The first news we had of the storm in Nicollet county was by a letter from our son John who is visiting in St. Peter.

—J. D. Young made a trip to Hutchinson, this week he says that place surprised him wonderfully. He calls it one of the livest places he has been in for a long time. The crops between there and here are unusually fine.

—William Zeibarth, Esq, was hunting for a lawyer this morning. He said if he could get a warrant he would arrest the editor of the Eagle again, as he lies, and Mr. Z. thinks he can stand it as long as the other fellow can.

—Mr. Woolford, of Rockford is located in Delano for a week or so, raising and moving buildings. Simons saloon has been raised two or three feet. Wm. Lewis, O Erwig and Phil Martin are among his customers. If our city fathers would establish a grade not so many houses would have to be moved.

—What has become of all the Delano correspondents to the county papers? The HEARALD, TIMES and JOURNAL, all used to be supplied with items from our burg, but lately we do not see any communications of that kind in our exchanges.—Eagle.

Possibly people read the Gazette and get the news just the same.

—The suit of Mrs. G. W. Smith administratrix vs. J. D. Brandon was tried in Justice Bohn's court on Monday, and a verdict rendered in favor of Mrs. Smith. Attorney Homes of Minneapolis and Billings for plamtiff, M. A. O'Hair for defendant. The defendant expects to take an appeal on law points.

—Large and numerous loads of lumber are now finding their way to the country from this place. Farmers are building granaries barns and houses throughout our county. Wright county is sure to be one of the leading counties in this great state and even now is well to the front in many respects, one of which is farming.

—On Wednesday the M. E. Sabbath School had a fine picnic on the grounds near Lake Rebeca. Picking raspberries, rowing on the Lake, swinging, playing ball, and eating a picnic dinner were some of the enjoyments of the occasion. Roads are in excellent condition and the weather fine consequently the sabbath school picnic was voted a success by all in attendance. There was a good turn out.

—On Tuesday quite a lot of our neighboring ladies took a trip to devil's Lake, where they have friends to visit. Mrs. Washington Rader Mrs. Ennes N. Brandon, Mrs. Thomas Rader, Mrs. William McKinley, Mrs. John Jacobs, Mrs. Ephraim Jacobs, and Mrs. S. Workman, of Penn, and Misses Estella and Nellie Jacobs and Florence Benner, of Rockford, were among the number. Mr. Al. Roberts and Cal Moore formerly residents of this part of the country and now living in the new country will doubtless be much surprised to see such a large delegation from their old neighbors, and relatives, as few of them though of going until a very short time before they started. May all hands enjoy the visit. Such trips serve to make life more enjoyable.

—At the school meeting on Saturday evening. J. A. Brasie acted as moderator and H. Galley as Secretary. The Financial Statement was read and approved, after which the election of officers was proceeded with, resulting in the election of Swan Erickson for one year; L. M. Maxfield for two years; and I. Gutzwiller and John Cunningham for three years. The two members holding over are J. A. Brasie and C. W. Ingerson.

F. H. Lindsley moved that this meeting authorize the board to purchase free text-books for a sum not to exceed $60. Carried.

I. Gutzwiller said as there had been considerable real or imaginary trouble about the heating and ventilating of the school house it would be well to take some action on the matter. An out-fit something like the old one could be got for $815, and it would cost about 300, more to arrange the house so the company would give a guarantee that it would do proper work. President of the board. J. A. Brasie stated that something would have to be done, as the other furnace is out of kilter and it had been hard work to keep it together for a year past. J. D. Young moved it be left to the board to provide the proper furnace, or heating and ventilating apparatus. Carried.

O. L. Billings moved to have nine months school J. D. Young moved to make it 12 months, someone, we think the same man that th ought last year that a few years ago a boy could learn as much in fixe or six months as they do now in a year, yelled out for 13 months. The motion for nine months school was finally put and carried about unanimously. On motion of C. W. Ingerson meeting adjourned.

The meeting was slimly attended, the first ballot for officers showing but 23 present, while the last ballot showed 35 voters several having come late. Those who cpuld have come and did not of course are not in a very good position to find fault with the action of those present. It would have looked better if the meeting had not voted to elect officers by a plurality vote, and we give it as OUR opinion that it would have conformed to the law to have allowed them chosen by a majority vote. Though every man had a majority anyway in this case.

County Cullings.

The Board of equalization met at Buffalo, July 20, and established the following basis on which to assess Wright county property:

Horses one year old $18; horses two years old, $33; horses three years old and over, $60; cattle one year old, $5; cattle two years old $8; cows $12; oxen $25; all others $18; sheep $1.50; hogs $2; wagons and carriages, township, $14, villages $16; sewing and knitting machines $8; watches and clocks, township $2, villages $4; organs $25; pianos $80.

The Commissioners held a meeting at Buffalo, on Monday July 13, when they voted not to grant the petition of John Jacobs and others dividing Rockford school district; appropriated $50. to Albion for ditching; filed reports of register of deeds and clerk of court; Auditor has no receipts from Jany 1 to July 1; auditing boards report filed; agents for County claims must hereafter have written authority; school text books agents must settle with county attorney; $100. allowed Swan Extrand estate for release of damages; change of school district from 99 to 36 asked was granted; Superintendent of schools to sell all text books for cash; $50. granted Monticello, road; $60. Albion and Annandale road; $100. French Lake road; $150. Cornnia and Maple Lake road; $200. Rockford bridges. Estimate of county expense for next year $22,400. County funds on hand $50,206.09; A. G. Lane was allowed to settle for text books burned for $30. abatements of tax granted.

J. S. Huber, Henry Bressler, John Henry, Patrick Bannon, Swedish Mission church, of Delano, Anna J. Coolen at $400., Thomas Hellier, for 1891, Roberts & Leveas Peter Johnson.

The following were rejected:

C. W. Bonniwell, M. A. O'Hair, W. H. Landis.

The list of personal taxes of the year of 1890 returned by the sheriff as uncollectable was ordered canceled.

The chairman of the Democratic county committee, William Quinn is not dead, but only absorbed in the Agricultural business. If he is as active in the political campaign of '92 as he is in the McCormick Reaper business now, all competitors will have to hustle to keep in the field.

The EAGLE favored its readers last week with quite a lengthy editorial of a political nature, quite an innovation for the better. But, they are exultant over the fact that binding twine is cheaper than last year. Why not? Did not Senator Davis ably advocate the taking off of the tariff? Did not his colleagues hear to him enough to make a reduction? And if they had done as he advised taken it all off would not farmers be able to leave several more dollars in their pockets on coming for twine with last year's prices, in their hands, finding twine at free trade prices?

That's right EAGLE whenever you see a chance where the tariff has been reduced or taken off and things have been made cheaper thereby give us a boost. There is sugar quinine and a few others perhaps you could say a little about them being cheaper because on the free list.

GREENWOOD.

Miss. Sophia Conzet arrived here on the 16th for a short visit, at home, from Round Prairie Todd County where she had been teaching two terms of school. But she became tired of her name and left for Minneapolis on the 18th and having her name changed by Rev. Stowers on the 19th she returned to see her old Greenwood home on the 20th as Mrs. Walter Archibald. The future home will be at Serpent Lake near Deerwood Crow Wing Co. Minn. May their married life be a happy one.

TAKE NOTICE!

If you want to get good and cheap BINDING TWINE call on me, I have a large stock on hand at my office, in Delano. Prices best for the quality, west of Chicago.

The Principles of Jefferson.

Although in his time not called "a Democrat," yet the leader of what was then known as the Republican party, contending against Federal or strong government party, Thomas Jefferson was perhaps one of the best expounders of those principles now held by the Democratic party among all of those Revolutionary sages.

In his writings and official messages as President we find the most frequent allusions to and rigid application of them in the administration of public affairs, so that he has been called "the father of the Democratic party." It was peculiarly appropriate that he should do so, because, though early in the history of our Government yet, anti-democratic principles were already slowly creeping into the Administration of the elder Adams, so that it required vigorous opposition and determined application to bring the Government back once more to be administered in accordance with those pure principles of a representative democratic government.

In his inaugural address delivered to Congress on March 4th, 1801, the commencement as well of a new century as of a new era in our government, President Jefferson announced the following fundamental doctrines of democracy, which, he said, he deemed essential principles of our Government, which should guide him in its administration. He compressed them within the smallest possible compass, stating only the general principles, but not all their limitations:—

FIRST. Equal and exact justice to all men of whatever State or persuasion, religious or political.

THIRD. The support of the State governments in all their rights as the most competent administrators of our domestic concerns and the surest bulwarks against anti-republican tendencies.

FOURTH. The preservation of the General Government in its whole constitutional vigor as the sheet anchor of our peace at home and safety abroad.

FIFTH. A jealous care of the right of election by the people, a mild and safe corrective of abuses, which are lopped by the sword of revolution where peacable means are unprovided.

SIXTH. Absolute acquiescence in the decisions of the majority, the vital principles of republics, from which is no appeal but to force the vital principle and immediate parent of despotism.

SEVENTH. A well-disciplined militia, our best reliance in peace, and for the first moments of war, till regulars may relieve them.

EIGHTH. The supremacy of the civil over the military authority.

NINTH. Economy in the public expenses, that labor may be lightly burdened.

TENTH. The honest payment of our debts and the sacred preservation of the public faith.

ELEVENTH. Encouragement of agriculture and of commerce as its handmaid.

THIRTEENTH. Freedom of religion.

FOURTEENTH. Freedom of the Press.

SIXTEENTH. Trial by juries impartially selected.

"These principles," said Jefferson, "form the bright constellation which has gone before us and guided our steps through the age of revolution and reformation. The wisdom of our sages and the blood of our heroes have been devoted to their attainment. They should be the creed of our political faith, the text of civic instruction, the touchstone by which to try the services of those we trust; and should we wander from them in moments of error or alarm, let us hasten to retrace our steps and to regain the road which alone leads to peace, liberty and safety."

It is because Democrats believe every one of those fundamental principles to be true that they are Democrats.

THE TWO WORDS.

[FROM THE METHODIST HERALD.]

One day a harsh word, rashly said,
Upon an evil journey sped,
And like a sharp and cruel dart
It pierced a fond and loving heart;
It turned a friend into a foe,
And everywhere brought pain and woe.

A kind word followed it one day.
Flew swiftly on its blessed way;
It healed the wound, it soothed the pain,
And friends of old were friends again;
It made the hate and anger cease,
And everywhere brought joy and peace.

But yet the harsh word left a trace
The kind word could not quite efface;
And, though the heart its love regained,
It bore a scar that long remained;
Friend could forgive, but not forget,
Or lose the sense of keen regret.

Oh! if we would but learn to know
How swift and sure one word can go,
How would we weigh with utmost care
Each thought before it sought the air,
And only speak the words that move
Like white-winged messengers of love!

THE New York PRESS evidently thinks the protective system all right and argues that putting a higher tariff on goods cheapens them to the consumer. In a recent issue it claims that by raising the tariff on Golden Rod shirtings from 4 cents a yard to 4½ cents a yard cheapened the goods from 7½ to 6½ cents per yard. A short time ago they claimed that the placing of 5 cents per dozen tariff on eggs reduced the price nearly 2½ cents per dozen. But then they are trying to catch the working man in the east. This argument cannot be meant for western farmers who have eggs to sell. And if the prices of articles manufactured in this country are reduced won't these same men that make the goods have their wages reduced accordingly?

SOME of the members of the republican party persistently adhere to the exploded falacy that protection to home industries are still needed, and in the face of a large popular majority against the theory at the last election have placed Major McKinley of McKinley bill fame, in nomination for Governor of Ohio, to try his luck this fall. If he should be elected in this doubtful state of course he would be their nominee for President in 1892, and the protective theory the issue. Should he be defeated another man with another theory, possibly Blaine with reciprocity would be the cry of the despairing hosts. As a proof that the question is to be made an issue in Ohio we copy the following from the New York PRESS a leading Republican paper.

"Major McKinley's nomination meant that the Republicans of the great pivotal State are willing to do battle on the issue which, to the Republican party is a cardinal principle—the protection of American industry. It meant that the tin plate liar, and the pearl button liar, and the clothing liar, and all the rest of those who are never so happy as when proving to their own satisfaction that American ability and skill are of no account as compared with the ability and skill of the sixty-three cent foreigner, shall have a chance to submit that doctrine to American votes. The outcome will be awaited with greatest interest from one end of the Union to the other, for it cannot fail to have an important effect on the Presidential struggle of 1892. Major McKinley is a host in himself, but it is eminently a campaign in which every man is expected to do his duty, not for party alone, but for country; not for the defeat of the Democracy so much as for the independence of American labor. Above all things let it not be forgotten that union is necessary to success."

When it is necessary to call everybody that don't agree with them "liar" it appears to us they are hard up for argument. And as this is an educational campaign argument and proofs and not epithets and assertions should be given the people by such moulders of public opinion.

SUNDAY REFORMS.

The New York gentleman who is engineering the movement for the enforcement of Sunday laws, in his addresses, is inclined to disparage New England on this line. If there is basis for this, the change must have come in recent years. Adults who spent their youth in that part of the country have recollections of a rigidity of public and private demeanor on Sunday that they have not found elsewhere. It is observed that in two of the principal cities of New England quite recently there have been controversies over phases of the subject with results that must afford the gentleman high gratification. In Portland the city council provided for a Sunday evening concert in the open air by a band. This at once convulsed the pulpits and stirred up a tumult—such, pehaps, as has been witnessed in a locality not far away of late. Invective flowed from sacred desks and vigilance committees were put on duty. It is not related that the militia was called out, but the "concord of sounds" no longer vexes the esthetic ear on Sunday evening. It may be noted here that, as much as has been alleged of municipal laxity in St. Paul in Sunday constraints, the only musical exhibitions tolerated in the outer courts on Sunday have been directed by the Salvation Army and the Y. M. C. A. In Boston, also it is stated that almost entire success has attended the efforts to close the avenues to bibulous indulgence on Sunday. The rear, side and all other doors to saloons have been rendered unavailable. The statutes there are not more contributory to this attainment than in this state.—St. Paul Globe.

Grover "Sandwiched."

From the New York Press we learn that Grover Cleveland has been tendered a reception, which was no small affair, at his new home Sandwich, Barnstable County, Massachusetts. Speeches were made by a number of prominent individuals. Among them the Ex-President himself, who, after some remarks directed to his new neighbors, the large majority of whom he claimed are in a bad state of delusion politically, gave his views as follows:

ON THE RESPONSIBILITIES OF A PRESIDENT.

I must remember that you have not only kindly spoken of me as your neighbor, but have also referred to me as an ex-President. I have never failed to be profoundly sensible of the generosity and confidence of my countrymen in making me the receipent of the greatest honor that can be bestowed upon any man, but what I remember most vividly in connection with the great office of President are its responsibilities and the labor and anxiety attending an attempt to do the work which the people had intrusted to me. The impress made upon the mind and heart of one who stands daily face to face with the American people, charged with the pretoction of their rights and the advancement of their varied interests, can never be effaced, and scarcely gives room for the gratification naturally supposed to attach to high and exalted place. I am led to mention in this connection as a spur to official labor and as a sign of political health the watchfulness of the people and their exactions from the chosen representative to whom they have confided their highest trust. If they are exacting and critical, sometimes almost to the point of injustice, this is better than popular heedlessness and indifference concerning the conduct of public servants.

It has always seemed to me that beyond the greatness of the office and the supreme importance of its duties and responsibilities, the most impressive thing connected with the Presidency is the fact that, after its honor has been relinquished and after its labor and responsibility are past, we simply see that a citizen whom the people had selected from their ranks to do their bidding for a time and to be their agent in the discharge of public duty has laid aside the honor and the work of the highest office in the world and has returned again to the people, to resume at their side the ordinanary duties which pertain to every day citizenship. Here he is, or should be, subject to the same rules of behavior which apply to his fellow countrymen, and should be accorded the same fair and decent treatment unless he has in some way forfeited it.

But it must be admitted that our people are by no means united in their ideas concerning the place which our ex-President ought to occupy or disposition which should be made of them. Of course the subject would be relivered of all uncertainty and embarrassment if every President would die at the end of his term. This does not seem, however, to meet the views of those who under such an arrangement would be called on to do the dying and so some of them continue to live, and thus perpetuate the perplexity of those who barden themselves with plans for their utilization or disposition.

A very amusing class among these anxious souls make us useful by laying upon our shoulders all sorts of political conspiracies. If they are to be believed, we are constantly engaged in plotting for our own benefit and advancement, and are quite willing, for the sake of reaching our ends, not only to destroy the party to which we belong, but to subvert popular liberty and utterly uproot our free American institutions. Others seem of the opinion that we should be utilized as orators at county fairs and other occasions of all sorts at all sorts of places. Some think we should interfere in every political contest and should be constantly in readiness to express an opinion on every subject of a political character that anybody has the ingenuity to suggest. Others still regard it as simply dreadful for us to do these thing and are greatly disturbed every time an ex-President ventures to express an opinion on any subject. Not a few appear to think we should simply exist and be blind, deaf and dumb the remainder of our days.

The American Petroleum Industry.

Bulletin No. 76, on the production of petroleum, has been prepared by Mr. Jos. D. Weeks, special agent in charge of statistics relating to petroleum and natural gas, under the supervision of Dr. David T. Day, special agent in charge of the Division of Mines and Mining, of the Census Office. The statistics show that petroleum was produced in eleven States in 1889. The total production is shown to be 34,820,306 barrels, of 42 gallons each, valued at $26,554,052, as follows:

	Barrels.
Pennsylvania and New York	21,486,403
Ohio	12,471,995
West Virginia	358,269
Colorado	316,476
California	147,027
Indiana	32,758
Kentucky	5,400
Illinois	1,460
Kansas	500
	34,820,306

Mr. Robert P. Porter, Superintendent of Census, says that the returns show that of the total product of petroleum, 109,801 barrels were disposed of for lubricating, 12,330,813 for fuel, and 22,379,602 for illuminating purposes. Nearly the entire amount produced in California, Indiana, and Ohio was used for fuel, while nearly the entire amount produced in Colorado, New York, Pennsylvania, and West Virginia was used for illuminating purposes.—Scientific American.

Bosses Quay and Dudley are among common workers in the Republican ranks now, having resigned from the National Committee.

Democratic Iowa.

J. B. Weaver, Jr., of Des Moines, is at the West. He is the son of his father, the illustrious mugwump who ran for president on the greenback ticket in 1880. The junior Weaver is a successful lawyer and a quiet and modest gentlemen— popular in the society of the capital city of Iowa.

"Really, I can't tell you anything of interest," said he to THE TIMES man, "for, you know, Im neither a politician nor a traveler. The campaign in Iowa is waxing warm just at present and both parties are confident of success. I don't profess to know anything about the situation, but I'll venture the prediction that Gov. Boies will be re-elected."

FROM MRS. VALESH.

Her Lecture Tour in New York State.

Mrs. Eva McDonald Valesh is now lecturing in Western New York under the auspices of the National Farmers' Alliance. She is an excellent letter writer, and to a friend in Minneapolis has written of the little town of Belmont, which she is making her headquarters. She says:

"Under ordinary circumstances I would vote this country the best on earth. I am in Alleghany county. It is a hilly country, a spur of the Alleghanies extending down here: but the hills are covered with groves and pastures and the fields sprinkled with daisies and buttercups. It is so like my childhood's home (in Maine) that I seem to go back to those days. It seems to me I shall never be content to live on the prairies again.

"The people here haven't been awake for thirty years; they lead a regular Rip Van Winkle existence. Everything about the place is so quaint and old. They are very kind and do all they can to make time pass pleasantly for strangers.

"There is a bitter fight here between the old parties and the People's party. This is the county, next to New York City, which decides the State. I think the People's party will nominate a ticket, but the old parties are offering Alliance members positions on their ticket, and it is hard work to keep them in line.

"Jerry Simpson, Peffer, Polk, Weaver and all the celebrities stray into this country occasionally, and I have an opportunity to compare notes with them. They encourage me and tell me to keep on in the good work—so I'm still at it."

The letter is a private one, but on account of her many friends it is given. Mrs. Valesh expects to be absent for several months.—Daily News.

CORRESPONDENCE

ANNANDALE.

Mr. Higgins officiated, morning and evening in the M. E. Church to unusually large audiences and the Rev. Mr. Parsons who is stopping at the "Longworth Retreat," on the east shore of Clearwater Lake, and holds Episcopal morning services in the Chapel there, gave us a discourse in the afternoon which was also well attended and at the close gave notice that he would hold services here on future Sabbath afternoons.

When we announced, last week, work had commenced on S. H. McGuire's new store building, we were a little premature. Sam says he did not intend to make a liar of us but his workmen came back on him and failed to put in an appearance, but they are all right now and the work is progressing.

A. B. Mathews has recently painted up his hardware store and tin shop giving the building a tasty and imposing appearance.

Mrs. Andrew Wenzel and young daughter, on driving out of the village with a covered buggy, last Tuesday evening, the horse took fright near the house of Mrs. Elizabeth Kurz, ran, threw the ladies out, cleared themselves from the carriage and went home. The carriage is ready for repairs, but, fortunately, the ladies were only slightly injured.

Mr. J. S. Rennie and Sam H. McGuire left for the cities Wednesday morning, presumably on business as they are not apt to go for anything else.

The ladies of the M. E. Church gave an Ice cream social at the residence of Wm. Ponsford, Esq. last Tuesday evening, which was well attended, especially by the young gentlemen of the village.

The editor of the Post, having tired of his own cooking now takes his meals at the restaurant of Oleus Nyberg and is delighted with the change.

James Erickson of saloon fame and Miss Selma Johnson, daughter of Benjamin Johnson of French Lake were married last week.

The Fair Haven Amateur Dramatic Club gave an entertainment in Cotton's Hall last Monday evening which is said to have been quite entertaining and afforded a good deal of amusement for the audience.

Jim Erickson is finishing off the upper story of his saloon for a residence, now that he has got him a wife.

There appears to be considerable sickness in this vicinity as Dr. Ridgway is kept on the ride most of the time.

LORETTO.

O. W. Jones shipped a car load of binders to this station last Tuesday, and has three experts here setting them up.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, July 27, 1891

The Harrison crowd were badly stampeded by the publication in this correspondence last week of the fact that the Blaineites had, in the slang of the day "got onto" their scheme of making Mr. Blaine too ill, in the newspapers, to think of being a candidate next year, and denials have been the order of the day ever since, but the Blaine fellows are by no means satisfied with denials, because they have in their possession a number of republican papers which printed Washington specials supposing them to be sent by "Lige" Halford's protege and therefore to be not only true but to be strictly in accordance with the sentiment of the administration, or rather its head and they refuse to believe that it is a mere coincidence that these papers are all anti-Blaine sheets. They don't think the excuse that "Lige's" protege was out of town and that these anti-Blaine specials were sent by a substitute is a satisfactory one. The oddest part of this "comedy of errors" is that these super-serviceable Harrison men have offended the man they were trying to help and they have been sharply lectured, by proxy, by Mr. Harrison, who however much he may fear Blaine doesn't approve of this method of disposing of him. The whole affair is furnishing no end of amusement for democrats.

It is now stated at the State Department that the arbitrators in the Behring sea controversy will shortly be appointed, an agreement having been reached between the department and Sir Julian Pauncefote, the British Minister, and the papers sent to Mr. Harrison.

A gentleman from Texas, who although prominent in that State is so modest that he doesn't wish his name mentioned, has, by a few words more or less carelessly spoken, given those interested in the Speakership contest something to think about. He said: "There is considerable pressure being brought to bear upon Gov. Hogg to persude him to call an extra session of the legislature. He has given no intimation of his intentions, but if he calls the extra session one of its duties will be to elect a United States Senator, and I rather think that Representative Mills would be elected although a combination of the other aspirants, among whom are the Governor and Mr. Chilton, who was so promptly named by the Governor as successor to Senator Reagan, might result in his defeat". If the legislature of Texas should meet in extra session any time before next December it is certain that some very strong democratic influence from outside of that State would be brought to bear to get Mr. Mills elected Senator, because that would remove him from the Speakership contest, and a number of other gentlemen are ready and willing to go into a good natured catch-as-catch-can scramble for the votes that have been pledged to Mr. Mills for Speaker, which would be released by his election to the Senate.

Representative Oates, of Alabama, who is here on business, loses no opportunity to warn the Southern democracy of the danger which he thinks menaces it in the Farmer's Alliance. He said: "There are certain men who have joined hands with the Alliance simply with a desire to advance their personal interests and pull down every man who has gained any political prominence. Unless the democrats of the South come to some understanding and determine to live up to the principles of the democratic party, the Alliance in its efforts to dominate that section may capture Alabama, Georgia and the two Carolinas".

It caused little surprise here to learn that Secretary Foster will become a candidate for the Senate,—in case the republicans elect the legislature in Ohio this year, as it has been known for some time that the administration influence would be thrown against Foraker.

The Spanish minister hurriedly returned to Washington this week from Cape May where his family are now staying, and there is an unverified rumor that there is a hitch somewhere regarding the reciprocity agreement with Spain, which for some reason N. H. Harrison has never yet made public. The usual mysterious silence is preserved at the department and the minister will say nothing further than that he was called to Washington by important business.

It is extremely difficult just now to find a cabinet officer in Washington; they flit in one day and out the next and are more intent upon having a good time than in attending to the business of the Government.

Under the reorganization of the Postoffice department just completed the First Assistant Postmaster General will attend to many things that have been looked after by Mr. Wanamaker and that gentleman will have more time to look after his private business, in order that he may be in a position to make a large campaign contribution next year. This is reform!

MORMON enterprise has outcropped once more in the occupation by refugees from Utah of the fertile Sonora valley of Mexico, in which are situated inestimable deposits of coal and precious ore. A railroad under Mormon auspices is being built to afford a northern outlet, and it is expected that in time the majority of American Mormons will find homes thereabout.

TELEGRAPHY without wires is said to have been accomplished in England. Mr. Preece, the head electrician of the postal system, succeeded in establishing communication across the Solent to the Isle of Wight, and telegraphed also across the River Severn without wires, merely using earth plates at a sufficient distance apart. It is now proposed to make a practical use of this system in communicating with lightships.

THE usual signature of Mrs. Jefferson Davis is "V. Jefferson Davis." It was explained by some writer not long ago that the V. stood for the French word widow, and that the signature as written by her was the lady's own conceit for paying homage to her distinguished husband's name. That this writer was partly wrong is shown by the signature in the reply made to the request that she designate Richmond as the final burial place of Mr. Davis. This reply is signed "Varina Jefferson Davis."

IN two-thirds of a century but one man has been renominated for the vice presidency. He was Richard Mentor Johnson, put up with Van Buren in 1840. He was defeated. Johnson was one of the most striking and picturesque characters in his time. He had been a gallant officer in the war of 1812, and had served in both branches of congress for many years before reaching the vice presidency. Socially and politically he stood high in his state, Kentucky, and in the country at large.

THE annual coffee crop of the world is estimated at over eleven billion pounds, worth at first hands $1,35,000,000. This enormous quantity is grown in lands between the parallels of thirty degrees north and thirty degrees south latitude, mainly in British India and the neighboring islands, in Liberia and other parts of Africa, in the West Indies, Mexico, Central America and Brazil. The domestic consumption of the United States amounts to 561,132,100 pounds, which is valued here at $72,140,000, and of which 90 per cent. comes from countries geographical belonging to this continent.

A BULLETIN in regard to the distribution of population in accordance with altitude has been issued by the census bureau. It appears that about one-sixth of the people of the country live less than 100 feet above the sea level, namely along the sea boards and the low lands of the south. More than three-fourths of the entire population live below the altitude of 1,000 feet, while below 5,000 feet are found 99 per cent. of the population. The population engaged in commerce and manufacture is nearly all found below the elevation of 500, and between the elevations of 500 and 1,500 are producing classes.

MR. GLADSTONE, in a letter intimating that he would be unable to attend a liberal meeting, says: "We, in our affliction, are deeply sensible of the mercies of God. He gave us for fifty years a most precious son. He has now only hidden him for a very brief space from the sight of our eyes. It seems a violent transition from such thoughts to the arena of political contention; but the transition may be softened by the conviction we profoundly hold that we, in the first and greatest of our present controversies, work for the honor, well being and future peace of our opponents not less than our own."

Crop Reports.

ST. PAUL, Minn., July 29.—Grasshoppers are ruining the oat prospects in twenty counties along the Ohio and Indiana border line, and the devastation is most marked in the region around the headwaters of the Wabash, Miami and Maumee rivers. The crop is ruined by the small green hopper on farm after farm, and many growers, alarmed at the ravages of the pest, cut their oats green, but the hoppers followed it into the shock and are now in the corn.

Threshing began around Northfield, Minn., yesterday, and shipments of winter wheat will be made as soon as cars can be secured. Grain crops in the county of which Winnebago City is the center, promise well. Barley is largely cut and stacked. Harvest has begun at Slayton. Some fields of wheat will yield from thirty to thirty-five bushels per acre.

Wheat stacking has been commenced around Hokah, Minn., and corn is doing well. Crops are maturing finely in the vicinity of Lake City, and there will be a good general average yield of excellent quality.

Binders were started in some pieces of wheat near Howard Lake, Minn., on the 28th.

Grasshoppers are damaging the oat crop in the Central part of Iowa. About Waterloo it is estimated that they will lessen the yield by ten bushels per acre. They are the common native species.

The hail storm which visited the vicinity of Hot Springs, S. Dak., on the 27th, covered a vast scope of country and reached the agricultural portion of Fall River county, west and south of Elrichs, the very best portion of the farming country, where the storm covered a strip of country six miles in width and literally pounded all vegetation into the ground. Previous to this the farmers of this section, for the first time in two years were indulging in high hopes of this year harvesting bounteous crops.

Some fields of wheat will be harvested around Ordway, S. D., this week. Brown county will be short 100,000 bushels of grain by hail storms, but the yield will be considerable more than was expected ten days ago.

A hail storm extending over about six hundred acres passed a half-mile north of Ardock, N. D., the 27th, totally ruining the wheat, oats and barley.

FIFTY WERE KILLED.

Trains on a French Railroad Collide and Two Score and Ten Deaths Result—Three Lives Lost by a Disaster Near Dayton, O.

PARIS, July 27.—A collision between excursion trains occurred at St. Mande Sunday night in which fifty persons were killed and three carriages wrecked. Both trains were returning from a musical festival at Fontenoy. The second train crashed into the preceding train before the latter had left the St. Mande station. The guard van and the three rear carriages of the fast train were wrecked and caught fire from the gas. The injured occupants were shrieking in despair and the other passengers hurriedly left the train and assisted in extricating the victims. Soldiers also aided the fire brigade to quench the flames and rescue the sufferers. The work of helping the injured was carried on by torchlight. A dispatch from St. Mande dated 1 o'clock a. m. says that 100 persons were injured and that forty-nine dead bodies have been recovered, including those of two children who were mangled beyond recognition. Most of the dead victims are legless, their limbs having been crushed off through the jamming together of the seats. Fully 20,000 onlookers are at the scene. Many relatives of the victims are assembled at the railway station, and heartrending scenes are witnessed as the victims are extricated from the wreck. The driver and fireman of the second train were burned alive. It is reported that the station-master has gone mad and decamped.

DISASTER IN OHIO.

DAYTON, O., July 27.—The wreck at Middletown, near this city, in which three were killed and thirty wounded, on the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton railroad Saturday night, is one of the worst that has ever happened in this vicinity. The National Cash Register Company had given its employes an excursion to Woodsdale, near Hamilton, and a train of sixteen coaches left here at 8 o'clock in the morning. Several other trains took passengers to Woodsdale and at 7 o'clock in the evening, when it was time to return, about 2,000 people boarded the train. The day had passed merrily and everybody was laughing and chatting when the train reached Middletown at 8 o'clock on its way to this city. Some one had turned the air-brakes on for a joke and the engine was puffing and wheezing to pull the heavy load with the brakes on. Pretty soon a drawbar broke and the train was stopped on the siding at Middletown for repairs. The train was No. 8, with Conductor Glance and Engineer Harry Brewer in charge. Several flagmen were sent back to flag No. 44 freight, with Engineer Schwind and Conductor Sam King in charge As soon as the repairs were made the passenger excursion pulled out on the main track to make a start. The flagman started on a run to catch the train and just then freight 44 dashed around the bend. Vainly did the brakemen signal the freight train to stop. On it came and dashed into the rear of the passenger, wrecking three cars. The rear coach was tossed to one side, the next one was splintered, and the third stood on end by the freight engine. A scene of blood and carnage followed. Shrieks of men and women rent the air. Wild confusion prevailed for a time, and soon citizens of Middletown and the excursionists who were not hurt lent a hand in rescuing the dead and injured. A wrecking train and two relief trains with physicians and assistants were sent out from here and two trains from Cincinnati. The rescuers succeeded in getting all of the wounded out of the wreck and bringing them to this city at 8 o'clock Sunday morning. The dead came on a later train at 10 o'clock. A thousand people thronged the union depot anxious to see and hear of friends and relatives. Women cried for children, husbands and sweethearts, and the scene at the depot was a sad one. At length all the wounded who could walk were taken to the hospital or to their homes. The killed were Maria Frier, William Matthews and Frank Simonton, all of Dayton.

VOLCANOES IN CALIFORNIA.

Fire and Smoke Issuing from 3,000 Spouts of Various Sizes.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., July 27.—The San Diegan publishes a descriptive account by Col. I. K. Allen, a well-known engineer, of phenomena in what is known as the volcanic region of Cocopah mountains, situated 65 miles southwest of Yuma in lower California. Col. Allen says that there are over 3,000 active volcanoes there, one-half of which are small cones, measuring 10 or 12 feet at the base. The remaining half are from 5 to 40 feet at the base and 15 to 25 feet in height. The whole volcanic region is encrusted with sulphur. One peculiar feature of the region is the lake, which is a quarter of a mile in length and one-eighth of a mile in width. It is seemingly bottomless and the water is hot and salty and of a jet-black color.

EARTHQUAKE AT EVANSVILLE

EVANSVILLE, Ind., July 27.—At 8:30 Sunday evening Evansville experienced a severe earthquake shock. The entire city was thrown into a panic, congregations in all the churches rose to their feet in the midst of the service and ran pell mell into the street, women and children screaming and fainting. At the hotels the greatest excitement prevailed. Guests rushed from their rooms into the corridors, then into the office and finally on to the streets. The duration of the shocks was scarcely more than three seconds, but it was long enough to unhouse nearly every man, woman and child in Evansville.

The noise accompanying the disturbance was really the most panicky part of the whole performance. It was loud and indescribable. It was not a report like a cannon, but rather like crashing of a big tree in a heavy wind.

At the First Baptist church Dr. Heagle had just given out his text when there was a rumble, a shock and the building groaned. The congregation was thoroughly terrified and the church was empty before one could count five.

James Seiffert and wife and two ladies were driving along Cherry street in a carriage when the shock came. The people pouring out of McFarland chapel frightened the horse and a runaway resulted. All the occupants of the vehicle were more or less injured, but none fatally. At first nobody appeared to be certain of just what was the matter. On Sycamore street, near the chamber of commerce, some one of the excited throng there cried: "The courthouse." Immediately there was a headlong rush in the direction of that structure. Its foundation had been said to be weak and everybody seemed to conclude that the massive pile had collapsed.

The shock was felt more severely in the southwest end of the city. Part of the side wall of the Stock Yard hotel was shaken off and the window lights in several houses in the western section of the town were broken. This is the first shock felt in this vicinity for several years. It was much more pronounced than the last.

The distinct report accompanying the shock led many to suppose that a powder magazine on the outskirts of the city had let go. The vibration at Henderson, 10 miles below here, was very violent. Chairs were overturned and several buildings are said to have been wrecked. Reports from other outlying cities tell of no serious damage. Mount Vernon, Newburg and other southern Indiana points and places in northern Kentucky experienced stronger earthquake shocks than those felt in Evansville.

AWFUL BUTCHERY.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., July 27.—Five miles from Paris, Ky., lived Nathan Conway, 61 years old, his wife, about the same age, their sons, Charley and William, 33 and 28 respectively, William's wife and three children and two nieces, Miss Florence and Lucy Leager. As they were all sitting on the veranda Sunday morning a negro named Craig, who had no fixed home, came up and asked for a drink of water. It was given him. He thereupon lifted a rusty scythe blade and asked if it was not a good knife. Charley Conway nodded assent and the negro throwing down the cup of water struck him with the knife, splitting his skull. The rest of the family ran into the house. Craig continued to hack the young man till he thought him dead. He then attacked the father, who had returned, and killed him. Then the mother coming up had her head split open and instantly died. After the negro had insanely hacked her body in a dozen places he attacked William Conway, cutting him in the head and on the body as he ran. He had just struck Conway to the ground when G. W. Bailey, a neighbor, attracted by the screams, came up and shot Craig twice with buckshot. This seemed to have no effect, but other neighbors had come up and a young man shot Craig with a pistol. Craig ran, and, falling beside a haystack, died in a few minutes from the effects of the buckshot wounds. The pistol ball had glanced around his head.

The Conways were from Maysville originally, but came to Bourbon eighteen months ago from T. G. Meggin's farm, near Cynthiana. They were orderly citizens and were held in the highest esteem. Craig said he had killed seven persons and intended to kill that whole family. He is known to have killed his mother-in-law. He has always been known as a desperate fellow, and was a brother of Charlie Craig, now under sentence of death in Cincinnati.

GREAT FIRE AT DALLAS.

Property to the Value of $200,000 Destroyed by Flames.

ST. LOUIS, July 27.—A brief dispatch from Dallas, Tex., says: A fire broke out in J. B. Cowan & Co.'s big liquor house on Commerce street, shortly after midnight Friday, and spread so rapidly to the Benbrook School Furniture Company's place, the Brewers' Storage Company's warehouse and Wolfe and Company's cotton gin. Five hundred bales of cotton in the gin belonging to Sauger Brothers was destroyed. The loss is placed at $200,000.

A Broken Brake Causes a Panic on a Scranton Electric Car.

SCRANTON, Pa., July 27.—A street car on the Dunmore electric line, coming to this city from Laurel Hill park late Friday night, became unmanageable. Two girls, frightened by the efforts of the motor man to stop the car, jumped. One of them, Nettie Morgan, living in Hyde Park, broke her neck and was instantly killed. The other girl, Stella Hughes, suffered internal injuries believed to be fatal. Several others received slight injuries in jumping, but those remaining on the car escaped uninjured. A broken brake was the cause of the trouble.

A Counterfeiter Caught.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., July 27.—William A. Teal was arrested Sunday by Deputy United States Marshals Conway and Moor in the act of making counterfeit dollars. The officers had watched the house all night and then concluded to enter. A sister of Teal blocked the hallway and sought to restrain Conway by throwing her arms about his neck, but he threw her aside, burst in the door and found Teal with the mold in his hands. He has only been out of the penitentiary since May and has served two terms of two years each and one of five years for counterfeiting. He is 40 years of age.

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS

A Merchant Becomes Insane.

D. L. Stibbison, one of the most prominent merchants of Northfield, was taken to the Rochester asylum for the insane. He had been in a doubtful condition for some months, but lately had become violently and dangerously insane, and for the safety of his family and others with whom he came in contact it was thought best to commit him to an asylum. He was the proprietor of a cigar factory and did a large business.

Who Was Davis?

A foot-race was run at Northfield between Howard Watson and a stranger who had assumed the name of Frank Davis for the occasion. A stake of $50 was put up for the winner, and about two score of men drove out to the suburbs to witness the race. The result was the usual one in cases of this kind. Watson was simply outclassed. Davis ran away from Watson. Several hundred dollars changed hands on the result.

Plenty of Government Land.

It has been ascertained at the Crookston land office that there are yet in that district 730,243 acres of government land subject to entry and 523,680 acres unsurveyed. In only eight counties in the state there is public land enough to give about 7,000 settlers a farm each. And of the vast area of 53,459,840 acres in the state not over one-ninth is occupied as yet.

Rain and Hail.

A severe rain and hailstorm passed over a portion of Nicollet county, between Courtland and Nicollet, doing considerable damage to grain. Lightning struck buildings belonging to Augustus Bode, entailing a loss of $2,000. The storm pursued a very narrow path. At New Ulm no rain fell, while two miles away were the heaviest showers of the season.

Was Not Cured.

Andrew Behrens, of Lake Benton, who was sent home from the asylum at St. Peter some months ago, went insane and started out with a shotgun. He emptied both barrels, one aimed at some children and the other at a man in the street. Fortunately he hit no one, and was secured and disarmed. He was returned to St. Peter.

Saved by a Button.

At Granite Falls Night Watchman Robert Henderson was fired at five times by a tramp he was trying to arrest. One bullet struck him in the breast and no doubt would have killed him had it not struck a button on his clothing. He succeeded in arresting his man, in whose possession he found a set of burglar tools.

Burned to the Ground.

The Swan Lake mill at Nicolett was burned to the ground the other afternoon. Fire broke out at noon while the men were at dinner, and before it was discovered it was beyond control. The fire originated in a hot box on the conveyor. The loss would probably amount to $50,000, and was well covered by insurance.

Declared Off.

The strong manifested opposition in St. Paul to the Fitzsimmons-Hall fight, coupled with the declaration of Gov. Merriam that he would call out the militia to aid the sheriff in preventing it, resulted in the managers of the affair issuing an address declaring the contest postponed indefinitely.

Flames in a Flouring Mill.

The flour mill at Minneapolis owned by Christian Bros. & Co. was damaged by fire to the extent of $75,000. The cause of the fire was unknown, but it originated in the dust room, which was destroyed. The main damage was caused by water. The mill had a capacity of 2,500 barrels daily.

DISTRESSING ACCIDENT.

A New York Minister Takes His Family for a Drive—The Vehicle Struck by a Train at a Crossing and Four Members of the Party Are Killed—Two Others Fatally Hurt.

ELMIRA, N. Y., July 28.—A peculiarly distressing accident occurred Monday evening about 6 o'clock at a crossing of the Erie road near Eldridge park in which four persons were killed and two so seriously injured that death is expected at any moment. Rev. Wellington White, whose residence is on Grove street, started out to drive, having with him Mrs. White, their three children, Hattie Hastings, a daughter of a neighbor, and Susie McCarthy, a nurse girl. Approaching the crossing of the railroad a freight train which had been cut in two to allow entrance to the park occupied the nearer track. Seeing and hearing nothing indicative of danger, Mr. White drove between the halves of the freight train upon the other track just in time to be struck by the Erie passenger train, No. 24, from the west. Mr. White, his daughter Lillian, aged 9; Hattie Hastings, aged 9, and Susie McCarthy, aged 12, were instantly killed. Mrs. White and a child 2 years old received fractures of the skull and terrible bruises. They cannot recover. Rev. Wellington White was a clergyman who graduated at Amherst college and the New York Theological seminary, and had spent ten years in missionary work in China. He was at home on leave of absence.

DESIRE PEACE IN CHILI.

American Merchants Interested in Its Restoration — President Harrison Being Urged Once More to Offer the Services of this Country as a Mediator Between the Warring Factions.

WASHINGTON, July 28.—Renewed efforts are making to have the United States intercede in the Chilian civil war, and it is possible that Minister Egan will be again instructed to offer to mediate. His good offices have been employed with Balmaceda in behalf of some political prisoners, but since the bomb-throwing made futile the first mediation there has been no attempt to bring about a meeting of the contending factions. Merchants in New York and on the Pacific coast who are engaged in South American trade are now making urgent pleas for President Harrison to offer once more the services of this country in bringing about an understanding. It is said that W. R. Grace & Co., who practically represent the insurgents in getting supplies, are anxious to have some action taken.

GOOD FOR THE JEWS.

The Rumors of a Relaxation of Their Persecution in Russia Confirmed.

WASHINGTON, July 28.—Confirmation has been received of the news that the czar has relaxed the Jewish expulsion measures through the intercession of President Harrison. The modification applies not simply to the Jews intending to emigrate to this country but to the whole race in the Russian empire. The assurances given to this government were that in view of the approaching winter the czar would suspend the expulsions and in the meantime consult with his advisers as to the future policy. In the message announcing the intention of the czar reference is made to the friendly feeling now existing between the two countries and to the traditional uninterrupted friendship of Russia and the United States extending through more than half a century. There is also an expression of personal regard from the emperor to President Harrison.

A FATAL RIDE.

CHICAGO, July 28.—Little Arthur, the 9-year-old son of Manager Arthur Thomas, of "The County Fair," now playing at Hooley's, and nephew of Theodore Thomas, the famous musical director, was killed while exercising one of the theatrical company's horses. Mounted on the horse known as "Dude," the unfortunate youth in company with his father and another gentleman was riding along the Lake Shore drive when the animal ran away. The boy clung bravely to the reins for some distance, but finally slipped from the saddle. His foot caught in the stirrup and he was dragged for 2 blocks his head striking the pavement with every bound of the frightened horse. At last he fell by the roadside, and when the agonized father reached him he was dead, his body being frightfully mangled.

A VILLAGE IN ASHES.

MILWAUKEE, July 28.—The village of Blair, of about 400 inhabitants, in Trempealeau county, and one of the most flourishing on the Green Bay, Winona & St. Paul railroad, was almost entirely destroyed by fire Monday. It started about 11 a. m. in a closet of a dwelling over Kirtleson's general store, and burned every business place in the town within four hours, entailing a total loss of at least $150,000. The town had no fire protection and everything is built of wood, and a brisk wind was blowing. There was nothing to do but try to save what was possible, though the amount was inconsiderable. Ten or twelve families were left homeless, though there were no injuries or fatalities. Some of the individual losses are as high as $15,000.

BURNED TO DEATH

Two Boys Set Fire to a Barn and Perish in the Flames.

DAYTON, O., July 28.—A terrible calamity befell Frank Wetzell, aged 4 years, and August Young, aged 5, here Monday. The boys were playing in a stable on Fillmore street and they took some matches and went through the stable to the wagon shed in the rear. Here they made a bonfire, which quickly caught the hay and straw and cut off their exit. The fire department was called but could not save the buildings, and did not know the boys were there until taken out dead, burned to a crisp.

Are Farmers Holding Back Wheat?

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., July 28.—Figures compiled by the Northwestern Miller show the stock of wheat in private elevators of Minneapolis to be 2,671,000 bushels, and 16,000 less than last Monday. The total stock at Minneapolis and Duluth is 6,193,570 bushels, a decrease of 473,177 bushels for the week. The Market Record reports the stock of wheat in country elevators of Minnesota and the two Dakotas at 965,000 bushels, 254,000 less than a week ago. The aggregate stock in the northwest is thus made 9,156,570 bushels, a decrease of 727,177 bushels. A year ago the stock was 9,474,700.

HER TALENT.

She does not prate of Browning
Whose works I have not read.
There is no laurel crowning
Her shapely little head.
She is not versed in Schiller
And Goethe and the rest;
She has no store of "siller,"
As some, perchance, have guessed.

She knows no word of Dante
And his Italian crew;
She plays not "penny ante"
As rapid maidens do.
No more she knows of Spencer
Than of La Rochefoucauld;
On Darwin she is denser
Than any girl I know.

With Kant and Schopenhauer
Her speech she will not load,
But fortune other power
Upon her has bestowed.
Though Mill and Huxley tire her,
As she will frankly state,
Yet still I must admire her—
Her pumpkin pies are great.

THE WHITE DEVIL.

A Mexican Superstition and Its Interesting Origin.

One day as the freight train running from San Francisco to San Jose rumbled around the curve just outside of the city of San Jose, a white horse sprang on the track and raced down toward the town in front of the engine. For a mile the train did not gain on him, then the unequal footing of the cross ties and the pace began to tell on the white steed, and the engine crept slowly up to him. The engineer gave a few shrieks of the whistle to scare the horse from the track, but he kept right on in front, running with the speed of a racer, with his long tail streaming in a straight line behind him.

The engineer saw a stock gap in front half a mile away, and again pulled the whistle. The horse simply let out a few links and went on. The engineer got mad. He pulled the throttle open and went after the white phantom, at a thirty-miles-an-hour clip. He was a bare hundred feet behind the horse when the animal reached the stock gap and plunged in among the open ties and fell. The pilot struck him, ground the life out of him in an instant and then plowed into the dirt on the opposite side of the track. The engineer swore a few choice oaths and jumped out of the cab. The horse was as dead as a door nail and the engine had left the rails.

"Another suit for the company," said the conductor as he came up. "How did you do it, Jim?"

"Oh, I don't know," answered Jim in a surly way. "The brute got on the track and just stayed there till I struck him. He was possessed of the devil, I guess."

They had to send to San Jose for the wrecking engine to put the train back on the rail, and while they were waiting a Mexican rode along the road beside the track. He pulled up his broncho to see the wreck.

"Caramba, senor," he exclaimed, turning pale and trembling, "it es Vasquez' horse." And he mounted his pony as quickly as possible and sped off down the road.

"Who the deuce is Vasquez?" asked Jim. "From the way that Greaser got a rush on himself you'd think we'd killed a ghost."

"If that's Vasquez' horse as the Greaser sai1, you have killed a Mexican ghost," said the conductor, and he walked over and looked at the dead animal lying under the front wheels of the engine.

It was Vasquez' horse. The whole country knew it the next day. He was twenty years old and totally blind when he met his death in front of the freight train, and for ten years had roamed over the unoccupied land about the lower part of Santa Clara county free as a bird and feared by the Mexicans more than a lion. He was called by them the "white devil," and it was their belief that he was possessed of a soul mortgaged to the evil one—the soul of Vasquez. It is a strange tale that the old Mexican mothers tell of this white horse.

Vasquez was the most noted bandit of the early days of California. He bade defiance to the law, eluded the detectives and searching parties for years and killed and robbed half a hundred men. He roamed over the state of California from the north to the south, leaving desolation and death in his wake. He surrounded himself with a band of desperate Mexicans and terrorized entire communities. Lone travelers by day and by night were stopped on the road and relieved of their cash and often of their lives. A quiet village in the San Joaquin valley would be awakened at the dead of night by the rush of sounding hoof-beats. Timid men would pull the covers about their heads and shiver. Next day the principal store in the place would be found open, the safe robbed, valuable goods taken, and the guardian, if it had any, dead with a bullet in his head or a knife wound in his heart. Vasquez had been there.

One day the stage was rattling down the road from one of the mountain mines. The Wells-Fargo box was heavy with bullion and half a dozen armed guards sat in the coach. The driver sat on the box with a Winchester between his knees and chatted with another guard who sat beside him balancing a shotgun across his lap. They were talking of Vasquez. "They say he allers rides a white horse and dresses like a dandy," said the driver. "Wish't he'd jump ther gun-site stage onct when the boys is aboard."

Two horsemen dressed in the tinseled Mexican cavalier costume rounded a turn in the road just in front of the stage and came riding toward it. One of them bestrode a white horse. They cantered up. The man on the white horse went to the right and his companion to the left of the stage. Suddenly they reined up.

"Pardon, senor, will the senor give me a light for me cigarette?"

The driver good-naturedly pulled up and leaned over from his seat with the big cigar which he was smoking extended between his fingers. He was met with a snap shot straight in the brain and tumbled headlong into the dust. At the same instant the guard lurched and fell forward under the horses with a ball in his forehead. A dozen men sprang from the underbrush beside the road and shoved the muzzles of their rifles through the stage door on either side.

Taken by surprise, not a weapon was drawn by the guards. The strong box was lifted from the boot, the men inside were disarmed while the robbers' rifles stared them in the eyes, and the merry company, with many jokes about the dresses they would buy for their senoritas, mounted the horses that were led out of the woods and rode away, he on the white steed humming a bit of some old Spanish love song to the time of his horse's step.

It was a dreamy August afternoon in Southern California when the mayor of Los Angeles and a fellow official were driving along the old sand road through the Arroya Seco toward the town. Over the brow of a hill half a mile in front of them a group of horsemen appeared at a gallop. They swept down the hill and met the buggy of the mayor. The galloping horses were yanked back upon their haunches and a swarthy Mexican upon a white horse shoved a pistol in the mayor's face and said, with a show of his teeth in a smile: "Your money, senor."

The mayor thought it was a joke and laughed.

"Quick! quick!" said the horseman, as his weapon clicked. "I am Vasquez."

The mayor laughed again.

"Eef you don't believe me, senor, look."

He pointed back to the hill, and there appeared another group of horsemen riding at full tilt from the town.

"Quick!" said Vasquez. "I am no fool."

The mayor looked down the pistol barrel at the pair of black, glittering eyes that lined the sights, and put up his hands. He was lightened of his chamois bag of gold, as was his friend, and the bold robbers wheeled and were off at a run, the posse from the town riding up five minutes too late to catch them or to save the mayor's coin. The band escaped into the chaparral.

Vasquez made history in this way for five years and then was caught like a rat in a trap in a 'dobe house near the scene of the robbery of the mayor, and was shot down by a newspaper correspondent detailed to accompany the search party. He survived his wounds, was taken to San Jose, where one of his earliest and most atrocious murders had been committed, and there met his fate on the scaffold.

And now for the horse. Every time the robbers appeared one of them, the leader, would be mounted upon a white horse. That he had a world of speed was shown in the way that he would gallop away from the rest of the gang when they were pursued. The horse was hitched behind the house when Vasquez was shot. One of the capturing party tried to take him and was severely bitten for his cupidity. The horse broke away, went careering off toward the canyon where Vasquez had had his rendezvous and was lost to sight. Most people say he died in the mountains of starvation, but the Mexicans say no. They saw him again.

The night after Vasquez was hanged a white horse galloped up the street to the jail, stood a moment at the door and gave a neigh. The Mexicans heard in it a call to the dead Vasquez. There came no answer to the horse's challenge and he wheeled about and went as suddenly as he came. Then he turned bandit and followed Vasquez' old trails. Once in awhile a man would be found on the road with his body frightfully mutilated and his flesh bearing the marks of hoofs. Sometimes in the night a white horse would appear at the door of a Mexican cabin in some lonely spot and neigh. If no answer came he would be off like the wind, but if any man dared to show himself the horse would attack him with hoof and teeth and it was seldom that a victim escaped.

Time and again he was shot at, and one Mexican buck was foolhardy enough to try to rope him and met a horrible death. The horse bore a charmed life. He became almost as great a terror to the Mexicans as Vasquez had been to the rich Americans. If by chance a Mexican's pony got out of the corral and wandered off in search of grass the white horse would find him and enlist him. First he had one follower, then two, then half a dozen. No man could kill them and no man dared to attempt to capture them. With no loads upon their backs they were fleet as the wind and could outstrip the best horse with a rider. The Mexicans named the leader the "White Devil," and said that Vasquez lived again in his horse.

As the years went by and Vasquez became a memory, and his exploits the theme for children's stories, the White Devil lost his companions. His visits to the vicinity of the little towns became less and less frequent and then ceased altogether. At long intervals a Mexican would ride in with a report that he had seen the White Devil in some canyon among the hills. Even these reports ceased, and few Americans of the latter days in California had heard of him until the freight train killed the white horse. The Mexicans came for miles to look at him. All of them knew him, at least they said so, and they respected him sufficiently to look at his dead body from a distance.

When he was dragged from beneath the engine by the trainmen a horse doctor looked at him. He was a magnificent animal even in death, and the veterinary said that he had been stone blind for years.

Vasquez' deeds are history; the story of the White Devil is a Mexican superstition.—Detroit Free Press.

Not Afraid to Umpire.

"They tell me, parson, that you've consented to umpire the ball game this afternoon between the Squash Hollow Baptists and the Zion brotherhood. Is that so?"

"Dat's the Gospel trufe, sah."

"It strikes me that's rather a precarious position for one of your calling, isn't it?"

HOME HINTS AND HELPS.

—To remove discoloration of the hands brought about by peeling potatoes or other vegetables or fruits, use borax water.

—Colored cotton dresses, the appearance of which is injured by the use of starch, can be stiffened by wringing out of sweet milk.

—Corn Pie: With a sharp knife slice the grains from five ears of corn. Beat this in with three eggs, a pint of milk, tablespoonful of butter, and salt and pepper to taste. Pour into a pudding dish, and bake twenty-five minutes.

—Rose Jelly: One-half box of gelatine dissolved in cold water; then add a pinch of salt, two cupfuls of white sugar, one quart of mashed strawberries; place on ice until firm, turn into a pretty dish and serve with cake.—Boston Herald.

—Butter Scotch: One cup of molasses, two cups of sugar, one and one-half teaspoonfuls of soda, one teaspoonful vanilla, butter size of an egg. Boil without stirring until it hardens on a spoon. Pour out on buttered plates to cool. Add flavoring last.—Detroit Free Press.

—When sewing buttons on children's clothes where there will be much strain on the buttons, the danger of tearing the cloth out will be greatly lessened by putting a small button directly under the larger outside button. This applies, of course, only to buttons with holes through them.

—For protection against fire, the town of Stillwater, Kas., has a way that is quite a novel one. Every business man has a barrel of water in front of his store, which is so fixed that the bung can be easily knocked out, and in case of a fire the barrels can scon be centered in one place. At a fire there recently they were successful in confining the fire to one place.

—Deviled Partridges: Clean and divide in two for broiling three partridges, break the thigh-bone and broil them on a gentle fire. When well colored both sides, serve them on a hot dish and pour over two ounces of melted butter, a tablespoonful of chopped parsley, a pinch of pepper, cayenne, salt and the strained juice of a lemon, all well mixed together. Garnish with watercress or slices of lemon.—N. Y. Ledger.

—Excellent authority says that all large whitefish should be placed, for the purpose of boiling, in cold water, of which there should be only enough to cover the fish well, otherwise the skin is liable to crack. To every quart of water should be added a teaspoonful of salt. When it begins to boil remove the lid of the kettle and let it simmer very gently. Skim the water carefully. It will take about thirty minutes to boil a four-pound fish.—N. Y. World.

—Bouille-Abaisse: Chop three or four onions and a little garlic very fine; fry them in olive oil, and when a light brown add about three pounds of any nice, fresh fish you may choose, cut up in neat slices; also a few tomatoes scalded, peeled and sliced, salt and black and red pepper, thyme, bay leaf, parsley and enough water to cover the fish; put over a quick fire and boil fifteen or twenty minutes. Serve with toasted bread.—Chicago News.

—There is nothing that equals fresh buttermilk for removing tan, freckles, sunburn or moth spots, says the Ladies' Home Journal. It has the great advantage that it does not injure the skin, but renders it soft like a child's. Take a soft cloth or sponge and bathe the face, neck and arms thoroughly with buttermilk before retiring for the night; then wipe off the drops lightly. In the morning wash it thoroughly and wipe dry with a crash towel. Two or three such baths will take off all the tan and freckles. It will keep the hands soft and smooth.

—White Custard: Heat to the point of boiling a pint and a half of sweet cream; meanwhile put the whites of four eggs in a large bowl with two ounces of pulverized sugar and any flavor preferred; when the cream is hot stir it into the eggs without beating until the sugar is dissolved, and then bake the custards in cups set in a pan of water in a moderate oven. A sheet of thick brown paper should be laid over the tops of the cups to keep the surface of the custards white; they can be used either hot or cold in the cups in which they are baked.—Springfield Republican.

Gracefully Turned.

The ready and graceful wit of the Abbe de Voisenon once enabled him, in a truly discouraging social difficulty, "to pluck victory from defeat." His courageous effort to escape from an embarrassing situation certainly deserved success.

The abbe accepted an invitation of the Prince de Conti to dinner, but forgot the date, and at the dinner his chair was vacant. The next day a friend said to him:

"Monseigneur was very angry with you yesterday." The abbe felt that he had been remiss and attended the prince's next reception to offer a humble apology.

His highness, as soon as he perceived his discourteous guest, turned his back: But the undaunted abbe exclaimed:

"O monseigneur, you overwhelm me with gratitude. I had been told that you never more would have anything to do with me; but I am happy to see that I have been misinformed."

"How?" asked the prince.

"Your highness has turned your back upon me, and I know that that is not your custom before your enemies."—Youth's Companion.

LIFE IN CALIFORNIA IN 1849.

The Rough State of Society at That Early Day.

Life in California was at that time a wild romance. No words of mine can describe the scenes that were enacted during that chaotic period. Thousands of men, organized in bands or wholly disorganized, were constantly arriving from every part of the world and leaving for the diggings. Outlaws and professional gamblers opened saloons by the score at every point where men congregated. Money was scattered everywhere as if by the wind. Miners who had realized fortunes in a few days came down to Stockton, Sacramento and San Francisco to squander them in a night at the gambling-tables. Scarcely a woman was anywhere to be seen. All restraining influences of society were absent, and I can not find an expression better suited to the case than "pandemonium on a frolic."

As there were no wives, there could be no homes or families. A few stores had been hastily put up along the shore, made of rough boards or canvas, and all of them were doing an enormous business. The rest of the village consisted of shanties or tents used for restaurants and saloons. Human life was a moving panorama. The whole place was alive with a mass of unkempt men clad in flannel shirts and heavy boots, who were inspired with the one desire to hurry on to the mines.

This rough life was not without its touches of sentiment. One day the town was electrified by the rumor that an invoice of women's bonnets had arrived and could be seen at one of the stores. The excitement was intense, and there was a rush from every direction to get a realistic view of even so insignificant a substitute for female society. I do not overstate the truth in saying that the thoughts of home that were awakened in the breasts of the rude-looking men at the sight of those bonnets started tears from eyes which the worst forms of privation and hardship had failed to moisten.

The Christian missionary was already on the ground, and good Parson Williams had managed to find a place where he could preach on Sunday. One of the first men who arrived with his family came to one of these meetings attended by his wife and baby. During the sermon it chanced that the baby cried and the mother was about to withdraw, when the preacher addressed her thus: "My good woman, I beg you to remain; the innocent sound of that infant's voice is more eloquent than any words I can command. It speaks to the hearts of men whose wives and children are far away, looking and praying for a safe return to their own loved ones at home." Never shall I forget the sobs and tears which those words evoked throughout that rough assembly. That infant's cry seemed to them the music of angels.

With those who made San Francisco their temporary abode gambling appeared to be their chief occupation and Spanish monte the favorite game. One house fronting on the plaza, a two-story frame building called the Parker house, rented for $120,000 per annum, the rental being paid mostly by gamblers. A single store of small dimensions and made of rough boards rented for $3,000 a month. A canvas tent used as a gambling-saloon rented for $40,000 per annum. Money was loaned on good security at fifteen per cent. a month, and out of the loan the borrowers made fortunes in real estate operations.

Obliged to Decline.

Sappy—I'll give you ten cents, Tommy, if you'll tell me what your sister said about me after my last call.

Tommy—No, I can't do it! I promised my Sunday-school teacher I wouldn't use any strong language this week.—Munsey's Weekly.

Every one suffers from Catarrh in the Head. Those who don't have it suffer from those who do. It's a disease you can't keep to yourself.

Here are some of the symptoms: Headache, obstruction of nose, discharges falling into throat, sometimes profuse, watery, and acrid, at others, thick, tenacious, mucous, purulent, bloody, putrid, and offensive; eyes weak, ringing in ears, deafness; offensive breath; smell and taste impaired, and general debility. But only a few of these likely to be present at once.

The cure for it—for Catarrh itself, and all the troubles that come from it—a perfect and permanent cure, is Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. The worst cases yield to its mild, soothing, cleansing and healing properties. A record of 25 years has proved that to its proprietors—and they're willing to prove it to you.

They do it in this way: If they can't cure your Catarrh, no matter how bad your case, or of how long standing, they'll pay you $500 in cash. Can you have better proof of the healing power of a medicine?

"German Syrup"

A Cough and Croup Medicine.

For children a medicine should be absolutely reliable. A mother must be able to pin her faith to it as to her Bible. It must contain nothing violent, uncertain, or dangerous. It must be standard in material and manufacture. It must be plain and simple to administer; easy and pleasant to take. The child must like it. It must be prompt in action, giving immediate relief, as childrens' troubles come quick, grow fast, and end fatally or otherwise in a very short time. It must not only relieve quick but bring them around quick, as children chafe and fret and spoil their constitutions under long confinement. It must do its work in moderate doses. A large quantity of medicine in a child is not desirable. It must not interfere with the child's spirits, appetite or general health. These things suit old as well as young folks, and make Boschee's German Syrup the favorite family medicine. ⓓ

GEO. W. BOLTON, Local Agent.

DELANO DIARY.

—Communion services were held in the Presbyterian church, on Sunday, last.

—On Wednesday, the suit of F. H. Lindsley vs. Walter Albeitz, for Attorney's fees, was tried in Justice Billings' court. Mr. Albeitz confessed judgment in the sum of $30. and costs.

—Our local manufacturers of flour, feed, and wood sawyers, etc., etc., were surprised, on Monday by a visit from the Boiler Inspector. So for as we have heard all passed muster this time.

—Joseph Bauman has got to be considerable of an apiarist. He has on hand 22 hives of bees from which he has lately removed about 100 lbs of unusually fine honey, a sample of which we were presented with. We would like to say a good word for Joe. Girls, he is single!

—Several of our young men attended the game of ball at Montrose on Sunday, among them Messrs. Geo. Dyer, Ed. Eppel, Henry Grafft, Theo. Brandes, Will Galley, Geo. Cramer, James H. O'Leary, and Frank Brasie. Frank acted as catcher for Waverly. The score stood Montrose 12. Waverly 31.

—A valuable two year old colt, one of a pair belonging to William Plath, which was being pastured on Dunn's farm, was found dead a few days since stuck fast in Mud Lake which takes the place of a fence on one side of the pasture. He had eaten the grass within his reach and had probably been there several days.

—John Coolen demonstrated to the satisfaction of the public generally, while taking part in the parade with the Catholic Benevolent Society that he had been a soldier, and his foot came down when the drum beat. Some of the raw recruits were equally conspicuous for their evident lack of all ideas of harmony.

—Delano has a telephone company, L. P. Probst, president, and proprietor the line has already been constructed from the president's house to that of his father-in-law. Mr. H. Dyer. If any one wants to scold either party without fear of bodily harm they have but to repair to the other end of the wire and talk into the tube.

—C. G. Roosen saw lots of fine scenery, climbed mountains by stage, on horse back, and the Pike's Peak on a cog-wheel railroad. Inspected the irrigation systems made use of in Colorado. Saw the crops and herds, the cities and the country. Beheld the beauties of nature and art, and has got back to Delano which he thinks is about the nicest place in which to live after all.

—Al. Kurtz, we are sorry to hear, had a brakeman's luck and got the thumb and index finger of his left hand crushed, one day last week, while following his vocation on the Soo. Why can't automatic couplers be used on cars?

—The entertainment was given by the St. Michael's Catholic Society, in the City Hall at this place, on Sunday evening and was well attended and financially a success. At 2 P. M. the procession formed near St. Peter's school and led by the band, the Delano Society followed by the Waconia Society and the St. Michael Society marched through the principal streets. Many visitors were present from neighboring towns.

—The game of base ball on the Delano grounds, on Monday was quite well attended by ladies and others desirous of witnessing a game between the "fats" and "leans" of Delano. The captains did not adhere to the original plan very closely and instead of Delano "leans" several good players from the country were placed in the field, as a consequence the game was decidedly in favor of the "leans," so much so as to fail to be very interesting, even to them, as several of them made three tallies apiece in the 2nd inning, and on several "fats" retiring from the field their places were filled by good players, to allow them to even up a little, after playing nine innings in something like half a day the so-called "leans" had 35 tallies and the "fats" 33.

—Eight men and four bears, were giving a public exhibition on our streets on Tuesday. The business must be a paying one as a few years ago one bear and one man was enough to attract a crowd now four bears and eight men eke out an existance from the voluntary contributions of the benevolent onlookers. One lame man dropped a penny into the hat when the collecter an able bodied specimen of the "genus homo" indignantly grabbed the coin, and threw it back at the donator. If people do not desire to witness the antics of poor Bruin with a ring through his nose on a sultry day panting for breath to earn a livelihood for his keepers, they can easily stop the play by putting in nothing when the hat is passed. The bears performed well their part, and showed that they were thoroughly under subjection to the slightes wishes of those in command. It looks as if the Society for cruelty to animals could find business here.

--Fair Day, Saturday, August 8.

—Dr. H. A. Knight, D. D. S. of Minneapolis will be at Young's Hotel to-morrow Saturday to repair or extract your teeth. Has gas with him.

—The Town Supervisors were in town yesterday making out the bond voted at the last election for the bridge across the north fork, known as the Ruckoldt bridge.

—The entertainment given by the "Merry Trail Seekers" in the City Hall last night was attended by a good sized audience, some of whom engaged their seats for to night before leaving the room.

—J. S. Cooper had a dance at his house on the Watertown road, on Wednesday evening. He appears to be very accommodating, driving in with a fine covered rig and hauling the young ladies out and back.

—On Wednesday evening as I. Gutzwiller Jr. was driving onto the iron bridge from the west end one of the horses stuck his front leg into a hole and fell, but succeeded in extricating himself with a few scraches. The hole was immediately covered over with a plank.

—The ladies mentioned in last week's Gazette as having gone to Devil's Lake, returned on Thursday morning except Miss Benner who is prolonging her visit. They report their friends well and greatly surprised to see them. They say crops are fine, and brought back some fine samples of wheat with them.

—At the meeting of the old School Board a few days since the contract was let to Al Rodgers of St. Paul to furnish the school house with two new Smead Warming and Ventilating Furnaces giving a guarantee that they will give satisfaction. The old furnace and $1000. pays their bill. The apparatus is to be in running order by September 1st.

--The usual peaceful tenor of our village was broken into several times during the past week, by pugilistic encounters of more or less note. On Saturday two sturdy farmer lads sought to settle their differences on the street when they fell beneath the eye of that lover of law, who had been perusing some of Governor Merriam's latest efforts on the subject, Justice Bohn who insisted they "stop that kind of work" in his jurisdiction. They are said to have taken a change of venue to the vicinity of the pine tree, in Hennepin County where they fought it to a settlement. Next came a couple of men who hold offices, one told the other in very forcible language that he was telling an untruth whereupon something happened. As we passed along on the street ever and anon we could hear of "plug hat," "whiskers," "fist" and so on. M. A. O'Hair is said to have acted as peacemaker in this instance. Then came the man and the bear or the bear and the man, for the amusement of the people and the money that was in it.

—The last Quarterly meeting of this conference year was held at the M. E. Church on Tuesday, the 28th inst. P. E. John Stafford in the chair, Rev. J. R. Davies of Watertown was chosen Secretary. Reports from the standing committees were read, also from the pastor, Jabez Blackhurst. The election of Trustees and Stewards resulted in retaining the old boards, mostly. Standing committees are the same as last year. Dr. T. J. Catlin was elected delegate and Willis E. Johnson reserve delegate to the Lay Etectoral Conference of the Minnesota Annual Conference to be held at Red Wing, Oct. 2, 1891. In the evening Presiding Elder Stafford preached an eloquent Sermon to a large audience, for a week night meeting, on the text. 1. John Chap iv, ver, 18. "There is no fear in love; but perfect love casteth out fear; because fear hath torment. He that feareth is not made perfect in love." The preacher did not agree with those who dwealt very much on "perfect love." "sanctification" or "saved to the uttermost," most preachers on these subjects lack the ability to convince their hearers, Aunt Amanda Smith, is honest and good, but lacks ability to convince on this point. The most perfect soul is the most charitable, and sings. "Help us each other's cross to bear." Love thy neighbor as thyself. Am tired of hearing people talk of loving God and having no interest in poor suffering humanity. If I know anything about religion it makes us ladies and gentlemen. Several great questions are now before the church, Sabbath and the Rum traffic among them. These may cost some of us our reputations, maybe our lives but they must be met. Nothing is so contemptible as a minister who evades, keeps silent on such questions. When Bishop Haven come to die and was asked about. "How it is" his reply was, "there is no valley" "there is no river" it is only a shadow." After the sermon closed the Elder started up the hymn. "Beautiful words" the congregation joining him.

Water Works For Delano.

At the Citizens mass meeting held in the City hall, on Wednesday evening. G. P. Schaffer acted as chairman. An informal conversation occurred in which a free discussion of the advisability and feasibility of waterworks was had. On being asked for opinions as to the subject. Hi Dyer said he was for a dam first and dam last. T. K. Danforth favored a dam. M. A. O'Hair thinks he is not in need of water. I. Gutzwiller, Jr., for an artesian well. T. J. Catlin offered as a motion that it is the sense of this meeting that this town needs waterworks. Carried. I. Gutzwiller moved that the chair appoint a committee of three or more to investigate and report as to the best means of and the probable cost of the several kinds of waterworks. I. Gutzwiller, T. J. Catlin, C. G. Roosen, E. J. Swedeback and L. Probst were appointed as such committee, to report as soon as they are ready. There was present about 30 citizens and quite a lively meeting was held. Considerable interest being manifested. The feeling seemed to be in favor of a system of waterworks that would supercede wells, and that could be used to supply the water for drinking purposes as well as for fires. A good well with tanks at a sufficient elevation to give force sufficient to throw water over any building in town could be easily made on one of the most elevated places in town, the power to do the pumping to be either steam or a wind-mill. As soon as the committee can prepare a report on their investigations another meeting is to be called, when it is hoped some conclusion will be arrived at. Some favor an electric light plant in connection with the waterworks system. Hurrah for Delano! Let her Boom!

County Cullings.

The perjury case against Henry Stine from Wright county, came up before Judge Canty yesterday on a motion to quash the indictment. Stine's attorney contended that the indictment was defective, because it failed to sufficiently set forth the fact that the place wherein the alleged forgery was committed was properly constituted a court and that the alleged offense was not described with sufficient technical accuracy. Judge Canty denied the motion to quash the indictment. but certified it up to the supreme court.--Sunday Times.

The County Fair.

EDITOR GAZETTE:—Will you allow me to call attention through your columns to our county fair and the arrangements we have made and are still making to insure its success?

In the first place we have thoroughly revised the Premium List and with your permission I will note a few of the changes. Instead of including all thoroughbred horses in one class, we put Percheron, Norman and French Draft in one class and Clydes and Shires in another. In every class we add a first and second permium, which has not been given before for "Best breed mare with sucking colt." We have a separate class for registered and graded roadsters. In Division "B" a class is established for "Grades and Natives" which have hitherto had to compete with thorough-bred cattle. The premium on thorough-bred sheep is doubled and on grades, increased 25 per cent. The display of poultry has dwindled greatly in recent years and instead of offering one premium for the best show of blooded fowls, we offer a separate premium for every kind mentioned in our list, Cochins, Brahmas, White and Barred Plymouth Rocks, Wyandottes, etc., etc., between ten and twenty premiums in all. Eggs have become nearly as staple an article as wheat. Several farmers have been experimenting with sugar beets and the Society in consequence offers a premium for the six best sugar beets. Quite a number of private premiums are given by merchants for the best display of butter and other articles of produce and these of course are in addition to the amount paid by the society.

The Howard Lake and Albion Bands have been engaged to furnish music during the Fair. Our Sweep-stake Trotting race is for a purse of $175. and there will be Trotting races, running races, mule races, a sack race, foot race probably slow races and bicycle races.

On Tuesday the first day, officers will be on the ground to receive entries and we hope that as many entries as possible will be made on that day.

Wednesday is especially Farmers' Day and at 10:30 the address of welcome will be made by Hon. J. B. Hompe, senator for Otter Tail County and Deputy Alliance State Lecturer.

Thursday, Old settlers' Day,—Col. John H. Stevens, of Minneapolis, at 10:30 will speak to the old settlers. Col. Stevens spoke at the first fair ever held in Wright County, by the Crow River Agricultural Society at Rockford on October 2nd, 1860, 31 years ago and at the invitation of Mr. Farnham, who was secretary then, he has kindly consented to be here. Col. Stevens writes that he should like to spend at least two days with us and we wish to give him a hearty and enthusiastic welcome.

Friday, at 10:30, Grand Army Day, Hon. John P. Rae has promised to be with us to address the veterans of the war and we are sure that no one would willingly be absent on this occasion.

A roster will be kept during the four days of the fair in which the Society wish every old settler to record his name, the date at which he came to Wright County and his present home. A roll of Honor will also be furnished for the veterans of the war to record the company and the regiment in which they served during "the late unpleasantness."

We are very desirous that Judge Rae, Col Stevens, Senator Hompe and all other guests may from the variety, number and quality of the exhibits, no less than the attendance, carry away with them a very favorable impression of Wright County, its people and its resources. We rely confidently on the public to give such a hearty support that hereafter the Wright County Fair will be second to no county fair in the state.

I may add in conclusion that the town Hall will be completed before the date of the fair and that troupes of considerable merit are arranging to give a series of public entertainments nightly during Fair week.

"LIKE HIS MOTHER USED TO MAKE."

[From Toledo Blade.]

"I was born in Indiany," says a stranger lank and slim,
As us fellers in the restaurant were kind o' guyin' him,
And Uncle Jake was slidin' him another pun'kin pie,
And an extra cup of coffee, with a twinkle in his eye—
"I was born in Indiany—more'n forty years ago,
And I hain't been back in twenty—and I'm workin' back'ards slow;
But I've et in every restaurant 'twixt here and Santa Fe,
And I want to state this coffee tastes like gittin' home to me!
Pour us out another, daddy," says the feller, warmin' up,
A speakin' 'crost a saucerful, as uncle took his cup—
"When I seed your sign yonder," he went on to Uncle Jake—
"Come in and get some coffee like your mother used to make—
I thought of my old mother and the Posey country farm,
And me a little kid ag'in a hangin' in her arm
As she set the pot a billin'—broke the eggs and poured 'em in—"
And the feller kind o' halted, with a tremble in his chin,
And Uncle Jake he fetched the feller's coffee back, and stood
As solemn for a minute as an undertaker would:
Then he sort o' turned and tiptoed to'rds the kitchen door, and next
Here comes his old wife out with him, a rubbin' of her specs—
And she rushes for the stranger, and she hollers out, "It's him!
Thank God, we've met him comin'! Don't you know your mother, Jim?"
And the feller as he grabbed her, says: "You bet I hain't forgot"—
But, wipin' of his eyes, says he "Your coffee's mighty hot."

—James Whitcomb Riley.

Harvest Trips.

On July 21st and Aug. 4th the Great Northern Railway will sell tickets to Northern Minnesota and North Dakota points north of Fergus Falls, Breckenridge and Wahpeton, to Buford inclusive, at one fare for round trip, good for 30 days.

Harvest hands are scarce in the Red River Valley and good wages are being paid. This will give land-seekers a chance to see the country and pay expenses.

WHAT CONSTITUTES THE MAN.

Though money makes the mare go,
Does money make the man?
A thousand times I'd answer no,
That money never can.
'Tis honesty that leads the van
Along life's rugged road:
"And honesty has made man,
The noblest work of God."

Man may inherit noble birth,
Yet lack an honest heart:
The well-sping of man's noble worth
In honesty, not art.
His coat may make him blush with shame,
His face both pinch'd and wan;
Man may be poor, yet still may claim
What constitutes the man.

Will wealth alone secure you joy,
Where nothing dare molest?
Will gold extract the base alloy
That festers in the breast?
If wealth be yours, make God your guide,
Adopt His noble plan;
For gold, alas, nor empty pride,
Can constitute the man.

Alas, when death's sharp pruning knife
Secures you as its prey,
Will opulence insure your life
For one brief single day?
The king may wear a jewele'd crown,
And on it rank may scan;
'Tis not the gold, nor yet the gown,
That constitutes the man.

—The Albany Telegram.

CAPT. JOHN PALMER of NeW York, was elected Commander-in-chief of the G. A. R., at thier meeting in Detroit, this week.

THE Minnesota Editorial Association is to meet at Brighton Beach near Litchfield, on the 15th, inst. for a week's outing.

MINNEAPOLIS has a very large and fine Court House in course of construction. And from present appearance is likely to have for some time; the money has run out. Perhaps St Paul colud be induced to join in building the house taking a few rooms for use of the State officials.

WE are in receipt of a copy of "THE MAIL AND EXPRESS, one of the oldest New York papers containing big head lines clear across the page." The Great Work of a Patriotic Administration". "The Message of the Mail and Express to the people of the Nation, showing what President Harrison Has Accomplished for Them." "Record Smashing era for Clean Government, Practical Results and Business Methods." On another page we were very much suprised to find the following item of warning. "Roman-Catholic Priests had better stop interfering against the sale of the Mail and Express and depriving the little newsboys of income by telling them not to sell it. Ain't this a free country? And can't the Mail and Express print these things if they see fit? And can't the priests or any body else tell the newsboys not to sell the papers? And can't the newsboy sell them if they can find buyers?

That Tariff Again.

Several of our republican exchanges have an item on the tariff question as follows:

"Last year before the McKinley bill was passed, Mr. Hayner, of Warren county, Ohio, paid Norton Brothers, of Illinois, $2.25 per hundred for two pound cans for his sweet corn crop. This season, with the McKinley provision of the tinplate act going into operation in July, Mr. Hayner has contracted with the same firm for cans at $1.87 per hundred.

It looks as if prices were on the downward tendency from this statement, even in spite of the McKinley bill. We were given to understand that the protection on tin was for the purpose of helping the manufacturers in this country to develop the tin mines es in the Black hills. If as these Republican organ say the price has been reduced 38 cents per hundred on tin cans, before these mines are worked sufficient to make any, the outlook is rather discouraging to the manufacurers. When prices have an upward tendency people are encouraged to engage in them: but when they are falling at the rate, these papers state. We don't see how people expect to make a living at the business.

Then there is wool the McKinley bill raised the tariff and now we are told that wool is cheaper than it was, even in Canada, coming down in spite of the McKinley bill, and farmers who have a few sheep can't see how the bill has helped them much since God in his infinite wisdom has seen fit to make our winter's less severe and the want of woolens has not been so much felt for a season by them and their families. Maybe McKinleyites claim the bill "tempered the wind to the shorn Lamb" by warming up our country, and creating a less demand for woolens thereby reducing the price.

Then after telling us how much the tariff has reduced prices on eggs, wool and tin by raising the tariff on the tin and wool and by putting 5 cts per dozen on eggs they face squarely around and brag how much they are saving the country by TAKING OFF the tariff from sugar. How can it be that putting tariff on wool, tin and eggs reduces prices while taking off of sugar does the same thing? Possibly there are other reasons for the reduction of prices on these articles.

If the Black hills can be dug over and the tin manufactured for so greatly reduced prices as is claimed for this new tariff bill. Why did not some one undertake the job while they could get more for their trouble than they can now?

Statistics.

Figures do lie sometimes and facts often evade the truth. Statistics, correct in themselves, but covering too narrow a range, or only special cases, frequently create a wholly false impression. Of this nature were some statistics concerning prohibition in Iowa, sent out by one Faulkes, But it is often the case that statistics, conscientiously prepared, lead one father from, rather than nearer to, the truth. Carrol D. Wright, in the Popular Science Monthly, says: "One long engaged in statistical work feels more and more keenly, as the results of original investigation, not only the limitations of statistics but the fact that perfectey honest and truthful statistical tables may not only be vicious in themselves, but may also lead to the most worthless conclusions, the tables themselves not indicating, and it not being possible to fully indicate, by them the exact truth they contain. The method, I believe, is the surest for ascertaining conditions and the trust on which to base conclusions; but the method must be supplemented by full and frank analysis. A statistcal table, independent of such analysis, is to me what a red flag is to a bull. It immediately excites antagonism and invites attack. The value of any statistical presentation must depend upon the basis upon which it is made, the integrity of the collection of the various elements of it, and the analysis which accompanies it. No one has any right to quote statisical tables without using and understanding the analysis of them. It is be cause of the flippant and careless use of statistics by writers and speakers that it receives their condemnation. No one thinks, however, of condemning anæsthetics because the burglar chloroforms his victim; or the elementary rules of arithmetic, the means by which all honest accounts are kept, simply because dishonest accounts are made possible by the same means.—Methodist Herald.

CORRESPONDENCE

ANNANDALE.

We had our usual church services with Mr. Higgins in the pulpit. It is gratifying to note the attendance upon religious services is rapidly increasing in our young village; that the audiences are far more fashionable: that the Ladies, especially the younger ones come out more stylishly dressed, giving an air of higher culture and greater refinement.

There has been an Epworth League formed here with Mrs. A. E. Herrich as president, and the organization holds its first meeting this week.

John Nylin, of Cokato, has moved into the old Gisler house and has the contract of the wood work of S. H. McGuire's store.

Mrs. E. L. Cofield has sold out her stock of goods in the store formerly occupied by the Harrington Bros. to the Rosseau Brothers who are to take immediate possession. Mrs. C. evidently finds the duties of attending a general store rather irksome.

Mr. Herman Klatts has commenced the erection of a set of residence buildings on Excelsior Street near their Roller Mills.

A. B. Mattheus is putting a new front into his store and veranda over the sidewalk.

Mr. J. M. Pratt, the town site proprietor here, has been away a few days at St. Cloud, visiting kindred there.

Axel Weburg who has been clerking for Rennie & McLane, for the past year, has discontinued their service and is now out with a Portfolio soliciting for books and periodicals for some eastern publishing concern. His success must be better than most others who have heretofore engaged in that business or he will throw it up in disgust ere long.

The family and visiting friends of Mr. Kelly went out picnicing last Monday, to Cedar Lake; taking with them Elder Higgins; they brought in a nice string of fish, among which were some fine large Bass. The Elder expresses himslf as delighted with the day's outing.

Mr. Leon L. Herrick and wife have rooms in Mr Chas Gordon's and take their meals at the Pleasant Lake House.

Miss Cofield and McDonald are talking of starting a Bank here on their own hook, as we understand, so we may have competition in Banking as well as other things.

Mr Ole Olson proposes to put a new front into his store, and a veranda, and paint up and thereby add greatly to the external appearance of the same. The spirit of improvement, like the measles, is catching only it does not leave so bad a taste in the mouth.

Mrs. J. H. Miller and Miss Delia Kothman are taking advantage of the low rates to Detriot to make a visit among their old friends in Michigan.

Mr. H. Huntington's family are having visiting friends from Hiawatha, Kansas.

Mr. George Kelley and family of Missouri is visiting his brother, Mr. J. F. Kelly's family, for a few days and, we understand, is so much taken with our thriving village that he contemplates erecting a summer cottage here.

Our republican politicians are exceedingly worried about Grover Cleveland and his common sense speeches upon National matters: They squirm when they are contrasted with their special pleadings to prove that the more a thing costs us the less it costs us; that the more combinations and the more millionaires we have the better for the laboret. When people become so besotted and degraded as to believe such monstrosities they are fast ripening for serfdom. Yes they are in an agony of apprehension lest he shall be again nominated for President. I, myself, approve of all of his utterances except upon the silver question: upon that subject I conceive of too much yielding to the Wall Street gamblers who dignify themselves with the name "Bankers."

Montrose Chips.

A special meeting of the local W. C. T. U., held on Tuesday afternoon at Mrs Halgren's was attended by Mrs. McGuire of Waverly.

Harvesting is just commencing in this locality, and the buoyant spirit, thrift and energy of the farmers indicate but too plainly that an abundant crop is their portion this season.

Services were held in all the churches here on Sunday morning last with a good attendance in each at the German church Children's Day was observed in the afternoon. The church was nicely, decorated with house plants and cut flowers for the occasion and the program was quite entertaining.

A full house listened to an interesting Bible lecture giving by Prof. Tipton, of the Christian college located at Excelsior, Minn. Many good "hits" were made by the speaker and it is hoped that many will long rember it to the advantage and prosperiety of our Churches.

Mrs. Rennix and husband accompanied by Mrs. Core, Mrs. Monroe Ferrill, Mrs. Geo. Ball and Mrs. Steven took Tuesday's train for Howard where Mrs. Rennix received the rite of baptism, administered by the Rev. Cooksey of the Christian church of Howard.

We are pleased to state that local baseball playing on the Sabbath is discontinued. We are sorry that our young men should become so enthused over the national game as to lose all respect for the proper observance of the Sabbath and the laws of the State as to have continually violated the same and thereby be forced to the above issue. It does not speak well for the much lauded intelligence and civilization of the 19th century. There are six days in a week in which to play ball when you would break no law of God or man and would receive the well wishes and support of all law abiding citizens.

Rockford.

The busy hum of the binders is heard. Grain looks splendid. Farmers ought not to kick this year.

G. W. Florida with a large force of men is repairing the dam. The woolen mill is shut down. It will take about four days to repair it.

Dr. O. R. Fasset had a run away yesterday but came out very lucky. only bruising him a little. We hope he will be out in a few days. His wife was not hurt at all. But the buggy was badly demolished.

Mrs. W. L. Haggerty is staying in Delano for a few days.

NORTH ROCKFORD NUBBINS.

Jesse Brandon, the popular chicken buyer is around again. Good weight and fair prices.

The S. S. berry picking amounted to $1.49.

A Delano man was advertising the Sunday game of base ball, to be played at Rockford, Aug. 9th. He was told to come over on Saturday not Sunday, for "It is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God."

The Wilson League of the M. E. Church of this place will visit Rockford in the near future and hold a song and gospel meeting.

The McGuire brothers and sister were up from Minneapolis to the funeral of their father, Hugh McGuire.

WATERTOWN WAYS.

Commissioners Schutz of Waconia and Wittsack were in our village, last Thursday inspecting the approaches to the bridge. We will probably soon get the $900. from the state which was gotten for us through the influence of Senator Craven last winter.

The Mill Co. is excavating for a new warehouse which they expect to erect shortly.

Professor Carlson, of the Swedish college at St. Peter, is visiting friends in this vicinity this week.

Mr. Joe. Warta, of St. Paul, came up and spent Sunday with his family and friends in Watertown.

B. C. St. John went to Hutchinson last Monday and returned Wednesday.

Miss Katie Kohler, of Waconia, and Miss Berger of Minneapolis were visiting with Mr. S. B. Kohler's family a few days, this week.

Miller & Son carry a full line of the best quality of goods those wishing to purchase goods would do well to examine their stock before purchasing elsewhere.

LORETTO.

Farmers make themselves scarce around this town these days. Nearly every farmer is busy cutting his grain. Every one is feeling good over the prospects of a good crop.

Miss Laura Dorman returned from Minneapolis, Wednesday, last week.

Mr. and Mrs. N. G. Leighton, of Minneapolis, visited at Mr. Dorman's Thursday and Friday.

P. Becker made a business trip to Minneapolis, Thursday.

Mr. Asa Gould, a former resident of Corcoran visited L. H. Dorman and family Friday and Saturday.

There was a dance at A. Tusins, Saturday night and another at J. Bouldies, Sunday night a good time at both, reported.

C. G. Roosen and little niece, of Delano, called on at this place, Tuesday.

Jos. Baraliuau went to Minneapolis, Monday.

M. E. Tordan is setting up the McCormick in this vicinity.

Jacob Spurzera Sundayed with his son-in-law Frank Becker. His little boy, who has been sick for sometime is improving.

We are pleased to note that Jacob Kauth, Jr., who has been laid up with the inflammatory rehumatism, for nearly a month, is improving.

Miss Jennie L. Anderson, formerly school teacher, of this place, is visiting friends in this vicinity.

J. Fick has had such bad luck with the bean business the past few years he has concluded to raise barley. Look out John, They turn barley into liquor and you can't get rid of your pork so well.

Jno. Smith, cousin of our blacksmith, is visiting friends and relatives, in this village.

Woman's Column.

For God and Home and Humanity.

EDITED BY MRS. E. A. STACY.

What Right, Justice?

The people are beginning to find out that prohibition not only adds value to property, but makes growth. Sensible men no longer want a saloon in their block, because it depreciates the value of their property. Farmers do not want saloons in their county, because it makes their county and state taxes higher. The benevolent orders do not want saloonkeepers or men connected with the liquor business in their lodges because they draw too much money out of the organizations. Insurance men do not want drinkers, because they make the rate too high. Railroads will not hire drinking men, because they cost them too much for accidents. Cities do not want saloons, because they take money from business, make taxes higher, and cost more than the license they pay. Business men do not want distilleries, because the money that comes to them comes from men whose money goes through the saloons to the distilleries, which otherwise would come to them for clothing, sugar, coffee, coal and meat.

"WOMAN'S PLACE IN TEMPERANCE WORK."

"Temperance work should appeal more almost than any other to woman, as it exercises such a powerful influence on woman's chief sphere—home. There her first work commences. Whether she occupies the position of sister, wife, or mother, she can exert a great influence on those around her more particularly if she is the presiding genius, and it lies greatly with her whether it be a temperance home or not. It is often said that there is no way of showing friendship to ordinary callers so effective as offering wine, etc., but any woman who really welcomes her visitors can readily devise means to render this altogether unnecessary. If we would only realize that our example must influence some one either for good or bad, and that we never know who may be the weak one whom we are tempting, it would go far to put away even the very appearance of this evil. Let us bear to be stigmatized as mean, inhospitable, any thing, rather than that the old accusation slightly altered should with truth be brought against us: "The woman —she gave me, and I did" drink.

If she occupy the position of wife and mother, her influence is immensely extended. It lies, I might almost say, entirely with her whether home is happy and inviting—"the sweetest spot on earth" to her husband and children, or whether it is only a place to sleep and eat in, and they must seek their recreation on the street, in the public-house, the billard room or the club, as the case may be. In all these places the temptations to drink surround them. Let us strive by word and deed to make the boys feel that here there is one who is ready to enter into all their plans and as far as possible aid them to carry them out, and that their success is to us a matter of importance. Nothing has more influence over a boy than the thought that his good or evil-doing will have a large share in making or marring of his mother's happiness. Let us make it apparent by precept and example that we have an antipathy to the drink, and we will, unconsciously to the boy, probably, but certainly, influence him to an extent that he will not find it easy to altogether throw off when he goes out into the world.

The chief thing, however, is to realize our individual responsibility in this matter. Let us feel that we have each some work to do in connection with the removal of this evil and a work that no other can do. Let us give no uncertain sound as to our position with regard to it. Let it be distinctly understood that our motto is "No compromise," and knowing that we have the approval of the Master in such work let us each resolve to work and pray with our whole heart until

"Our great cause extend,
Until all peoples blend,
And one great shout ascend—
'The world is free.'"

A HOME INSTEAD OF A CIGAR.

"In early life," said a New York merchant, "I smoked six cigars a day at six and a half cents each; they averaged that. I thought to myself one day, I'll just put aside all the money I am consuming in cigars, and all I would consume if I went on in this habit, and I will see what it will come to at compound interest." Last July completed thirty-nine years since, by the grace of God, I was emancipated from the filthy habit, and the saving amounted to the enormous sum of $29,102.93 by compound interest. We lived in the city; but the children, who had learned something of the country life from their annual visit to their grand-parents, longed for the home among the green fields. I noticed a very pleasant place in the country for sale. The cigar money now came into requisition, and I found that it was large enough to purchase the place, and it is mine. I wish all the boys could see how my children enjoy their home, as they watch the boats and steam launchs which course along the river. Now, boys, you take your choice—smoking without a home or home without smoking."

THE BUSINESS, NOT THE MEN.

The business of liquor selling and making drunkards, is on trial, not the men who are in the business. If there is any liquor seller who labors under the delusion that he is of importance enough to have this temperance movement aimed at him, he has a very much better opinion of himself than we have. If you could catch every liquor seller in the state to-night, tie him hand and foot and down him, unless you could root up the accursed law which propagates liquor sellers as a hot bed propagates vegetation, you would have another crop in three months just as mean as the old one. But if you root up the law that legalizes a business in which a man can make more money with less capital, and less brains and less character, than any other business on earth, the good men, if there are any such in the business, will go into other trades and professions, and the mean will fetch up in state prisons where they should have been long ago—JOHN B. FINCH.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, July 31, 1891

"Help me Cassius, or I sink" was the substance of a communication from Mr. McKinley, of Ohio, to the National Executive commitee of the republican party, which met here this week. The story, as it is told here, is that Mr. McKinely sent a very urgent appeal to the committee for a large sum of money to be used in the Ohio campaign and that he sent along with it a very broad intimation that unless it was forthcoming the jig was up with both himself and the legislature in that State. He is also said to have suggested that the committee might easily raise the money by putting the screws on the manufactures specially benefited by his tariff bill. And that was not the only appeal for money presented to the committee. Mr Clarkson told his colleagues that unless a good sized barrel of cash was rolled into Iowa that State would take its place permanently in the democratic column, and Secretary Fassett presented bills for a considerable amount left unpaid from last year's disastrous campaign. But these were minor things and excited but little interst compared with the resignation of Quay, not only as chairman of the two committees, but as a member of the National committee: and the resignation of Dudley as Treasurer of both committees. There was a good deal of pretended regret at being compelled to accept these resignations, and high-flying resolutions were adopted referring to both of them, which will probably be regarded by the retiring officials as "vindications".

Mr. Harrison tried to stem the Blaine tide which controls the republican committee by appointing one of its members—J. Sloat Fassett, of New York—to be collector of the port of New York in place of Erhardt whose resignation has been accepted. Harmony of the monkey and parrot kind is prevalent in the Treasury department just now. At least three of Secretary Foster's most important subordinates would hail with pleasure the news that he had resigned, and they would resign themselves if it wasn't for the fact of their having to give up their salaries if they did. The subordinates mentioned are Assistant Secretary Crouse Treasurer Nebeker and Immigration Commissioner Owens, all of whom are recent arrivals at the Government trough. The trouble with the first two is that Mr. Foster, with the warning of the Raum case fresh in his mind, refused to allow them to appoint their sons to be their private secretaries, Mr. Owens is disgruntled because his opinion that Welch tin-plate workers could be brought to the United States under contract without violating the alien contract law has been repudiated by the Secretary who has written another letter to the party who made the enquiry stating that the department was not prepared at this time to answer hypothetical questions such as the one propounded. It is said that Mr. Foster also took occasion to give Mr. Owens a very sharp lecture on the duties of subordinate officials.

Mr. Wanamaker had led a delegation of Alabamians, headed by Senators Morgan and Pugh to believe that he would favorably consider their request to make Mobile one of the ports from which a subsidized line of steamships will run to South America.

With a great flourish of trumpets the announcement is made a reciprocity treaty has been negotiated with the mighty republic of San Domingo, which will go into effect September 1.

Members of the administration have already begun to discuss the ways and means of raising the money that it will be absolutely necessary to have in the near future to meet pension payments under the present laws. Some sort of a new tax has got to be imposed and the most of them seem inclined to put it upon whisky by raising the revenue from 90 cents per gallon to something between $1.20 and $1.50 per gallon. However, all that the administration can do is to make suggestions: the democratic House of Representatives will determine what shall be done.

Senator Sherman's friends are trying hard to make it appear that they look lightly upon the opposition of the Farmers' Alliance to his re-election, but in reality they regard it as such a serious matter that unless they can succeed in patching up some sort of a reconciliation before long one of them said that Sherman would be compelled to withdraw in order save himself the ignomy of defeat.

Had Mr. Harrison been able to circulate incognita among the prominent republican politicians who were here this week consequent upon the meeting of the National Executive committee he would certainly have arrived at the conclusion that he was no longer "in it," as far as a nomination is concerned. It was unquestionably a Blaine week in Washington, and if the National committee can bring it about Blaine is to be nominated, and one of their number—Col. Conger, of Ohio—is authority for the statement that he will accept the nomination if it is tendered him.

THE war records will make a good-sized library. Sixty-five volumes have already been issued by the government in one series. Two other series will follow.

JAMES W. BRADBURY, of Maine, and Alpheus Felch, of Michigan, who entered the senate in December, 1847, are the oldest ex-senators of the United States now living.

DR. OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES says: "If nine-tenths of the medicines in the world were thrown into the ocean mankind would be greatly benefited." But what about the poor fish?

THE statistics for 1890 for the Pasteur institute show that fifteen hundred and forty-six patients were treated. The record for the past five years shows only .06 per cent. of deaths.

A LECTURER in Massachusetts is trying to demonstrate to the young ladies that old maids are the salt of the earth. That may be true, but the girls prefer to be likened to the sugar of one household.

SUSAN B. ANTHONY finds that twenty-three states have given women the right to vote for school officers. That is just a majority of all the states. Susan now moves to make it unanimous.

AMERICA'S two champion lawn-tennis players, Dr. Dwight and "Dicky" Sears, of Boston, are men of small physique. Sears is short, rather stocky and blonde. Dr. Dwight is short, rather slender and dark.

SENATOR HEARST was generally supposed to be worth about $20,000,000 when he died. The appraisers have filed their report in the San Francisco probate court and the estimated value of the entire estate is $8,788,137.15.

LOOKING BACKWARD BELLAMY would abolish all saloons and bar-rooms and provide that alcoholic liquors shall be distributed at cost by salaried state agents. He thinks this is the best method to be adopted until national prohibition can be enacted and enforced.

THAT was a rude interruption to the festivities of a wedding at Vienna. Lightning struck the house, killing two guests and injuring eighty. In years gone by a dread coincidence like this would have been interpreted as a sign of Divine displeasure at the contemplated union. Happily the spread of scientific information has freed mankind from many superstitions.

PHILANTHROPY and religion had a big windfall in the New York surrogate's court the other day. Three wills filed there left over $350,000 to benevolent objects. Of this amount $200,000 was from the estate of Hector C. Havemeyer, who distributed the money among various organizations. Charles W. Morrill left $146,000 to similar objects, and David Stewart bequeathed $10,000 to charity.

THE inheritance of great wealth has not destroyed young Adam Forepaugh's love for the glitter and spangles of the circus. Though his income is now greater than the president's salary, the son of the great showman dons the pink tights at every performance and rides in the hurdle race with all the interest of a ten-dollar-a-week supe. Young Forepaugh is thirty years old and built like an athlete. He has had something to do about a circus ring since he was a boy of seven.

E. L. AYER, of Portland, Ore., recommends as a sure and humane method of inflicting legal death injection of prussic acid into the jugular vein. He would have the prisoner lie on a cot and be placed under the influence of an anæsthetic. When he is unconscious a hypodermic syringe will force the acid into the vein, and death will be almost instantaneous. The advantages of the method are its inexpensiveness, its simplicity, requiring no elaborate preparation of horrifying machinery, and its merciful certainty.

IN a Chautauqua talk Mrs. Ewing said we need better "punkin" pies and less politics, and that, as the country needs cooks, women should take up the craft that men have monopolized. "Cooks are wanted everywhere," she says. "There is scarcely a village in the land where a competent woman could not earn big wages in giving cooking lessons. Half a dozen churches in Kansas City each paid me for a course of lectures a sum larger than the average school-teacher can earn in a year, and they themselves made big profits out of the course."

WHEN Inventor Edison was an unknown telegraph operator in Boston one of his pastimes was the slaughter of cockroaches by electricity. He rigged an arrangement on the wall of the office made of two squares of tinfoil from tobacco packages. These were pasted on the wall near together and between them was daubed molasses. Each piece of tinfoil was connected with an electric current by a fine copper wire. The cockroaches would march up the wall, and as they reached the sweet stuff they would connect a circuit between the pieces of tinfoil, the demise being swift and sudden.

DR. HENRY T. HELMBOLD, the famous buchu man, who was credited with having piled up a fortune of $10,000,000 by the sale of his patent medicines, is once more in a madhouse. Chained at the wrists and with shackles on his ankles, he was taken from his home at Long Branch last Friday and conveyed to the insane asylum at Trenton, N. J. He is now in a strait-jacket, a raving maniac. It is the fourth time within the last twenty years that the doctor's family has been compelled to place him under restraint. This will probably be the last, the physicians having pronounced his case hopeless.

THE Hatfield-McCoy family feud which raged for many years in Kentucky and West Virginia, resulting in the killing of about 200 persons, was supposed to have ended a few months ago. Like Romeo and Juliet, of the rival houses of Montague and Capulet, a young man and a maiden of the Hatfield-McCoys fell in love with each other. A truce between the factions was declared and the couple were married. But Cupid and Hymen ruled the roost only a short time. Again the McCoys are on the rampage, and two of them have killed one George Roberts, of Black Creek, and the fight is again on.

LATER.

Kentucky Election.

LOUISVILLE, Aug. 3.—Kentucky today elected a full state ticket, adopted a constitution and chose a legislature to enforce it.

The state officers elected are: Governor, John Young Brown; lieutenant governor, M. C. Alford; attorney general, W. J. Hendrick; auditor, treasurer, superintendent of public instruction, register of the land office and clerk of the court of appeals. All are Democrats and go in by majorities ranging from 20,000 to 40,000.

The Alliance has devoted itself to the legislature and probably has practical control of that body, and so will control the revision of the laws under the new constitution. In only a few instances has the Alliance put out candidates in opposition to the Democratic nominees, but it has taken care to control these Democratic nominations. So while the legislature will be nominally Democratic it will have strong Alliance affiliations and tendencies. The Peoples party polled about 20,000 votes, nearly all of which came from the Republicans. Of 223 candidates for legislature 124 are farmers.

ONE of the heaviest failures for years occurred in New York on the 3rd. Adam Backer, dealer in commercial paper made an assignment with estimated liabilities of $2,000,000.

THE large retail store of Siegel, Cooper & Co., corner State and Adams Sts., Chicago, was burned on the 3rd Loss $1,000,000. Three watchmen known to have been in the building are not accounted for.

IN 1887 Jack Marion, was convicted at Beatrice, Neb., of the murder of John Cameron, and was executed. An uncle of Marion, believing him innocent, devoted his time to proving the same. On the 3rd of the present month he found Cameron alive and well at La Crosse, Kan.

THE Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Co., has sued the Pullman Palace Car Company for one million of dollars.

BIG FIRE IN CHICAGO.

Dry Goods and Other Articles Valued at a Million Dollars Destroyed — Siegel, Cooper & Co. the Heaviest Losers.

CHICAGO, Aug. 4.—Siegel, Cooper & Co.'s immense dry goods and notions establishment at State and Adams street was totally destroyed by fire this morning. Half a million dollars' worth of assorted stock was entirely consumed and nothing but bare walls are left where a magnificent trade palace stood. Unfortunately the fire could not be prevented from spreading, and at 8:30 o'clock a number of other firms had suffered much damage. "The Leader" dry goods store on the opposite corner caught fire several times, and Mr. Pineus, the manager, thought that the damage by fire, smoke and water would reach from $100,000 to $150,000. Next door south of Siegel, Cooper & Co.'s is J. W. Berry's large confectionery house, and his loss was $1,000 by water.

The flames communicated to the rear of J. H. Walker & Co.'s dry goods store at the corner of Wabash avenue and Adams street. Here fire, smoke and water caused a loss of $25,000. Then the occupants of F. R. Hilger's building at 207 and 209 Wabash avenue suffered as follows: C. Henneeke, pottery, $40,000; J. A. Bryant, pianos, $7,000; women's exchange, $500; I. W. Baird, pictures, $10,000. Charles Brown, who has a European hotel at 37 and 39 Adams street, lost about $1,000 from water and smoke.

Siegel, Cooper & Co. occupied six stores on State street, extending south from the corner. The building, valued at $100,000, was four stories high and was half a block deep on Adams street, extending to the alley which separates it from J. H. Walker & Co.

The fire was first discovered by Officer M. Sullivan, who turned in the first alarm. When Officer Sullivan first saw the blaze it shot out into State street from the first floor and seemed to emanate from what is known as the exchange room. No one seemed to be able to tell what caused the blaze.

Once started the flames had full sweep. Inside were great light shafts and a number of elevators through which the blaze swept with the force of a small cyclone. There was any amount of material for it to feed on. From small wooden toys to costly Persian rugs the stock offered splendid opportunities for the tongue of flame. Up the elevator shafts went the blazes, and out through the roof and into the murky atmosphere they shot. A heavy pall of smoke hung in the rain-charged air, and this cloud was seen for miles by the thousands of people hurrying down town to their work. Eight hundred employes, from messenger boys and cash girls to managers of departments, soon stood around the corners and mixed with the hundreds attracted to the scene by the fire.

In the building at the time the fire broke out were some twenty-five employes. All escaped without injury except Manager Wixon, who dropped from the fourth story to a balcony on the third story and was bruised and shaken.

One of the bookkeepers who was sorting over some of the record books said that from $15,000 to $20,000 was burned up in the flames, or at least the money was in the store safe and had probably been burned inside the safe.

FAILED FOR MILLIONS.

Abraham Backer, a New York Commercial Paper Dealer, Forced to the Wall—Bad Speculations the Cause.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—Abraham Backer, of the dry-goods commission house of A. Backer & Co., No. 285 Broadway, a heavy dealer in commercial paper, assigned Monday. His liabilities are estimated at about $4,000,000, of which $3,500,000 are direct and $1,500,000 contingent. The principal creditors are banks in this and other cities. There are also some individual creditors. It is understood that over a third of the liabilities consists of notes indorsed by Mr. Backer, which will be taken care of by their makers, and Mr. Backer believes that if his assets are properly handled they will more than cover the remaining two thirds. His friends believe that the creditors will all be paid in full.

Mr. Backer was very popular in financial and mercantile circles, had the confidence of banks and bankers in this city and elsewhere, was a director in city banks and in several southern banks. He had a number of bank accounts where he got his paper discounted. Mr. Backer's assignment, it is said, is principally due to the condition of the money market, which made it very difficult for him to float the quantity of commercial paper which he generally handled and also to the decline in certain southern railroad bonds in which he was a large holder. His trouble, it is stated, in relation to southern railroad bonds was the result of his connection with the Macon Construction Company, of Macon, Ga.

The assets, according to one who is familiar with Mr. Backer's affairs, include about $1,500,000 of the bonds of the Georgia Southern & Florida railroad and the Macon & Birmingham railroad, about $750,000 Alabama state bonds and a large amount of other securities, a valuable mill plant at Glastonbury, Conn., and $150,000 to $200,000 worth of real estate in New York city. The trouble, he said, was entirely due to tight money and losses in connection with the Macon Construction Company and the decline in the securities of the southern railroads which he had invested in.

ALL BOUND FOR AMERICA.

Russian Jews Look on the United States as the Land of Promise.

LONDON, Aug. 4.—The Russian Jews who left Hamburg last week took passage for London, Liverpool, Glasgow and other British ports, whence most of them will start by different lines for the United States. The programme is not to land them all at one place, but to divide them up between the leading American seaports, so that they may not attract too much attention and opposition. America is the objective point of nearly all the Russian Jews.

Election in Utah.

OGDEN, U. T., Aug. 4.—The first election in Utah on national party lines came off Monday. There were three tickets in the field, however, the remnant of the liberal party and made up mostly of republicans nominating a full ticket. The Mormon vote was about equally divided between the democrats and republicans. The former won by a small plurality over the liberals, who were slightly ahead of the republicans. The town is wild with excitement over the first victory in Utah of American politics over church and anti-church parties.

OUR FLAG'S DEFENDERS.

Thousands of Old Veterans Assemble in Detroit to Attend the Twenty-Fifth National Encampment—Many Noted Warriors Among the Number.

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 4.—The city of the straits has assumed a martial air. The veterans of the Grand Army of the Republic are no longer arriving by the hundreds, but by the thousands, and every incoming train brings another throng to mingle with the multitude that already parades the streets. As the gala week of Detroit opens, business is practically suspended, and the tramp of the Grand Army of the Republic, and the inspiring music of the bands are heard on every hand. Gen. William G. Veazey, of Vermont, commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, is here, and his headquarters at the Cadillac have been the Mecca of scarred and grizzled veterans throughout the forenoon. Gen. Veazey was accompanied by Miss Clara Barton, the famous founder of the White Cross. Secretary of War Proctor was also of the party, with Quartermaster General John Taylor, of Philadelphia, and Assistant Adjutant Emery, of Washington. The national department adjutant general, J. H. Golding, and wife, of Rutland, Vt., are also at the Cadillac.

GEN. VEAZEY.

No arrivals at the central depot caused more excitement than the Georgia and Florida departments. There were 150 in the latter delegation and nearly all were bedecked in hats of not only curious construction but made of natural seaweed. They left Tampa in special trains, and one car was filled with the products of Florida, from a live crocodile 10 feet in length to a bunch of seaweed. They had watermelons in great profusion, banana trees in blossom, olive and orange trees, sea oats and any quantity of Florida's new product, phosphate, which promises to eclipse the orange as a fortune-maker for the citizens of Florida.

The arrival of Gen. Fairchild, ex-governor of Wisconsin and a former commander in chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, was made the occasion of a great ovation.

Three special trains brought the Old Guard of Washington, the department commander and his staff. The Old Guard, a noted organization, is commanded by J. M. Edgar. It has a color guard of twelve men, six of whom lost their right arms in the war and another six who lost their left arms.

John A. Andrew post, of Boston, is the only armed battalion in the grand army, being uniformed as cavalrymen and equipped with sabers. It will be represented by 150 men.

Ex-President Rutherford B. Hayes, commander in chief of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion, arrived from Ohio. He was met by a local delegation of the Loyal Legion and escorted to the home of Col. Hecker. Commander Hayes was tendered a reception at Col. Hecker's residence in the evening and all members of the Loyal Legion paid him their respects.

Gov. Page, of Vermont, and a number of his staff are in the city and Gov. Thayer, of Nebraska, Congressman Henderson, of Iowa, ex-Congressman Small, of South Carolina, and A. P. Davis, of Pittsburgh, founder of the order of Sons of Veterans, are also among the recent arrivals. The New York delegation, 2,000 strong, arrived here in the evening.

The department of Louisiana and Mississippi will revive the "color" fight in the encampment. Charles F. Fink, assistant quartermaster general of this department, said: "We have come up to this encampment to make a fight on the color line. We object to colored members of the Grand Army of the Republic and want them formed into a separate colonization. It is all right here in the north, where you have only a few colored veterans, but do you know that in the south there is any quantity of colored members of the grand army who are not 30 years old? They swarm in our posts and a white man has no show. We will not associate with them, and if the present convention does not do something to relieve southern posts of this growing trouble then white grand army veterans will withdraw."

KENTUCKY ELECTION.

The Farmers' Alliance Will Control the Next Legislature.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Aug. 4.—Kentucky on Monday elected a full state ticket, adopted a constitution and chose a legislature. The democrats elected their candidates by majorities ranging from 20,000 to 40,000. The new constitution carried with a sweep and the majority for it is placed at anything from 50,000 to 100,000. The people's party polled about 20,000. These came mostly from the republican party and from the cities. The alliance devoted itself to the legislature and probably has practical control of that body and so will control the revision of the laws under the new constitution. On joint session the legislature will stand about as follows: Farmers and farmer-democrats, 73; straight democrats, 50; republicans, 15.

HINTS FOR THE KITCHEN.

NEVER put salt on a steak until after it is cooked.

ALL sorts of vessels and utensils may be purified from long retained smells of any kind by rinsing them out well with charcoal powdered after they have been scoured with sandsoap.

COSTLY PAPERS AND RELICS.

GEORGE SCHWEICH, a merchant of Richmond, Mo., owns the table upon which the Book of Mormon was written. He values it at $5,000.

PROF. R. L. PERKINS, of Boston, has a copy of Horace that is more than three hundred years old. It was printed in 1576, and has an index to every word.

LORD ASHBURNHAM'S famous "Textus of the Gospels" is valued at $50,000 and is on view at the Bookbinder's exposition in London with the Mazarine Bible and Mary Tudor prayer book.

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS

ON EASY PAYMENTS.

Minnesota People May Visit the World's Fair by Weekly Deposits.

The World's Fair Transportation Company, of St. Paul, has filed articles of incorporation. The officers of the company are Louis J. Merritt, T. Millnaire, real estate agent of Duluth, and W. W. Braden. The land commissioner of the Great Northern railway; Joseph Bobleter, state treasurer of Minnesota; Frank Kruyenbuhl, United States gauger of the South St. Paul distillery; Moses Clapp, attorney general of Minnesota; Mark D. Flower, manager of the South St. Paul Packing Company, are also interested in the company. The object is to give persons in moderate means an opportunity to visit the world's fair. The applicant pays $1 when application for transportation is made, and 50 cents each week until the amount, which includes railroad fare, board, and admission to the fair for six days, is paid up.

Had Been Dead for Days.

David Judson was found dead in his room at the Merchants' hotel in Minneapolis. He had not been seen at the hotel for four days, and the proprietor supposed he was in St. Paul attending the races. A servant girl at the hotel, while passing Judson's room, detected a disagreeable smell, which she reported at the office. The room was forced open and Judson's body was found on the bed in a state of rapidly-advancing decomposition. He was about 55 years old and a bachelor.

Storm in Norman County.

A destructive hailstorm passed through Norman county. The area covered by the hailstorm was a strip about 2 miles wide and 30 miles long. On the majority of the farms struck the crops were totally destroyed and the farmers had no hopes of saving anything. Hail fell outside of the belt mentioned, but did but little damage. It was estimated that at least 2,000 acres were ruined. Those fields were good for twenty bushels per acre.

Completed Its Big Work.

The affairs of the great trust formed in 1879, and consisting of A. H. Wilder and E. F. Drake, to which were given the lands granted to the five roads which form the present Omaha railroad, by which trust nearly 350,000 acres of land have been sold and 200,000 people brought into Minnesota, the trustees having handled millions of dollars in its affairs, have come to an end, its work being completed.

Special Tax Too Small.

On account of an amendment to the state law as regards school apportionment some thirty school districts in Winona county, have failed to vote sufficient special tax to obtain from the state all they are entitled to. The districts will be notified by the superintendent of schools as soon as possible and they will have to raise the special tax or lose a certain amount of the state apportionment.

Weary of Life.

Christian Mass, an old German farmer living near Cleveland, was found dead behind his granary, with the top of his head blown off. In one hand he held a shotgun, in the other a stick, showing only too plainly the manner of his death. He was over 70 years old and a widower, with three grown-up children. No cause was given for the deed. He had been despondent for some time past.

The News Brindle Chronicled.

A fire at Little Falls destroyed Phillip Germain's residence. Loss, $3,000; uninsured.

W. B. Ervin has resigned as postmaster at Cazenovia, Pipestone county, and John Seba at Friberg, Otter Tail county.

H. Stowell, aged 80, died at Northfield. He resided there for thirty-six years and was well known.

John Redell, of the Chicago fire department, was elected fire marshal of Winona at a salary of $1,500 per year until November 1, 1892.

An 8-year-old son of John Morrissey, of Crookston, was kicked by a horse and dangerously wounded. The skull was broken and the brain protruded.

Frank Vandervoort, about 22 years of age, was run over and instantly killed by a train on the Great Northern at Wayzata.

Cyril Hill, a farmer living 7 miles west of Hammond, was killed by lightning, and two horses and a son were injured, the son fatally.

The mayor of Minneapolis has issued an order forbidding prize-fights, boxing matches and sparring contests of any sort in that city.

The residence of the Culver boys at Duluth was struck by lightning. Damage and loss, $2,000; insured.

The personal property assessment of Minneapolis for 1891 foots up $19,615,313, an increase of $106,947 over the previous year.

Joseph Violet, a child living with its parents at Gentilly, was strangled while drinking water and died in a few moments.

Herbert Miller, postmaster at Tilden, Polk county, has resigned. It was proposed to establish a mail route from Fergus Falls to Lida, to embrace Rumsey and Edward.

Jimmy Murray was arrested at Duluth by Officer Olson when about to enter the residence of Herman Berg. Murray drew a revolver, but the officer took it from him. He is a well-known crook, was in his stocking feet when arrested, and had key nippers and other tools on his person.

The stock barn of James Conway, near Rochester, was struck by lightning and burned, together with twelve wagons and machinery. Loss, $7,100; insurance, $400.

Dawson Bell, who disposed of the Grand hotel at Fergus Falls to G. Duryee, of New York city, made a voluntary assignment for the benefit of his creditors.

Richard Fagan, explorer, assaulted R. D. Mallett, of the firm of Hartman & Mallett, of Duluth, knocking him down on the sidewalk. The trouble grew out of the famous Hyde-McDonald land suit.

PERSONAL AND LITERARY.

—An English writer is preparing a critical volume dealing with half a dozen of the great authors of the century. Acting on the assumption that success is the consequence of a marriage between talent and environment, he works out the idea by examining in each case what were the early associations, accomplishments and tastes of his subject.

—Ex-Queen Isabella of Spain went to a ball in Paris one evening recently. The ball was at the house of the Princess de Leon. There were two thousand guests there, all in costume, and the queen, who acted as the guest of honor, was seated upon a throne placed in the center of the room. The costumes represented historical scenes, characters in fiction, and were, taken altogether, highly sensational.

—An English paper offers an answer to a question often spoken: The Authors' society is asking why the publishers don't cut the edges of their three-volume novels. The answer is simple. Nine-tenths of the public buy a book by its appearance, and "Paternoster row" loves "a fat book." Now, if the edges were cut, a thicker and more expensive paper is needed to produce the same bulk than if the edges were left uncut.

—George du Maurier, the famous caricaturist, lost the use of one eye while studying art in Antwerp, and has worn glasses ever since. He is a Parisian by birth, and has three grown-up daughters, who serve as his models. He has just finished his first novel, is a connoisseur of dogs, and illustrated Thackeray's "Esmond." In appearance he is a slim-built man, with a half-gray mustache and goatee, and is rising six and fifty.

—Mary Anderson Navarro is tying herself to England for a pretty long stay. Mr. and Mrs. Navarro have settled down very comfortably in Tunbridge Wells, a beautiful place, famous for Chalybeate springs, about thirty miles from London. At present both husband and wife are busy furnishing a new home, which they have leased for seven years, and are ransacking the country to fill it with quaint things. Mrs. Navarro is in prime health, but avoids London society to a great extent.

—The embalmed remains of all the dead Braganzas, the rulers of Portugal, lie in a mausoleum in Lisbon, where they are preserved in trunk-like chests ranged around the walls. A recent American visitor was permitted to look upon the face of the late empress of Brazil, whose features are so well preserved and whose face is so serene that she appears simply to have fallen asleep. The bodies of every member of the dynasty from John IV., who died in 1656, are stowed away in these chests.

—Russell Sage is as regular in his habits as an eight-day clock. He gets up at six, strolls around to his stables and back, eats a hearty breakfast and then walks to the elevated station and shows his free pass. Since his friend, Jay Gould, got him on the directorate of the Western Union he eats a hearty lunch at the expense of the company; before that he had an office boy's lunch—a hunch of bread, a glass of water and an apple. He never gets rattled or hurried during the day, and he has a good, clear, healthy complexion.—Chicago News.

HUMOROUS.

—Tommy Spake Truly.—"Whatever is worth doing," observed Tommy Tarbox, smearing another daub of green paint on the family cat, "is worth doing well." "It is, my son; it is," cordially assented Mr. Tarbox, unexpectedly emerging from the kitchen door with a trunk strap in his hand and leading Tommy rapidly toward the barn.—Chicago Tribune.

—"This is a small case, gentlemen," said Judge Wing to the jury Tuesday morning in the case of the dogs and the cows. "It reminds me of the case that was tried before a colored friend and brother, 'way down souf,' years ago. It was his first case as trial justice, and he felt his dignity. He heard the law and the evidence and the arguments, and it came time for him to charge the jury. At his apparent hesitation one of the attorneys nudged him and said: 'Now charge the jury,' and the judge rose and said: 'Bredren, dis am a small case, an' I shall charge but a dollar an' a-half.'" —Lewiston Journal.

MY IDEAL.

He must be dark and handsome,
He must be tall and strong,
He must be brave and dashing,
He must not hate too long.

He must be kind and loving,
He must be strong and true,
He must be loyal in his love,
Or else he will not do.

In friendship he's unswerving,
And has a social air;
Whether in war he's serving,
Or love, he must be fair.

A woman's face he should respect
Although he does not love it,
And as for any cruel jest,
Why he should be above it.

I do not wish him too extreme,
In any of his ways,
Should answer yes where'er he can—
Be gentle in his ways.

His mind should be alert and bright,
His heart be pure and free,
To labor, wait, command, obey,
He should do readily.

In fact, he must be all a man,
Be earnest, free and brave,
As any who have ruled the land,
Or died the weak to save.

'Tis true that my ideal is high,
And I may never see him,
If I had only been a man,
I'd try, I'm sure, to be him.
—Brooklyn Eagle.

THE LEMON TRICK.

A Villain's Story of How He Won Wife.

SOME men are born villains, some men achieve villainy, others have villainy thrust upon them. I belong to the last category."

He didn't seem the least bit like a villain. He was stout; villains are supposed to have a lean and hungry look. And at that moment Bobby, his youngest little boy, presented him with a sticky pear-drop, which he ate. Who ever heard of a villain eating pear-drops? We were next-door neighbors; we were both fond of gardening, and, there was a good deal of innocent rivalry between us. He was something in the city; so was I; we always went to town by the same train, generally in the same carriage, and we were both first-class season-ticket holders—that in itself was a guaranty of respectability. Still, he said he was a villain.

"Good gracious!" I thought; "I hope he isn't going to confide in me."

"Yes," he said; "I obtained my wife by a piece of designing villainy. I should like to tell you about it."

I was sitting in this villain's garden, on this villain's garden-seat, smoking one of this villain's cigars (which wasn't at all villainous), and Bobby, aged three, had retired. We were alone, and I was in for it. I crossed my arms upon my chest, as I have seen persons do in my position upon the stage. "Go on," I said, with a melancholy smile; "your story interests me much."

"You are probably not aware that my wife, Carlotta, is the daughter of an eminent flautist."

"I beg your pardon," I said.

"Flautist," he repeated—"flute-player, you know." The fellow didn't look a bit ashamed at the fact of the mother of his children being the daughter of a professional musician. Now, my wife's father was an indigo broker, and there is something very gentlemanly about indigo.

"Yes," he continued, "my father-in-law was the celebrated Tremolo. You've heard of Tremolo—everybody's heard of Tremolo. Tremolo, sir," he added, proudly, "was without a rival until Triller came upon the scene, and he killed Triller in three years. My father-in-law, sir, measured fifty-two inches round the chest; he caused special music to be written for him which that puny wretch Triller attempted to render. You have heard the fable of the frog and the bull. Triller was just the frog, and he burst, and my father-in-law, the great Tremolo, went to his funeral. I met my present wife at a little dance in the suburbs. I fell violently in love with her, and I wasn't a bit awed when I was told that she was the daughter of Tremolo, the flautist. I've got a decent business, I said. I was earning six hundred pounds a year at that time, my dear fellow, and I had saved a little money. Why on earth shouldn't I marry Tremolo's daughter? I didn't know that I was a Philistine, you see? Signor Tremolo divided the world into two classes—professional people and Philistines. Now the lady at whose house I had met my Carlotta, though she knew Miss Tremolo well enough to ask her to her little dance, was either unwilling or unable to give me a formal introduction to the young lady's papa; but I was not to be balked. 'I'll take lessons,' I said to myself, 'and get to know him that way.' So I bought a flute, and I knocked boldly at Signor Tremolo's door and demanded an audience. He was awfully civil, and he was greatly astonished when I told him that I wanted to have some lessons.

"'I shall be delighted, young gentleman,' he said; 'how many years have you been working at the instrument?'

SIGNOR TREMOLO SPRANG TO HIS FEET.

"'To tell the truth, Sig. Tremolo,' I answered, airily, 'learning the flute is just a little whim of mine. I only tried once, and then I couldn't get it to make a noise.'

"Never in my life had I seen a man get into such an awful rage all at once. Sig. Tremolo sprang to his feet and turned purple. 'Wretch, brute, animal, Philistine, dog, beast, toad-pig!' he shrieked, and then he clutched at his collar as though he were going to have a fit. 'And you come to me—to me, Tremolo!—to teach you the rudiments! Get out of my place, you insolent rascal!'

"I thought it best to make a clean breast of the whole matter at once. 'Sig. Tremolo,' I said; 'I beg that you will excuse me. I love your daughter to distraction; the lessons that I asked you to give me were a mere pretext.' But that only made him worse.

"'Philistine!' he cried in an awful voice, as he flung the door wide open; 'go!' He wouldn't even give me time to tell him about my six hundred a year.

"For three months I was perfectly miserable; I had no opportunity of meeting Carlotta Tremolo, and how on earth was I to get over her father's insuperable objection? How was I to cease to be a Philistine? It is difficult to become a professional after you are eight-and-twenty; and I could not very well black my face and turn negro minstrel.

"I am rather fond of dry reading; I like a book which is, so to say, caviare to the general. I was reading 'Wugsby's Physiology' one day—the section on mental impressions. This was what I read: 'The mere mention of a favorite article of food will often make the mouth twitch involuntarily. This peculiar phenomenon is often observed in an exaggerated degree at the sight of a very acid fruit—as the lemon. These obscure phenomena,' etc. The idea—the fiendish idea—came to me in an instant; I became a designing villain in the twinkling of an eye. 'I will become an evil genius to Signor Tremolo,' I thought; 'I will become to him as the Old Man of the Sea. No more shall he delight the public. When I see his name billed for a concert in the usual manner:

THE FLUTE OBLIGATO, BY SIGNOR TREMOLO,

I will be there with my lemon, and I will produce obscure phenomena.' I had not long to wait.

"ST. JAMES' HALL.—SELECTIONS FROM 'IL FLAUTO MAGICO.' SOLO ON THE FLUTE, SIGNOR TREMOLO.

"I paid twenty-one shillings for a front-row seat. I took care that my victim should perceive me from the very first. I went through the various musical torments that are only appreciated by the elect; then came the selection from 'Il Flauto Magico.' Signor Tremolo stepped out to the very front of the center of the platform. There was a great burst of applause as Carlotta's father drew down his great wristbands and made his bow; then I coughed loudly to attract his attention, and I succeeded in doing so. After the orchestra had played several bars, the solo commenced. You have heard Tremolo play; I need not describe it. You might have heard a pin fall, the public was so attentive. He reminded me of nothing so much as a human thrush. What gurgles, warbles, and bubbling trills of melody that man produced! Every one—every one except the villain in the front row (I mean myself)—sat entranced. I coughed suddenly and succeeded in catching my victim's eye. I produced a lemon and applied it to my mouth. Suddenly the unhappy maestro ceased to produce delicious melody; he made just that noise a gas-machine does when it is short of water; then he turned all colors of the rainbow; he seemed to be trying to swallow his own tongue. He shook his fist furiously at me, seized his bushy professional locks with both hands, dropped his flute, appeared to be attempting to pull his hair out by the roots, and then rushed from the platform without a word.

HE SHOOK HIS FIST AT ME.

"I hurried from the concert room; but before I could get out somebody made an apology for Signor Tremolo on the ground of sudden illness. That night Signor Tremolo sent for me. I found him in bed.

"'Have you no mercy, young man?' he said, in a hollow voice.

"'You can't expect any mercy from a Philistine,' I replied, airily.

"Then he groaned. 'I am a ruined man!' he said. Then he began to cry. A middle-aged Italian, weeping bitterly, is not a pleasant object.

"'How much do you want?' he said, as he wiped his streaming eyes.

"'Old man,' I said, 'your professional career is over. Whenever you appear in public, I will be there, armed with this.' Here I produced my lemon. As I did so, Signor Tremolo's head disappeared beneath the bedclothes. 'As a man,' I continued, firmly—'as a Philistine,' I added, severely—'I have no sympathy with you, Signor Tremolo; but I have my price.'

"The flautist's head was instantly protruded. 'Name it,' he said; 'name it, wretch! and it shall be paid.'

"'Sig. Tremolo,' I began, 'when informed you of my affection for your daughter, you dismissed me with threats of personal violence; you may refuse to allow me to pay my addresses to your daughter, but you cannot deprive me of my rights as a man. I adore the flute'—then I gave a diabolical laugh—'and,' I added, 'I'm desperately fond of lemons.'

"There is no more to add. I married Carlotta Tremolo four years ago. If it had not been for 'Wugsby's Physiology,' I should never have been allowed to pay my addresses to her. It is awfully hot weather; shall we have a lemonade? I am very fond of lemons."

Then he laughed a great, hearty, good-humored laugh. I do not think my neighbor was such a villain after all, considering the circumstances.

I accepted the lemonade.

Curiosity impelled me to go to a promenade concert and try the lemon trick upon a popular flautist. The popular flautist jumped off the platform at a single bound and offered to fight me. Next day I had to buy a new hat. —St. James' Gazette.

SCHOOL AND CHURCH.

—There are about fourteen hundred places of worship in London.

—Christ did not need to suffer for us to know us, but He had to suffer before we could know Him.—Ram's Horn.

—A Massachusetts school-teacher marched her pupils out of a burning building in good order. She had systematically drilled them.

—People who really love Christ, no matter how poor they may be, will manage to find some way to show it in tangible gifts.—Ram's Horn.

—The women of all Protestant churches in St. Paul, Minn., have begun a movement against Sunday amusements. The first attack will be made upon the Sunday theaters.

—Two of the students to win commencement honors at American colleges this year are natives of Japan—Nariaka Zokaki at Harvard and Massoyoshi Takaki at the Syracuse university.

—The progress of toleration in Spain was illustrated recently by the presence of reporters from the principal Madrid papers of all shades at the opening of the new depot of the British and Foreign Bible society.

—Bishop Doane, of Albany, has received double honors while in England. To the degree of LL.D. conferred by Cambridge, Oxford has added that of D. D. The London Telegraph says that no previous American prelate has been similarly honored by both universities.

—At its twelfth commencement exercise the Harvard Annex, more strictly speaking the Society for the Collegiate Instruction of Women, reports one hundred and seventy-four students distributed into sixty-one classes. Like English colleges, Newnham and Girton, the annex gives not degrees, but degree certificates.

—The semi-centennial of Williston seminary, Easthampton, Mass., was celebrated recently. An examination of the alumni records show that more than seventy-five hundred pupils have been catalogued during its fifty years of existence, of whom more than one thousand have been graduated and have taken their degrees in twenty-six different colleges and scientific schools.

—Mr. James D. Colgate, of New York city, in transferring a gift of one million dollars recently to Colgate university, said, among other things: "I am confident that this university will continue to be in the true sense of the term a Baptist university, where the ruling passion is to discover and teach truth, in order that it may be fearlessly yet reverently followed wherever it may lead."

—Mrs. Elizabeth Storrs Mead, president of Mount Holyoke college, came from a family distinguished for intellectual attainments. Her mother was a sister of the father of Dr. R. S. Storrs, of Brooklyn. Another sister married Prof. B. B. Edwards, who once occupied the chair of Hebrew at the Andover seminary. Mrs. Mead and her own sisters were teachers in Andover for years before the former married.

—The fifty-fifth annual commencement of Franklin and Marshall college was held recently in Lancaster, Pa. The graduating class numbered twenty-seven. It is stated that the finances of the college are greatly improved; that a new gymnasium, a new laboratory, and a new library are in use, and that a large number of new students have been enrolled. Hereafter the college will confer no honorary degree.

MISUSE OF THE FAN.

The Damage They Cause in the Hands of Thoughtless Persons.

"Talk about the early martyrs," said a lady, as she came out of a crowded concert room the other evening. "They are absolutely nothing to me. Here I am, just up from an attack of influenza, and I'll warrant myself to have another attack, and all for the selfish stupidity of one old woman with a fan. I wish people had more consideration or sense or something," and the speaker stopped to sneeze and pull her wraps closer about her throat.

"And she sat there by your side and waved one of those great, strong, gusty fans, creating a breeze like a young whirlwind, until you are all of a chill, I suppose," said her friend.

"Indeed, yes, and the more I pulled up my scarf the harder she fanned. There wasn't a vacant seat in the house or I would have taken it. I didn't like to ask her to stop, for she hadn't a specially inviting countenance. And I have taken a severe cold, for every bone in my body aches. I think there should be a rule against fans in crowds, just as there is against canes and umbrellas in art galleries. You can mend statues or build more, but there isn't any remedy, that I know of, when once we are dead from somebody's carelessness or indifference."

"But it is easy enough to use a fan so as to disturb no one; wave it gently forward and back, never from side to side. I see no reason why people should make their neighbors uncomfortable by such acts, when a little sense and consideration would make every one comfortable. I think there are very few delicate persons who have not at some time in their lives suffered from the too vigorous waving of a fan in their vicinity. Indeed, anyone, however well, is seriously exposed to colds if, on coming into an assembly, often quite heated from hurried walking, a current of air from a fan is directed across the neck and shoulders. I have made up my mind that anyone who is careless or inconsiderate enough to use a fan to my discomfort is a suitable subject for a reprimand, and that then and there she will get it."—N. Y. Ledger.

A Damaging Report.

One of the curiosities of the house of commons, very rarely seen, was Earle Drax, for many years member for the Dorsetshire borough. Once, at a general election, on the day previous to the nomination, he put out the following address to his constituents: "Electors of Wareham, I understand that some evil-disposed person has been circulating a report that I wish my tenants, and other persons dependent upon me, to vote according to their conscience. I have no wish of the sort. I wish, and I intend, that these persons shall vote for me."—San Francisco Argonaut.

A Boy's Definition.

While two little boys were looking over a collection of stamps, they came across a seal of the United States war department. "I'll bet you don't know what that is," said Leo.

"I'll bet I do," replied Sidney. "That is—why—that is—I should think you'd know, Leo, that means—it means—that they had a fight a few years ago, and the south tried to depart from the north—and that's the meaning of war department."—Field's Washington.

HOME HINTS AND HELPS.

—Old napkins and old tablecloths make the very best glasscloth.

—To take rust out of steel rub it over with salad oil and in forty-eight hours rub with unslaked lime, finely powdered, until the rust disappears.

—Strawberry or Raspberry Ice: Make a sirup with three quarts of water and four pounds of sugar, add the juice of two lemons and one quart of strawberry or raspberry juice, then freeze.—N. Y. World.

—A very good shampoo is made of salts of tartar, white castle soap, bay rum and lukewarm water. The salts of tartar will remove the dandruff, the soap will soften and clean the hair thoroughly, while the bay rum will prevent taking cold.

—Bread Pudding: Beat three eggs with three tablespoonfuls of sugar, a little nutmeg or any desired flavoring; fill your baking dish nearly to the top with sweet milk. Add one pint of fine, dry bread crumbs, and bake for a little over an hour.—Detroit Free Press.

—The tomato is an excellent purifier of the blood, and the following is a choice mode of preparing it: Place the tomatoes in a Dutch oven for a few minutes before the fire, adding a very little vinegar. When they are warmed through peel off the rind and eat with any kind of roast meat.

—Thickened Cream: Heat one cup of cream and one of milk together. Melt one tablespoonful of butter, and when bubbling add one tablespoonful of cornstarch. When well mixed add the hot milk gradually, stirring as it thickens. Add salt and then pour it over the short-cakes.—Ladies' Home Journal.

—Creamed Potatoes: Cut cold boiled potatoes in small pieces, put in stewpan, sprinkle a little salt and flour over them; chop four or five sprays of parsley and put in the pan, and over the whole pour a pint of sweet milk. When it has thickened add a lump of butter or a teaspoonful of beef drippings.—Housekeeper.

—Green Pea Soup Maigre. Boil in two quarts of water one quart of old green peas and a large sprig of mint, until they can be rubbed through a sieve; add to the liquor a pint of young peas, the hearts of two heads of lettuce, a handful of spinach cut small, one onion and a quarter of a pound of butter; add salt and white pepper to suit taste, boil half an hour; serve with fried bread.—Boston Herald.

—Orange Gingerbread: Two pounds and a quarter of flour, one pound of molasses, three-quarters of a pound of brown sugar, one ounce of allspice, eight ounces of candied orange peel, three-quarters of a pound of butter, one cupful of milk, yolk of one egg; mix all these together well, and place in a cool place for five hours; roll it half an inch thick; cut into any form you please, brush each piece with beaten yolk of an egg mixed with a little milk; bake in a moderate oven.—Boston Budget.

—Apple Pudding: One pint of flour, one egg, one-half teaspoonful of salt, three-quarters of a cupful of milk (water may be used instead), butter size of an egg, one teaspoonful of baking powder, three large apples quartered. Cut the butter up in the flour and add salt and baking powder. Beat the egg well and stir into the milk and add to flour. Spread the mixture about half an inch thick in a well-buttered pudding dish. Stick the apples in and sprinkle well with sugar. Bake three-quarters of an hour in a moderate oven. To be eaten warm with milk and sugar. —Good Housekeeping.

SNOW IN ENGLAND.

Snow generally catches animals in England unprepared—all but the hedgehog, who is comfortably asleep, rolled up in a coat of leaves—and they are put to all kinds of shifts to find food and escape their enemies. The more open and exposed the districts, the greater their difficulties. Where there are thick woods and hedgerows, and, above all, running water, birds and beasts alike can find dry earth in which to peck and scratch, or green things to nibble, and water to drink. But on the great chalk-downs a heavy snow-storm seems to drive from the open country every living creature that dares to move at all. For the first day after a heavy fall the hares, which allow the snow to cover them, all but a tiny hole made by their warm breath, do not stir. Only towards noon, if the sun shines out, they make a small opening to face its beams, and perhaps another in the afternoon, at a different angle to the surface, to catch the last slanting rays. Squirrels, which are often supposed to hybernate, only retire to their nests in very severe and prolonged frosts. A slight fall of snow only amuses them, and they will come down from their trees and scamper over the powdery heaps with immense enjoyment. What they do not like is the snow on the leaves and branches, which falls in showers as they jump from tree to tree, and betrays them to their enemies, the country boys. During a mild winter they even neglect to make a central store of nuts, and, instead of storing them in big hoards near the nest, just drop them into any convenient hole they know of near. Like the squirrels, rabbits seem rather to enjoy the snow at first. Like many men, they require a dry, bracing atmosphere, and sea-breezes and frost suit them; and the morning after a snowfall their tracks show where they have been scratching and playing in it all night. But after a deep fall they are soon in danger of starving. Though not particular as to quality, they like their meals "reg'lar," and with all the grass covered with a foot of snow, their main supply of food is cut off. If there is a turnip field near they will scratch away the snow to the roots, and soon destroy the crop. If not, or if the surface of the snow is frozen hard, the hungry bunnies strip the bark from the trees and bushes.—Interior.

Jimmy Got the Cake.

"And where are you going, Katy?" called a Houston street mother from a third-story window to her daughter on the sidewalk.

"Over to Mrs. Johnson's, to inquire about her sick boy."

"Well, go on; but remember that if she begins to brag that his pulse has been up to one hundred and ten you want to say that our Jimmy's pulse saw that and went fifteen better the week he had the measles. Don't let her bluff you on pulses."—N. Y. World.

—When a man has devoted brain power and energy to putting a handsome polish on his shoes, it wounds him to have the first bootblack he meets look up indiscriminately into his face and say: "Shine sir?"—Somerville Journal.

What Scale Shall I Buy?

This question is asked by many. Certain it is that of all articles a scale should be honestly made and accurate. A low price, or what seems to be low, if it means an inferior implement, is a bad bargain.

There is a scale-maker who has had a long and honorable career in the business. "He pays the freight." You probably have heard of him. He says of his scale: "We offer it on trial, guaranteeing it to be better than any cheap Scale, and that no Scale, high-priced or low-priced, is better than it. With no traveling men, no high rents or no bribing of public weighers to throw out some other Scale, our expenses are so low that we can afford to sell a first-class Scale at a fair price."

This is the way Jones of Binghamton (N. Y.) talks, and it sounds square. If you are interested, better write for full information on the subject, which will be sent free.

"I GUESS," said the street-car driver, who reads the market reports, as he reached for his whip, "that I will have to do something to overcome this stagnation in stock."—Washington Star.

Among Unhappy Wretches

The nervous individual fills a leading role. Digestion overthrown, sleep restless and unrefreshing, appetite capricious, constant irritability, morbid apprehension, these make the earthly career of the nervous the reverse of jolly. Strengthen the system, improve digestion with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, and the zest of existence will return. Banish with it liver complaint, malaria and rheumatism.

"August Flower"

Mrs. Sarah M. Black of Seneca, Mo., during the past two years has been affected with Neuralgia of the Head, Stomach and Womb, and writes: "My food did not seem to strengthen me at all and my appetite was very variable. My face was yellow, my head dull, and I had such pains in my left side. In the morning when I got up I would have a flow of mucus in the mouth, and a bad, bitter taste. Sometimes my breath became short, and I had such queer, tumbling, palpitating sensations around the heart. I ached all day under the shoulder blades, in the left side, and down the back of my limbs. It seemed to be worse in the wet, cold weather of Winter and Spring; and whenever the spells came on, my feet and hands would turn cold, and I could get no sleep at all. I tried everywhere, and got no relief before using August Flower Then the change came. It has done me a wonderful deal of good during the time I have taken it and is working a complete cure." G. G. GREEN, Sole Man'fr, Woodbury, N.J.

Saved
—the life that is fighting against Consumption.

It must be done through the blood—and the "Discovery" is the most potent blood-cleanser, strength-restorer, and flesh-builder that's known to medical science. The scrofulous affection of the lungs that's called Consumption, and every form of Scrofula and blood-taints, all yield to it. For Weak Lungs, Spitting of Blood, Bronchitis, Asthma, and all severe, lingering Coughs, it's an unequaled remedy. It's the only one that's guaranteed. If it doesn't benefit or cure, in every case, you have your money back.

"We promise to cure your Catarrh, perfectly and permanently, no matter how bad your case or of how long standing—or we'll pay you $500." That's what the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy say to every sufferer from Catarrh. And they mean it.

The Soap that Cleans Most is Lenox.

OFFICAL PAPER OF VILLAGE OF DELANO.

DELANO, FRIDAY, AUG. 7, 1891.

GREAT NORTHERN R'Y.

Passenger trains leave Delano as follows:

No. 7, going west	- - - -	9:41 a. m.
" 9, " "	- - - -	8:21 p. m.
No. 10, going east	- - - -	5:23 a. m.
" 3, " "	- - - -	4:40 p. m.

GEO. W. BOLTON, Local Agent.

DELANO DIARY.

—Dell Young represents Delano to-day at the game in Minneapolis, between Omaha and Minneapolis.

—Dr. H. A. Knight, D D. S. will be in Delano on Saturday, Aug. 8, Fairday. Last Saturday he was kept quite busy. First come first Served.

—M. A. O'Hair informs us that Lieutenant Thomas Sharp of the 17th U. S. Infantry located in Wyoming but who is now visiting at Duluth, was here yesterday and made arrangements with him to prosecute Mr. Ryan, of Woodland, who was interested in a suit against one of Sharp's boys sometime ago.

—The Watertown Band is expected to visit with the Delano Band, on Sunday, the 16th inst. at Delano.

--The Delano Cornet Band hold their annual picnic at Buffalo, on Friday, the 14th inst. All are invited to accompany them.

--The Ladie's Aid Society will give a tea party at Mrs. M. A. Chance's residence, this afternoon, Friday, at 5 o'clock. All invited.

—Postmaster Vorse has moved his family into their new residence, on Second street where they have a pleasant home of their own.

--One more man made happy Timothy Shaw has received notice through his Att'y O. L. Billings that his pension under the new law had been allowed. C. M. Coffin is also among the pensioners.

—Timothy Gleason has bought the J. D. Brandon property on Third Street and expects soon to move into it. J. D. occupying Joseph Van Eman's old place, while Mr. V. will move into the rooms over Frazee's office.

--Urbon Pogrzeba was anxiously looking for some reaper repairs, on Thursday. The man whose reaper is out of repair now is in bad luck as the grain should be harvested as fast as it is fit so as not to be caught in the fall rains.

—A couple of vehicles came up R. R. Ave., on Saturday at quite a lively rate the occupants trying to see who could get somewhere first. The village justice thought the rate was hardly up to 7 miles an hour, and as they were Alhance horses they should not be prosecuted.

—On Saturday afternoon, while preparing to play ball on the grounds, Ray Billings got in front of a bat in the hands of Harry Nelson and received quite a severe wound on the forehead, cutting to the bone. Boys should be careful while playing such rough games as base ball.

—From the Superior Daily Call, we learn that Mrs. Dr. Scheig formerly of this place, saw a man in their house about ten o'clock in the morning, rifling the Doctor's pockets in his coat, which was hanging up. Instead of becoming frightened as some would she seized a revolver and fired over his head three times to frighten him away, which she was sncessful in doing. Nothing was lost.

—A man from the country gave a public exhibition of what "liquor can do for a man" on Sunday evening. While the band was playing in the new band stand near the town pump he appeared and began to entertain the crowd by jumping and dancing something after the latest approved Sioux fashion: as he warmed up to the music he took off his coat, and as he came more under the influence of the "spirits" commenced to assume still nearer the costume of poor "Lo," when some of the bystanders, not approving of his actions took him in charge and he was turned over to the tender mercies of Marshal Nelson. Such Sabbath evening entertainments are not very frequent and are not approved of by the citizens of Delano, and if such subjects could not obtain liquor on Sunday in our village we would not be furnished items of this character. Let both sides of the license law be enforced if we are to have any.

—The Presbyterian Sunday School picnic held at Lake Hughey, on Tuesday started out in fine shape. About a hundred persons attended, the day was fine and the good things to eat were spread out in abundance, the little fellows eyeing them with watering mouths, expecting every minute to be invited to partake to their fill. But they were destined to learn, and have very forcably impressed upon their minds the fact that "there is many a slip between the cup and the lip," as the wind began to come in fitful gusts and the rain to descend upon their heads, and soon hail of considerable size began pelting their improvised table ladened with the picnic dinner until one little fellowed started to run stepped in two pies and told his mother, when he got home, that "the dinner looked like a mess fixed up to feed the geese." The ice-cream and lemonade was saved and brought back with the party to town where it was served at the residence of Timothy M. Shaw. This picnic will long be remembered. We hope next time the children will not meet with so bad a disappointment.

Monday at the County Seat.

On Monday afternoon in ecmpany with William Lewis we visited the county seat, and are still of the opinion that Buffalo is a nice little town and contains some enterprising citizens, and will some day rank with towns now containing a larger population. On account of the bountiful harvest being garnered in close proximity to the village most of the men folks were out of town, an occasional farmer came in for binding twine or some repairs for the reaper. The crops on the road traveled by us are splendid, grain standing straight and heads well filled, and that that was cut giving evidence by the number of shocks that the harvest is a bountiful one. At the Hotels trade did not seem very rushing not being "court time" nor "convention time." The Merry Trail-Seekers were tarrying with Mr. Grant, at the Windsor, however. Mr. Shattar has left his hostlery in charge of a small boy, while he joined the jolly harvesters on his farm. At the court house where everybody is supposed to make headquarters while in the village we found Assistant Treasurer Junken, so busy in behind the big iron protector which serves to keep him from having "attacks," and feeling so safe as not even to look around when visitors approached. The deputy auditor was engaged with the report of the equalization board, mostly figures a few of which he obliged us with and which we give in another place. Judge Alley was being entertained by A. W. Wittman and M. A. O'Hair concerning the probating of the C. F. Peters estate. Later in the day together with his neighbor Assistant Clerk of court Brewster he went into a profound calculation of the intricate problem of how much per bushel the farmer would make on his wheat. The Judge is no pessimist and allowed the poor farmer a clear gain of $10. per acre and per chance he raises 35 bushels to the acre which he sees no reason should not be the case in many instances this season is willing the profit should be $15. per acre. The deputy clerk not protesting to this large profit. We are not quite sure but they would be good hands to aid in figuring the McKinley bill. Recorder "Isaac" Podas serves the county as faithfully as did his namesake's son serve his father-in-law for his wives. His assistant "Billy" Cochran was gone to Detriot, Michigan, to attend the meeting of the G. A. R. and talk over "old war times" and take his old comrades in arms by the hand once more. John Copeland, the janitor, has given considerable attention to the looks of things about the court house and grounds, the lawns are nicely mown and the citizen of Wright county would be hard to find that is not proud of the capital of his county. The Journal office appeared to be about the busiest place in town. Editor Eaton was gone to Monticello but the "force" was putting in the time to the best advantage. The Annual Premium List which they are printing for the fair is to be a "daisey". You don't want to fail to get one and find the premium for which you wish to compete and go in to get it. Buffalo lake was calm and a few row boats were to be seen here and there over its surface. The health of the community we learned from the veteran son of Aesculapeus, Dr Cady is "distressingly good" his own appearance is that of a younger man than he is, as he sits in his drug store amidst the bottles and drugs, and complacently puffs the cigar to which he treats himself occasionally. We noticed several heads of deer and one of the "genus homo" on inquiry we learned that his sons killed the deer, but as to where the other skull came from he was rather reticent. His cotempary in business was busy at home, assisting in providing for the winter that is coming. Buffalo is a good place to go to. So is Delano.

Diphtheria in an Asylum.

YANKTON, S. D., Aug. 4.—The prevalence of diphtheria at the state insane asylum has become epidemic. One attendant died last night and several more are down with the disease. About twenty of the inmates are being treated for diphtheria, but the officers are of the opinion that they will soon have the disehse under control. The asylum has been placed under quarantine. Defective drainage is the cause assigned There are 400 people quartered in the building.

Opposed to Fusion.

Topeka, Kan., July 26.—Leading Democrats of Kansas, in response to inquiry, oppose the idea of the fusion of the Democracy of the State with the People's party. It is contended that the benefits would only be temporary and the cost too great for such a sacrifice of principle.—Courier-Journal.

Gov. Boies Accepts.

Des Moines, Ia., July 26.— Gov. Boies gave to the public yesterday his letter accepting the Democratic gubernatorial nomination. Special emphasis is made of the tariff as an issue in the campaign.—Courier Journal

Political Economy.

ROCKFORD, Minn., July 29, 1892.

MR. EDITOR:—Grant me the use of a column of your paper to refer to political economy.

The American people have wisely profited by the mistakes of their English ancestors.

And the grayest mistake was the extravagance of public officials,—a mistake I fear man is prone to.

And while public officials have, in general, tried to increase taxation for centuries past, working classes have tried to check that extravagance. Sometimes by petition, sometimes by indignation meetings, ofttimes by ballot, and last of all, as in one Revolution, with the sword.

The conflicts over political economy have been long and bitter in England. The first conflict between the colonist and mother country was naturally that of Political Economy. The colonists petitioned, remonstrated placed their grievances before the Crown and Parliament to no avail and last of all they appealed to the God of Battles, and took upon themselves new burdens rather than bear those of coercion.

Every British soldier who fell at Princeton Monmouth, Stillwater, or who perished in the Revolution, represented a pound sterling unjustly wrung from the colonist. Every patriot who fell at Brandywine or in the Revolution fell a martyr to unjust taxation and his wounds will cry out forever against public extravagance.

The gravest question before our people to-day is that of Political Economy. We thank C. K. Davis for knocking that $400,000 binding twine hump off from the farmers' backs; but who put that $400,000 hump on the farmers' backs and forced them to carry it ever since the use of binding twine. The High Tax party, of course.

Congress took a $ 10,000,000 hump off the backs of our citizens in the way of free sugar: but who put that hump on their backs and forced them to carry it thirty years. The High Tax party, of course.

Now farmers there are bigger humps on your backs than the $400,000 binding twine hump or the $10,000,000 sugar hump. There is the dry goods hump, the boot and and shoes hump and the hump you get from daylight until dark.

Who are you going to have knock them off for you? Knute Nelson tried to do it. The High Tax party stabbed him for it and dug his political grave with a careful hand lowered him down to the bottom in a wooden box tamped the dirt firmly over it and wished him a quiet sleep. He can't do it for you just ask a mean democrat to do it. He has been wanting to do it for twenty years. H. E. CRANDALL.

Men would be very wise if they could only learn as much as their boys think they could teach them.

An exchange asks: "What is the hottest place in the United States?" Without the slightest hesitation a hornet's nest

Penelope—"There, uncle, that makes two hundred and seventeen presents aren't they lovely?" Her uncle—"My dear, I think I now understand why we are told that in heaven there is to be no giving in marriage."

A youth was heard to remark to a jolly and fat Teutonian: "Haven't I seen you before? Your face looks familiar." "Is dot so?" said Hans. "When you get as old as me, your face will look familiar, too."

At a young ladies' seminary, during an examination in hisory, one of the pupils was interrogated thus: "Mary did Martin Luther die a natural death?" "No" was the reply: "he was excommunicated by a bull."

Thad Butler editor of the Huntington (Ind.) Herald announced his marriage as follows: "Married—In Wabash, Ind., Tuesday, April 4th, at 2 o'clock p. m., at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. Thad Butler (that's us) and Miss Kate E. Sivey (that's more of us)."

A professor lecturing: "In conclusion, I would instance mental aberration—a mania to which the learned are frequently subject, and occasionally make themselves ridiculous without knowing it." (After saying which, the Professor took, instead of his hat, the lampshade off the bracket put it on his head, and walked out.)

A Question of Mathematics—"I am a little short, and will propound to you a conundrum in mental arithmetic said a Detroit man to his friend. "All right; let me hear it," answered his friend. "Well," said the man who was short "suppose you had $10 in your pocket and I should ask you for $5. how much would remain?" "Ten dollars," was the prompt reply.

PLEASANTRIES.

THE PATIENT SUMMER BOARDER.

He slept up in the attic
With the boys and the hired man;
He made his morning toilet
With a battered old milk-pan;
He lived on pork and gravy
And overweighted bread,
And the flies and skeeters ate him
From dawn to going to bed.
He bore it very meekly,
Nor grumbled all the while,
And though they charged him double
He paid it with a smile,
But he weakened one fine morning
And fainted dead away
When they asked if he would give 'em
"A lift at pitchin' hay."

Twins Long in Prison for another's Crime.

From the Pennsylvania train from New York last night two gray haired old men alighted. A glance told that they were foreigners. They were George and Lloyd Beatty, twin brothers, seventy-one years of age, from Birmingham, England. Both men have spent the last thirty-five years of their lives in Millbank prison. They are on their way to a son and nephew who lives in Pueblo, Col.

They were arrested thirty five years ago last November, charged with the murder of a neighbor. Both men protested innocense, but they were convicted and sentenced to imprisonment for life.

Lloyd was unmarried, but George had a wife and son thirteen years of age. The wife died of a broken heart within three years after her husband's imprisonment. Albert, the son, came to America soon after his mother's death, to free himself of the odium of being a son of a murderer, which clung to him so long as he remained in the neighborhood where he was known.

On April 28 last a convict named Churchill, who was serving a ten-year term in the same prison with them, died from consumption. On his death bed he confessed having committed the murder for which the Beatty brothers were serving a living death. The officials made the necessary investigation. The dying convict's story was found to be true. They were released and came to America after thirty-five years' imprisonment at hard labor for another's crime.—Chicago News.—Prison Mirror.

Explosion,

AT LITCHFIELD.

LITCHFIELD, Aug. 13.—A threshing boiler exploded in Litchfield yesterday afternoon and seriously injured two men and killed one horse. Engineer Clements was standing on the footboard and was blown about 20 feet. His right leg was broken below the knee and his entire leg completely filled with small pieces of iron. His head was bruised and he may die, as his leg will have to be amputated. A man by the name of Lung was driving by just as the accident occurred, and one of his horses was killed. Lund's left arm was badly broken and will have to come off. The accident occurred in the very heart of the city, and the explosion jarred everything. The front part of the boiler, weighing over 1,000 pounds, was thrown 400 feet and struck Angell's store breaking the windows.

HUGH G. HARRISON, aged 69, died suddenly, yesterday, in Minneapolis. Funeral on Sunday at 3 P. M.

HON. A. L. SACKETT, of St. Peter, has been elected President of the Board of Trustees of the Asylum for Insane. A good choice. Dr. J. H. James resignation as assistant physician was accepted.

JOHN G. CARLISLE, of Kentucky, is reported as having expressed as his opinion that Grover Cleveland is the strongest candidate for president on any ticket. How would Cleveland and Carlisle do?

THE World's Fair Commission held a meeting at the Capitol, yesterday and passed a resolution asking the Governor to call a special session of the legislature to vote an additional $50,000.00. Possibly the extra session may vote no. It looks like going to a big lot of trouble and expense to have that honorable body see differently from when in regular session.

Tariff Pictures.

A Fourteenth street dry goods house last Sunday advertised Smyrna rugs of three square yards each for sale at $2.49.

Well, the duty on those rugs is 60 cents a yard and 40 per cent. advalorem, or $2.80

We again ask if the tariff is a tax?"—New York Press.

What business has a fourteenth street dry goods house advertising on Sunday?

Don't they know Sunday should be observed in a different way than by advertising?

Smyrna Rugs? For sale for 31 cents less than the tariff tax to be paid on landing them in this country?

Smyrna is a city of Asiatic Turkey and we are supposed when we buy Smyrna rugs to get an article made in that city. Does the PRESS desire us to believe these rugs were smuggled into this country and having no duty paid on them they can be sold for a less price than the tariff itself?

Or, do they wish us to believe they were manufactured in this country to be palmed off on the unsuspecting public as Smyrna rugs?

It seems as if the Press had gotten its Fourteenth street merchant, that advetises on Sunday into a dilemma either horn of which does not place him in an enviable position before law abiding citizens.

The question now is, are those Sunday advertised rugs Smuggled or Smyrna?

We again answer Tariff is a Tax.

Of course we mean when it is not evaded.

The New York Press nor any other press not even a Hay Press can make Minnesota farmers believe that a New York merchant is paying $2.80 a piece tariff besides the cost price for Smyrna rugs or any other rugs and selling them for $2.49.

Averaging 47.5 per cent.

CORRESPONDENCE

ANNANDALE.

Rev. Higgins held his usual morning and evening service besides officiating at Silver Creek in the afternoon. The Rev. Mr. Parsons held an Episcopal service in the M. E. church in the afternoon and gave notice that Bishop Gilbert would administer the sacrement of the Lord's supper in two weeks from that time, in the forenoon at the Longworth chapel and would hold a service in this place in the afternoon.

Andrew Francis, photographer here, hired a rig of M. C. O'Loughlin, of the Pleasant Lake House, to go to some place near South Haven, last Sunday and in going through a gate near that place, relying upon the integrity of the horse, he dropped the reins while he closed the gate and the horse being a Broncho of recent importation and not familiar with that practice went on a tare, leaving his driver and the buggy well behind; the latter badly demoralized. The horse was taken up near the house of David Davis, in Southside, while the photographer returned on the cars Monday morning. Mike is decidedly indignant and declares he will bave his "pay for that smashup" but Josiah Allen's wife says "aught from aught aught remains." Remarks, all photographers are not good horsemen.

When a young gentleman takes a young lady out upon the lake to treat her to a boat ride and instructs her in the science of trolling for bass he should not become so much surrounded as to pay out his line and row about for an hour or two without any hook to the line. Imagine his chagrin and the lady's amusement and commisseration for the poor fellow when the line was bauled in—moral—make haste slow and be sure your hook is on the line and baited before you start. I purposely refrain from mentioning names out of regard for the feelings of the parties, especially the gentleman, but anybody is at liberty to guess.

Phil Henniman has gone up into Dakota, with a pair of fine horses, to assist the Dakotans about their wheat harvest.

Thomas Stokes has done some good jobs at painting here, the last being on the store of A. B. Mathews.

We are in the midst of a social and marital scandal. Mrs. Samuel Wells who has run "the oldest and longest established millinery establishmennt" in the place disappeared on the 4th of July last, as did also another married woman a Mrs. Watson. Mrs. Wells leaving three young children. On the same day a certain gay and festive young barber disappeared, leaving some unpaid bills; whether the barber and the women went together or whether it was purely accidental that they all skipped on the same day is not known. Sam whose reputation for moral rectitude is as low down as it well can be, has been absent for several months, on the Pacific coast, looking for a job? put in his reappearance the next day after his wife left, which, by the way, when taken in connection with the sequel looks a little suggestive.

During Well's absence it became notorious that his wife was entertaining in a manner and more than a very generous regard for decency would tolerate. Soon after Wells returned it was given out that if he could find out "who had been there when he was gone" it would be made more than comfortable for them. He has reported that he has had a letter from his wife expressing contrition and desiring to see him, and he has been to St. Paul where she invited him to come, but was not gone long, but could not find her, as he says, in the mean time it is reported that certain prominent parties here have received letters from her threatening that unless they come down and do the handsome thing by Sam she will squeal on them, or in other words tell Sam. This looks very much like an attempt at blackmail; and now it is suspected that they did meet at St. Paul and there concocted this racket between them. It is to be hoped that no man will pay a single nickle of hush money unless he is in the soup. That they are equal to getting up such a scheme to raise money no body that knows them would for a moment doubt.

ROCKFORD.

Farmers make themselves scarce around town now days. Harvesting is pretty near over.

Sec'y. Vice Presidents, Mrs. Perkins, Mrs. Warren, Mrs. Pitt, Mrs. Coverdale.

Aug. 6, had a Floral Temperance Entertainment, at the G. A. R. Hall. It was well attended, and trust much good will follow. We are few in number, but not discouraged and mean to work on, meet every week and know we gain strength.

Our beloved President Mrs. Baker resigned, as she could not be with us much this year: we regret this, as she is so faithful a worker in the cause. We miss her much.

MRS. E. TALLMAN.
Sup't. of Press Work.

NORTH ROCKFORD NUBBINS.

[Too late for last week.]

Rev. J. R. Davies, of Watertown, and Willis E. Johnson, of Delano, came over last Sunday. Mr. Davies preached in the M. E. church. The sermon was very much appreciated.

The arrangements for the festival at Benj. Parmeters, on Friday evening are all complete and an invitation is extended to all.

The charter for the Wilson League of the M. E. church has arrived from New York. The charter though not a costly affair is nicely framed and looks well. It hangs in the church. There should be an Epworth League in every M. E. society.

We notice in the Eagle of last week that the people of Independence do not like Sunday base ball. Boys don't spoil the national game by making a Sunday nuisance of it. Play ball but not on the Sabbath.

HOWARD LAKE.

An impression is abroad that owing to the Windsor House having been burned down, there will be scant accommodation for the large number of visitors to the Fair.

So far from this being the case, the village is prepared to recieve and entertain hospitably every body who comes here during Fair week and we expect the number will far exceed, that of any previous year.

A committee will be chosen on the first of September to complete arrangements so that all visitors can be comfortably accomodated. There will be no over crowding the meals will be abundant in quantity as well as excellent in quality and the sleeping apartment the best that the village can provide.

Your readers can rest assured that not a man woman or child who attends the Fair shall have cause to say that the accomodations in any respect fall short of the conveniences and pleasantness of good hotel management

There is every reason to belive that the exhibits this year will be of an unusually varied and interesting character. We have every reason to believe that the special attractions in racing and the three excellent speakers whom we shall hear on Farmer's day Old Settler's day and Grand Army day respectively will attract a very large attendance and in view of this the village proposes that the accomodation shall be worthy of the occasion and worthy of the very large number of visitors whose presence will be provided for.

If through a misappehensien of these facts there should be any falling off in numbers however slight the committee would regret it. We wish to make our Grand Army and Old Settler's records as complete as it is possible to get them and we can promise that there shall be no failure either in hotel arrangements or in carrying out our programme in every particular.

H. TANNER.
Howard Lake, Minn. Secretary.

LORETTO.

Friday and Saturday were hot enough

John Corcoran is engaged to teach the school in this District this winter.

INDEPENDENCE.

The hot weather of last week was rther against the constitution's of the laboring man but splendid for making the corn crop and if nothing happens we will have a fair yield of corn this Season.

Our mosquito crop for this season has been terrible light but their bills sharp and penetrating. They have got the late improved McKinley bill attachment brings blood at long range: they also favor home protection.

The supply of water through the country is getting very scarce and the indications are that tubular wells will be more plenty. It may be we shall have to bring water from China.

Our World's Fair commissioners want an additional appropriation of $50,000. to what our legislature appropriated last winter for that purpose and talk of having the legistature convene in order that they may get the appropriation. Hardly think the people want it there will no benefit be derived from it for a majority of the people of Minnesota. Let us have a little rest in appropriations.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7, 1891.

There is trepidation among the department clerks, for the idea is out that the old stand and deliver style of "voluntary" capign contribution is to come in again, in order to raise a fund to help out McKinely, the chamipon of what has been called the most vicious piece of class legislature in our history, in his Ohio fight. It is wellknown that Mr. Clarkson, the new chairman of the republican National excutive committee, is what is known as a "practical politician," and his frequent conference with Secretary Foster, who belongs to the same school, and others high in the department has started the rumor that the boys, and the girls too, will soon be given a very plain hint that "voluntary" subscriptions to the McKinley campaign fund will pe acceptable and in order.

It is not probably in view of Mr. Blaine's most shameful characterizati on of the McKinely bill as "the most shameful measure ever proposed to a civilized people" that either he or his friends will make any very pronounced efforts to assist in electing the author of the bill govenor of Ohio, in fact there are people who belive they are more likely to assist in defeating him

The administration is scattered around rather promisucously this week and nothing but the merest routine business is being conducted, owing to the absence of the heads of departments. Secetary Foster was the last to go, and befor going he denied that he would become a candidate for the Senate in case Sherman withdrew. Notwithstanding his denial there are good reasons for the belief that he is now in Ohio laying wires to do that very thing.

Democrats here are greatly pleased to hear from republican sources that Senator Quay propases to manage the campaign in Pennsyvania this year and that in his effort for vindication he may even become chairman of the republican State committee. Nothing couldbe better for the demmocrats than this programme and the only fear is that it may not be carried out. The fact has has been recognized by the democrats ever sincehtne carnival of Delamater and not ended by Treasure Bardsley though he is the last one that was caught, that the democrat party has a good fighting chance to carry Pennsylvania this year, and that chance will certainly be greatly improved if the man who was forced out of the chairmanship of the Republican National Committee in defference to of prominent the openly expressed sentiment newspapersand men in his own party shall attempt to openly manage the republican campaign.

The meeting of the Executive committee of the National Assocition of Democratic clubs, which is to be held next week in New York city, was called to hear reports as to the progress made in organizing new clubs and to discuss ways of increasing rapid progress already made. Secretary Gardner said: "After our meeting the Pyesident of our Association, Hon. Chauncey F. Black, of Pennylvania, will start upon a tour of Ohio Indiand, Iowa and Illinois his purpose being to streng then our organization in those States. Our meeting will have no bearing on the interes of tany Presidental candidate and under our present constitution we are obliged to confine ourselves to the tariff as the leading issue.

Mr. Clarkson thinks to fool the democrates by giving it out in newspaper interviews that the republican nati-State campaigning this year, but he onal committee will take no part in the makes a mistake as big as a house. The democrats know that Mr. Clarkson's committee is already taking quite an extensive part in the campaign in Ohio and Iowa, in adition to its laborious duties in pushing the Blaine and Alger Pressidential ticket throught the National League of Repuplican clubs, of which Mr. Clarkson is presidente, and also that itis engaged in hustling amounge the protected manafacture for contibutions to the big coruption fund which it has been decided raise.

Payments made on account of pensions signed the first of the month foot up $7.500.000, which brings the Treasury very near to the deficit point again, although by the juggled figures the surplus is shown to be in excess of $48,000,000.

Commissioner of Immigration Owen who made the brake of writing a letter saying that Welch tin-plate workers could be brought to this country under contract, can make no more such errors, as an offical order has been issued by the Treasury department stating that all decisiong relating to immigration will be made by Assistant Secretary Nettleton. This reduces Owen to a mere clerkship, and if he was a man of independence he would throw up the postion.

Facts About Flags.

1. To "strike the flag" is to lower the national colors in token of submission.

2. Flags are used as the symbol of rank and command, the officers using them being called flag officers. Such flags, are square to distinguish them from other banners.

3. A "flag of truce" is a white flag, display to an enemy to indicate a desire for a parley or consultation.

1. The white flag is a a sign of peace. After a battle parties from both sides often go out to a field to rescue the wounded or bury the dead under the protection of a white flag,

5. The red flag is a flag of defiance, and is often used by revolutionists. In our service it is a mark of danger, and shows a vessel to be receiving or discharging her powder.

6. The black flag is a signal of piracy.

7. The yellow flag shows a vessel to be in quarantine, or is the sign of a contagious disease.

8. A flag at half mast means mourning. Fishing and other vessels return with a flag at half-mast to announce the loss of some of them.

9. Dipping the flag is lowering it slightly and the hoisting it again to salute a vessel or fort

10. If the President of the United States goes afloat, the American flag is carried in bow of his barge or hoisted at the main of the vessel on board of which he is.—Ex.

A NEW YORK company has been organized whose business will be lending umbrellas. A short reign, in such a case, will contribute the most success.

MISS ANNA WILLIAMS, the girl whose classic profile is reproduced on the silver dollar, is still a Philadelhia teacher, as she was when her features attracted the attention of the mint engraver.

THE proportion of insane to sane persons in the United States is one in every 262; in Scotland it is one in every 574; in the agricultural districts of England it is one in 820; in London the proportion is one in 400.

A MAN in San Francisco has a peculiar mania for opening and closing doors, and will stand for hours at a time at one of the entrances to the post office opening and closing the doors for the accommodation of the pedestrians.

MISS HELEN GLADSTONE, the "Grand Old Man's" favorite daughter, resembles her father in looks and possesses a great part of his extraordinary vitality. She can tell a story that will set a dinner-table in a roar, and is quite original in her dress.

IT'S all very well to promenade the deck of an Atlantic racer and bet she'll scale down to the Majestic's time, but the boys that saw the wood and get no fame out of it are the stokers. It is not always the major general that wins the battle; it's the grimy, stalwart unknowns that serve the guns.

VOTING day in Japan presents some curious sights. The voters have to don their best garments and proceed to the voting counter, there to ballot without any parleying as soon after eight o'clock as possible. After casting ballots they make a bow to the assemblage present, in which their heads nearly strike the floor, and retire as silently as they came.

THE proportions of the human figure are six times the length of the right foot; the face, from the highest point of the forehead, where the hair begins, to the end of the chin, is one-tenth of the whole stature; the hand, from wrist to the end of the middle finger, is also one-tenth of the total height; from the crown to the nape of the neck, is one-twelfth of the stature.

MRS. CHAUNCEY M. DEPEW is a handsome woman, with very dark and expressive eyes, brown hair and a complexion of more than common clearness and brilliancy. Her nature is essentially social, and she is fitted, by reason of her polished manners, keen wit and many graceful accomplishments, to assume a leading social position. She is devoted to charitable enterprises of all kinds.

BENJAMIN F. BUTLER never forgets a name or a face. A New York paper says that he has in his offices, both in Boston and that city, an alphabetical list containing the name of every person with whom he has had any business dealings. The names of all persons who call upon him at his office are entered, together with such information as he may from time to time obtain in regard to them.

FOR the successful treatment of his wife in a dangerous surgical operation, performed by Dr. Michelsen, of Wiesbaden, Herr von Donner, a merchant of Hamburg, has placed at the disposal of the authorities in Hamburg, as a thank offering, the sum of two millon marks. The money is to be expended in the erection of a hospital in Hamburg, in which Dr. Michelsen is to be installed as chief physician.

THE British house of commons is becoming sensible and more inclined to transact its business at proper hours. Every year the tendency is for shorter sittings. A few years ago it sat till two or three o'clock in the morning, and often after the morning papers had gone to press. Now it is impatient at being called upon to sit until one o'clock in the morning on only two days in the week. Midnight is the time when the last trains go homeward, and the members do not like to be detained.

THE important question of the admission to the world's fair in '93 is practically settled. Fifty cents will be demanded of every one entering the gates, but, the money once paid, the visitor will be entitled to see everything on the grounds. There will be no side shows. To encourage people who bring exhibits from a great distance and at a great expense licenses will be granted for the selling of goods. It will be possible to buy an ivory-back scratcher from a Chinaman, or a carved scarabaeus from an Egyptian princess, but it will cost nothing extra to see any of the exhibits.

IT is said that Italy, having got over her huff, would like to get back into the diplomatic circle at Washington, but the rupture over the New Orleans tragedy must be amicably settled before Italy can return a minister to this government. We must show some disposition to grant an indemnity in order that Italy may kiss and make up without loss of dignity. Contrary to the custom in our official life a vacancy in the diplomatic corps is not filled by promotion. The Marquis Imperiali cannot become minister, because he is a secretary only. At present Baron Fava is taking things quietly in Rome.

MRS. C. R. KNOWLTON, a professional nurse in Boston, says it's two years now since the grip was in Boston, and it has passed away. Most people have forgotten about it, and few think it did very much damage. True, it didn't kill so many people as a great epidemic might have done. But the grip did a great deal that everybody doesn't know about. It ain't at all extravagant to say that the grip left behind it when it got out of Boston hundreds of invalids who will remain invalids for life. For the next few years the doctors will have on their hands all manner of maladies superinduced by the grip.

NEW YORK, N. Y., Aug. 11.—At 8 o'clock this morning the temeperature here was 79 deg. At 10 o'clock it was 88 deg., and half an hour later the mercury had not crept any higher in the tube.

The thermometer at 1 o'clock this afternoon registered 92 deg.

The piled up thunder heads loomed in the sky, and mothers cried out in piteous thanksgiving, and all the town felt glad, for a shower—a downpour that spattered on the hot stones like suds—soon followed.

Just as soon as the shower began the thermometer fell 2 degrees. The humidity at that hour had decreased to 72 per cent.

During the twenty-four hours ending at midnight, there have been forty cases of heat prostration in this city, eleven of which have proved fatal.

THE house of R. M. Juvenal, in Kansas City, Kan., was wrecked by dynamite on the night of the 11th. The occupants escaped. The suspected perpetrator of the deed is a Miss Paffman, who was incensed because Juvenal would not marry her.

AN explosion occurred at the works of the Atlantic refining Company at Philadelphia, on the 11th. Two men, James Sades and Richard Casberry were injured so that they died in a few hours.

SECRET service officers at Shasta, Cal., on the 11th seized $9,000 worth of opium and broke up nine furnaces run by Chinese employed in manufacturing opium from the crude material.

THE yacht Nellie C., with a pleasure party of four young men and six girls aboard, was caught in a sudden squall on the 11th, on Maumee bay, Toledo, O. The girls crowded into the little cabin to escape a wetting. When the squall struck the boat she capsized. Three of the girls were extricated from the cabin, but the remaining three—Lena Sanberg, Ellen Feeley and Clara Bowds—were drowned.

Two suicides ars reported from St. Louis, Mo., on the 11th. Mrs. Kindel and Newton Long both took the pistol route.

A POLICEMAN of Pittsburg, Pa., named Henry M. Dehl committed suicide on the 11th, by shooting himself through the head. He was married but was in love with another woman.

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS

BURNED THEIR IDOLS.

Successful Work of Missionaries Among the Chippewas.

Capt. Jack Crawford, the poet scout, has returned to Duluth from a trip to the northern part of Vermillion lake and reports that Frank Porter, a half-breed, and Mrs. Dempsey, have for three months past been working among the Chippewa Indians on the reservation and have converted nearly all to Christianity. Old Chief Wake-Me-Up is one of the most ardent converts. Thirty of them were baptized by the Methodist minister at Tower. The Indians gathered all their idols in a big pile and burned them up.

Four Arms Blown Off.

A damper was put on the pleasure of the railroad celebration at Park Rapids by a terrible accident, whereby two young men lost both arms. Three boys, who probably had never seen a cannon before, were set to work firing the big gun. Will Zimbrick and Will Fox were loading, each having hold of the rammer with both hands, when it was discharged, tearing all four arms completely off at the elbow, simply leaving the skin and finger nails hanging. A subscription of nearly $600 was raised for them.

Minneapolis Canoeists.

W. H. Dewey and Charles F. Baker, of Minneapolis, arrived at Grand Forks, N. D., in a birch bark canoe. They left Minneapolis June 1, went down the Mississippi to the mouth of the Minnesota, up the Minnesota to Big Stone lake, through Big Stone and Traverse lakes. Their canoe and camping outfit was conveyed by wagon 25 miles to Wahpeton, where they took the Red river and rowed to Grand Forks. They traveled about 1,200 miles.

Accused of Murder.

Paul Latuski, a little boy of 8 years, was drowned in the Mississippi river at St. Paul. It was claimed by a brother of the drowned boy that Frank Ratinski, aged 12, pulled the boy into the river and held him under water until he was drowned. Ratinski was arrested. He declared that the Latuski boy was intoxicated, and claimed that he was trying to teach the little fellow how to swim.

Law and Order League Formed.

The organization of the law and order league of St. Paul was confirmed by a largely attended mass meeting. Judge J. H. McMillan is president and other leading citizens are prominent in the league. It dates its birth July 22, 1891, and fixes that date because of the popular uprising which stopped the Fitzsimmons-Hall fight announced for then.

Only Got What They Deserved.

The committee appointed by Gov. Merriam to investigate the charges of harsh treatment of convicts in the state penitentiary reported that although punishment in a few cases had been severe, it was justifiable and no more than necessary. The committee recommended the adoption of the parole system in managing convicts.

Acres of Grain Damaged.

A terrible rain and hail storm passed over part of Polk county. The storm was accompanied by considerable wind, and the rain was the heaviest ever known in that section. In the southern part of the county a strip of country a mile wide and 12 miles long was devastated by hail. From 3,000 to 4,000 acres of standing grain was damaged.

Tried to Kill His Father-in-Law.

A young Belgian, E. Denhaernick, attempted to shoot his father-in-law, named Thonet, at Faribault, hitting him in the head and making an ugly wound, though not fatal. Denhaernick then fired several shots at young Thonet. Denhaernick was under arrest. The quarrel was about a load of wheat.

The Work of Burglars.

Burglars set fire to the barn of James Thomas, a farmer living in Wynette, Isanti county, and while the attention of the family was called to the barn the house was entered, a chest containing $300 dragged from the house to a marsh some distance away and the money extracted.

The News Briefly Chronicled.

A fire at Crookston destroyed nearly one-half of a business block. Loss over $50,000.

The Wadena & Park Rapids railroad has reached the latter place.

Ole Peterson, one of the pioneer settlers of Pope county, died at St. Peter, aged 55 years. Mr. Peterson was the first sheriff of Pope county.

P. H. Pederson has been appointed postmaster at Carmen, Polk county, vice J. N. Borley, resigned.

Contracts have been awarded for the new state building at Faribault for the use of the school for the deaf.

Hail destroyed 400 acres of grain in the town of Martinsburg.

L. N. Lund, an old resident of Grove City, shot himself. The cause of the suicide was unknown.

Work has been suspended on the new courthouse at Minneapolis owing to lack of money.

A severe storm of wind and hail passed through the grain fields 4 miles north of Montevideo. The damage was from $5,000 to $10,000.

At a city election Duluth it was voted to issue bonds the amount of $800,000 for construction of a public waterworks system about Fourth street.

The ninth attempt was made to burn the Turnquist block at Minneapolis. A blaze was discovered in a closet on the third floor, but was extinguished without any serious damage. The fire was plainly incendiary, and was started by means of rags and paper saturated with oil.

R. M. Hunter and A. B. McFarlane, of Duluth, have donated five acres of land in Glen Avon division and Hunter's park, on which a $25,000 Catholic orphan's home will be erected.

Robert Wille, an Englishman 20 years of age, fell from the Laurel avenue bridge in Minneapolis, where he was employed, and sustained fatal injuries.

A BUCKEYE JESSE JAMES.

A Daring Bandit Makes a Successful Raid on an Ohio Bank—He Secures a Big Sum of Money, Shoots Three Men, Killing One, and Escapes.

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 10.—A special to the Evening Dispatch from Lima, O., says: One of the boldest bank robberies and murders ever perpetrated in this section of the country occurred Saturday morning at Columbus Grove, a town of about 2,000 people, 12 miles north of here. Cashier T. J. Maple had just opened the Exchange bank, of which his father is proprietor, and laid out about $3,000 near the cashier's window. About 8:30 a man appeared in the door with a revolver in each hand. He immediately began shooting. Cashier Maple was struck twice, once in the arm and once in the right side. As he fell to the floor, an old farmer, William Van Debark, aged 60, entered the door, having come to get his money for some hogs he had just sold. The robber turned and shot him through and through. The old man died of his wounds a few hours later.

A third man sat in the lobby of the bank paralyzed with fear. He was not molested. The desperado then grabbed $1,300 in greenbacks, shoved them in the pockets of his sack coat and darted out the door shouting: "I'm a second Jesse James." Quite a crowd had been attracted by the sound of the shots, but there was a scattering when the wild-eyed murderer appeared on the street, having a gun in either hand and shooting indiscriminately. One of the bystanders, Henry Buck, failed to get out of the way fast enough and was struck down by a bullet from the rapidly-speaking revolvers. The fellow ran to the outskirts of the town and disappeared in a big corn field.

The desperado is described as being short and heavy set, with full face and small black mustache. He wore a black alpaca cap, black sack coat, blue pants with white stripe, and no vest. He appeared to be about 30 or 35 years old.

A posse was quickly organized and started in pursuit. If found, the fellow will be shot down like a dog. It is thought the wounds of Maple and Buck are not necessarily fatal. Van Debark, who was killed, was a prosperous former in Union township. He leaves a large family. A big reward is offered for the capture of the villain.

A special from Lima, O., states that the murderer has been traced to a thick forest near Ada, and may be captured very soon. There is an idea that he has already been able to get near enough to a railroad to escape. It is believed that he is one of the Marvin Kuhns gang.

MANY DROWNED.

Sailboats on Pewaukee Lake, Wis., Saginaw Bay, Mich., and in Boston Harbor, Capsize—A Total of Thirteen Lives Lost.

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 10.—Four young people, children of prominent Milwaukee business men, were drowned at Pewaukee lake, 20 miles from here, Sunday. They were out in a small sailboat with three other young people. A squall struck the boat, capsizing it. It was heavily ballasted and sunk almost immediately, leaving the seven people struggling in the water. The names of the drowned are: Albert and Emma Barth, Martha Kindling and Clara Siegler. The ages of the young people ranged from 15 to 20 years, and their fathers are Louis Kindling, Peter Barth and Leopold Siegler. The young people had been spending a few days near Pewaukee lake, which is a favorite resort for Milwaukeeans.

DROWNED IN SAGINAW BAY.

SAGINAW, Mich., Aug. 10.—While sailing in a small boat on Saginaw bay off Winona beach, a summer resort, Sunday afternoon, Frank Winterhalter, of the firm of Ferris & Winterhalter, and Edward Wittner were drowned, a quall throwing them into the water. Another young man was of the ill-fated party, but his identity has not yet been established. All the young men lived here and were unmarried.

DISASTER IN BOSTON HARBOR.

BOSTON, Aug. 10.—Disaster overtook a pleasure party out sailing in the harbor Sunday afternoon and six lives were sacrificed. John Burk, a carpenter, living on Gates street, hired a 14-foot sailboat, canoe rigged, and took out for a sail his three children, aged respectively 14, 10 and 8 years, and his niece and nephew, Annie and James Carmody, aged 11 and 13 years. After sailing a mile they put ashore, Burk going on land after some candy for the children. While there he met three friends, James Ballard, Thaddeus Manton and Ferguson Churchill. With these men he got to drinking and finally, at his invitation, they, too, entered the boat, making nine in all, and the boat was slowly pushed before the light easterly breeze. When it became necessary to come about at the pumping station at 4 o'clock p. m. the men, being befuddled, crowded over to the lee side of the boat, which capsized. The water at this point is not very deep and the mast of the boat projected out some distance. To this all hands clung. It was over half an hour before help could reach them, by which time six of them had gone down from exhaustion. The boy Vincent and two men, Ballard and Churchill, were saved. Burk nd the remainder of the family perished.

Railway Statistics.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—The introduction to "Poor's Manual of Railroads" for 1891 has been issued. It shows, among other things, that the total number of miles of railroads in the United States at the close of 1890 was 166,817, of which 5,739 miles were constructed during the year. The total amount of capital invested is figured at $10,122,635,900, an increase over the year previous of $441,-693,651. The gross earnings of the roads were $1,096,847,428, equal to 10.8 per cent. on investment. Net earnings were $346,-921,318, or 3.4 per cent. on capital. The number of passengers carried by railroads during the year was 520,439,082.

Eat Everything in Sight.

FINDLAY, O., Aug. 10.—The grasshoppers are doing more harm in this part of the state than they were known to before for years. In many parts of the country they swarm in myriads and literally devour everything before them, causing serious damage to all growing crops. Reports from different sections state that they have eaten up and entirely destroyed the clover seed crop and are foraging on the pastures to such an extent as to make the feed problem for the stock a serious one to the farmers. They are also causing serious annoyance in the wheat fields

A DEATH-DEALING GALE.

A Cyclone Causes Much Destruction in Ashland and Washburn, Wis.—A Circus Tent Blown Down—Two Persons Killed and Many Hurt—Tornado in Iowa.

ASHLAND, Wis., Aug. 10.—Ashland and Washburn were struck by a terrible tornado Saturday afternoon about 3:30 o'clock. Houses were blown down, buildings unroofed and many vessels driven ashore. At Washburn a circus tent was wrecked. Two people were killed and fifty injured. The cyclone came from the northwest, and was sudden. Rain poured in torrents. The main business street was like a river. The storm drove through the large hotel, the Chequamegon, like a millrace. Twenty yachts on the bay were wrecked. Four men were picked up off a capsized sailboat after the storm. The Swedish Lutheran church, the Genery block, the Daily Press office, the Ashland theater and Franklin house were unroofed.

At Washburn, across the bay, Williams' circus was in full blast when the storm struck. Prof. Williams was going through an act with trained horses when the tent fell. The horses, wild with fright, burst out through the frantic mass of people. Two little children of George La Belle and an unknown boy were taken out dead. They were blown 500 feet. Miss Wilson's right leg was broken. The depot was turned into a hospital and the dead and wounded carried there. It was a terrible scene. Mothers were frantically looking for children and children wandering about wounded and bleeding. The injured number at least fifty, several of whom will die. The wires are all down. Whole blocks of business houses were torn from their foundations and blown down, injuring many people. The Feustad building, just completed, was totally demolished. Seven persons were in the top story, but all except one escaped without injury. The animals of Williams' circus escaped from their cages. An anaconda is still at large and several other animals have not been captured. The roof was torn off the large Omaha elevator and considerable grain spoiled by water. The damage in Washburn is estimated at $50,000. Tramways on the coal docks were demolished. The storm was similar to that at Superior several weeks ago.

OTTUMWA, Ia., Aug. 10.—The terrible heat of Sunday morning, which reached 99 degrees in the shade, was broken by a tornado which struck this city about 2 o'clock in the afternoon. The storm in its full fury covered a somewhat limited area. Its course was from the southwest toward the northeast. The first damage done by it was at Humeston, where the wind was most furious. Cars standing on the Keokuk & Western track were blown off and the roof of the roundhouse was lifted. At Corydon the Methodist church and courthouse were damaged.

In this city the wind blew with great violence, taking off the roof of A. D. Moss' dry goods store, the roof of Harper & McIntyre Co.'s wholesale hardware house, the roof of A. P. Peterson's grocery store, damaging the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy round house, overturning the scaffolding about the coal palace and precipitating it on a lot of telegraph and telephone wires; uprooting great trees all over the city, and demolishing barns and other fragile outbuildings. The path of the storm through the country has been marked by the destruction of corn and the demolition of grain in stack. There was very little rain, and the damage was wholly by wind.

BLOOMFIELD, Ia., Aug. 10.—One of the most destructive wind and rainstorms ever known in this section of Iowa passed over Davis county Sunday afternoon. Houses were unroofed, fences blown down, besides much damage done to the fruit crop.

DES MOINES, Ia., Aug. 10.—A terrific tornado, accompanied by rain and hail, passed through Decatur county Sunday about 12 o'clock, doing much damage. It was the worst storm known in that section. Crops are practically destroyed over a large section of the country. Trees were blown down and houses unroofed.

LIABILITIES OF $1,000,000.

Failure of the Masonic Savings Bank of Louisville—Depositors Secure.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Aug. 10.—The Masonic savings bank, the second to fail in Louisville within a month, assigned to the Germanic Safety Vault & Trust Company at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon. The failure occasioned no surprise in business circles, as the bank has been looked upon as on the verge of bankruptcy for some months. The bank owed $132,500 when the balances were made out with the clearing house at noon, which it was unable to pay. There have been three runs on the bank, the first in January last, the second following the Schwartz failure, the third following the failure of the Falls City bank. Friday a meeting of the directors was called to devise means for meeting the present difficulties and keeping the doors open. After considerable discussion the hopelessness of the situation was apparent, and it was decided to assign. Accordingly a deed of assignment was made and T. W. Spindle, the vice president and manager of the trust company, was sent for. He took possession at once. President Jake Krieger, the directors, and Mr. Engelhoff, the cashier, say that depositors will be paid dollar for dollar. The exact liabilities are unknown, but it is said will be more than $1,000,000. No other banks are in danger.

MUST RELY ON AMERICA.

Without United States Wheat Europe Would Be on the Verge of Famine.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—Beerbolm, calculating that America will be able to spare 25,000,000 quarters of wheat, estimates the surplus aggregate of countries with a good harvest at 50,000,000 quarters, and the requirements of other countries at 48,000,000 quarters.

The News, commenting on these figures, says it is not many years since Europe was practically independent of American supplies. This season it is clear that without America's help Europe will be on the verge of starvation before the next harvest.

Death of a Negro Who Has Seen the Father of His Country.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—John Duckett, one of the aged patriarchs of Washington, died here at the age of 106 years. Duckett was born in slavery, in Prince George's county, Md. He was classed as a negro, but Indian blood predominated in his veins. The master who raised him sold him to a second master, and he to a third. This last in 1825 gave him his freedom. When a lad of 14 he saw George Washington, but the only recollection of the great man was a dazed remembrance of his gorgeous apparel.

A STREET-CAR ROMANCE.

The Accidental Discovery of an Observant Passenger.

A man who weaves romances out of the commonest threads said this: "I boarded a Madison avenue car on its way up town, and, dropping down in the corner near the door, began to study types. The first thing I discovered was that the conductor was a man of intelligence and refinement, although he looked very rough. His hands at once attracted my attention as he placed the change of a dollar into my palm. They weren't clean—how could they be?—but they were shapely and delicate—the hands of a young man who had never worked hard at anything. My curiosity was now awakened, and, beckoning him to me, I asked a question relative to the departure of the trains from the Grand Central station. He made reply in a well-worded phrase, pronunciation and modulation faultless. I now began to study his face. I could see that it was singularly manly and handsome, although marred by a stubby beard and darkened by dust and exposure. I began to be deeply interested in my knight of the bell-pull and had carefully noted his number, when, at the Twenty-third street corner, as always happens, a crowd of homeward-bound shoppers and idlers, all women, pushed their way into the car. It was more than full; it was packed. In front of me stood a charming little girl of eighteen or twenty, in a pale green cloth costume, beautifully braided, the Medici collar of the Louis XVI. coat framing a face of rare beauty. Imagine my surprise, nay, horror—yes, more, my disgust, my everything—to notice that my hero, in handing the change to this dainty girl, deliberately took hold of her hand and pressed it for an instant in his, with an almost convulsive grip, and then to see the girl's big brown eyes turned up and fixed upon this young man's face.

"'Aha,' thought I, 'here's love playing fantastic tricks! Fie, for shame! Cupid ringing up fares on a New York street car, shouting out: "Come, now, step lively," or "Move up in front!"'

"But in a few moments I had reasoned it out—to my own satisfaction, any way. Of course this young man is not a New Yorker, but the girl is. He met her in some other city, when his family had plenty of money. Suddenly his father fails and the young man comes to New York to go into business, and be near the girl he loves. Only college bred, no good for a banking or commercial house, he goes down, down, and finally becomes a street-car conductor. The old love in this young heart is still faithful to him, however, and takes a ride occasionally on his car in order to get a look and a pressure of the hand.

"It's very hard to be a street-car conductor and be in love with a girl who lives in a palace on the line of your road, but it has its compensations. Her family would never suspect that the conductor meant anything when he looked up at the girl's window as his car went rumbling by, and then she can, by waiting for his car, often be during the day quite alone with him. Indeed, it's quite romantic. He may even deadhead her over the line if he happens to be quite sure that the terrible spotter is not hidden behind a paper in the corner of the car. I sincerely hope that the young man got the girl at the end of the route. I mean in the end—that is, in the long run."—N. Y. Sun.

A CLEVER ATTORNEY.

How He Secured an Acquittal for His Client Against Great Odds.

In a trial in the United States court where a young man had been indicted for passing a counterfeit ten-dollar bill, the counsel of the latter, C. A. Baldwin, objected to Gen. Strickland's course in endeavoring to prove by business men the fact that the bill in question was a counterfeit, but to no purpose. Finally, improving a favorable chance, Mr. Baldwin substituted a good bill for the counterfeit, which genuine money Gen. Strickland then proved by three business men to be the rankest kind of counterfeit. Thereupon Mr. Baldwin vehemently demanded that attention be given to his objections, and Judge Dundy insisted that the district attorney send out for a bank cashier and an expert. With great confidence Gen. Strickland handed the expert the bill—after establishing his business and his experience in handling money—and said:

"State to the jury whether in your opinion that bill is good or bad."

"What!" shouted the attorney," "do you mean to say that bill is not a counterfeit?"

"Yes, sir; if you will bring it down to the Omaha National bank, we will give you the gold for it."

Then there was a scene, in the midst of which Mr. Baldwin managed to explain to the court that he had changed bills without the knowledge of the district attorney, and that, in view of the fact that three good business men had testified that a genuine bill was a counterfeit, he thought considerable allowance should be made for his client—an ignorant country boy—in mistaking a counterfeit for a good bill. The jury were evidently impressed with the idea, for they returned a verdict of acquittal. —Omaha Bee.

TAKE A LITTLE REST.

Systematic Methods Make This Possible Even to Busy Mothers.

Good mother, maker of numerous pies, mender of numerous hose, overseer of a great province—a household—rest a little. Have a chair by the stove, and when you peep into the oven, sit while you look, yea, even a moment after; you will work all the faster for the short change of posture. While mending have your chair in the coziest corner, where good light will come in, and let the sun strike upon you if possible, so that you may get the strengthening health-giving influence of it. Drop your hands occasionally and let them rest. Let your eye wander out through the window glass as far as possible and rest your eyes by looking at something interesting out of doors. Don't rule all the time. Drop the reins of household government for a little while, unbend yourself and sit down on the rug and play with the children, and, as it were, become again a child.

Economize your strength. Sit when you can. Do not hold the baby when it can rest and grow just as well in its crib. By resting when you can, by planning the work to be done, and by being systematic and orderly in all things, a woman's work at home is more easily done.—Living Issues.

FOR TIME.

Oh! for time, amid life's rush,
To learn the bird's free note;
To list the evening's gentle hush;
To watch fair clouds afloat;
To mark the grace of flowers and leaves,
With a sense of all their sweet;
To ken the charms that nature weaves
In the green turf at our feet.

Oh! for time for thoughtful heed
Of the good e'en we might do,
Of the joy that comes of a loving deed,
Or an act that is just or true;
Out of the night so dark that speeds,
Wherever may be the morn,
On this dear earth, with its charms and needs,
No other day shall dawn.

Oh! for time, in the rush and the race,
To turn our feet aside,
The beauty of earth and sky to trace,
And the charm of ocean wide;
To note in the wild and jostling throng,
Some fellow crushed or driven,
And give our hand as we go along;
This were to well have striven.

CAPTURED AN OUTLAW.

While Carrying Glad News to a Ticket-of-Leave Man.

"H, WILL, the bluecoats have got Bob Fletcher, the bush-ranger, this time, unless you can stow me away in your hut until they pass."

"How can I give you shelter in the cabin, Bob? You know if the police come they will not even leave the hearthstone unturned in their search."

"Then I'll sit here in your doorway and prepare to give the officers a warm reception," replied the outlaw as he threw himself from the back of his jaded steed, and drawing his revolvers seated himself near the entrance to the rude abode which sheltered the ticket-of-leave man, William Stewart.

"No, no," exclaimed the latter; "you shall commit no murder on these premises. Look, you are armed, and may take by force what I rather would keep from you."

"What do you mean, Will?" asked the robber quickly.

"I mean," replied the other, thoughtfully, "that Black Duke, the fleetest horse between the sea coast and Ballarat, is feeding in the shed back of the hut. Your weapons are loaded, you are a desperate man. How, then, can I prevent you if you see fit to take the animal?"

"By heavens, Will, I understand you," exclaimed the bushranger, as he grasped the hand of the ticket-of-leave man; "and believe me, the time will come when you will have occasion to thank God that you extended me this help;" and the outlaw dashed the rowels of his spurs into the horse's side and rode rapidly away.

Scarcely had the hoof-beats of Black Duke died away than a cloud of dust arose from the direction of the metropolis, out of which soon appeared a company of mounted police. Dashing up to the hut the leader called:

"Ah, Stewart, where is that rascal, Fletcher? Hereabout, I dare say, for there is his horse that we have chased these ten miles."

"Yes, lieutenant, that is the bush-ranger's horse, but the man has gone."

"Which way? Where? How?"

"He forced the Duke into his service and rode away on his back, sir."

"What?" exclaimed the officer; "did the villain steal your horse? Why did you not shoot him dead?"

"Because I was unarmed."

"A likely story," returned the lieutenant, angrily. "But we must go after him. Two of you remain here, and mind that you do not let the ticket-of-leave man out of your sight. And you," continued the officer to Stewart, "may think yourself lucky if you do not see the inside of the hulks again for this piece of work."

The lieutenant was destined, however, to be unsuccessful, and returned to the sheep-herder's hut empty-handed.

"If I did not think that you were a square man, Stewart," he remarked, as he threw himself from his horse, "I should consider it my duty to take you back to Melbourne."

"Lieutenant," answered Stewart, "I can readily see why it is my conduct looks strange to you; but if you yourself were forced to live here alone in these wilds, you would think twice before you made a mortal enemy of a bushranger."

"I'LL GIVE THE OFFICERS A WARM RECEPTION."

"Well, well, perhaps I should," replied the officer, "but get us something to eat and we'll say no more about it."

Some six months after the escape of Bob Fletcher we meet him again, but this time he is surrounded by a dozen or more members of his fierce band. Yet all the faces which are lighted by the camp-fire do not belong to robbers; two, at least, are feminine, and one is exceedingly lovely. The ladies are seated side by side on a trunk, while about them are scattered chests and boxes, with their contents of wearing apparel and toilet articles.

Near them, lying on the ground, are three men, their arms pinioned.

"Ladies," began Fletcher, as he approached the two women, "I am sorry to trouble you, but I must take a look into the trunk."

"Oh, sir," answered the younger of the two, "it does contain a treasure; a treasure of countless value, not only to your poor captives, but to another, whose life has, alas, been all too sad."

The maiden took from her neck a golden chain, from which was suspended a key, and handed both to the bandit.

On the top were a few articles of feminine clothing, which the bush-ranger removed with somewhat more delicacy than might have been expected in one of his stamp.

Suddenly he started, rose almost to his feet, then seized the burning knot from his attendant's grasp, while he exclaimed in a hoarse voice:

"Go join your comrades and tell them to stop all further search for our prisoners' effects. He who disobeys dies by my hand. Go!"

"Women, come hither and tell me whose likeness is that," and the robber chief pointed to a large photograph of a fine-looking young man.

"It is the picture of him whom you are this night to despoil of his dearest treasure, proof of the innocence of a crime under the stigma of which he has labored these many years."

"His name, I say; his name!" exclaimed the bushranger.

"It is written in his own hand on the back of the picture."

As the robber turned the cabinet he read: "Yours, with unchanging love, William Stewart."

For a moment the outlaw remained silent, gazing at the signature, then he returned the likeness to its place in the trunk, and to his captives he said in a voice husky with emotion:

"Ladies, I beg you will forgive me for the treatment you have received from me and my band. To the original of that picture I owe my life. A friend of his, or one who could but speak his name, shall ever find safety and kindly treatment at the hands of Bob Fletcher, the bushranger."

"WHOSE LIKENESS IS THAT?"

Before the two women could recover from their surprise their captor had drawn the keen blade of his knife across the bonds which had secured their fellow-prisoners, and in a voice that rang from tree to tree he ordered his band to replace every article as they had found it, and load all again into the wagon from which they had been taken.

Though much surprised, the robbers did not dare to question the orders of their chief, but obeyed in sullen silence.

As the sun began to gild the tree tops a heavy covered wagon, drawn by two yoke of oxen, halted before the cabin of William Stewart, the ticket-of-leave man.

The sturdy driver was just coiling up the long lash of his whip when he was joined by those who were traveling in his company, two ladies and three men. One of the latter was mounted on a horse whose glossy hair was black as midnight. As the rider drew rein he called in a cheery voice:

"Oh, Will Stewart! Come, I've brought you back the Duke that you so kindly loaned me some months since."

While the outlaw was speaking he had dismounted and assisted one of the ladies to do likewise. It was the younger and handsomer of the two, and as her delicate foot touched the ground she raised her veil, and turning said in a low voice:

"William! have you forgotten me?"

For a moment the ex-convict and the brave girl stood, lost to all the world, when their bliss was broken in upon by heavy hoof-beats hurrying toward them. Looking up the party descried a body of police.

"Ah, Will, you see," coolly remarked Fletcher, "you see they are after me."

"But there is the Duke, man! Mount him and escape," said Stewart.

"No, no, my friend," exclaimed the bushranger. "It must come sooner or later. I will meet my fate like a man." And drawing his weapons from his belt he dropped them to the ground. Then folding his arms across his chest he walked forward to meet the officers.

It was a singular group that breakfasted that morning at the hut of the ticket-of-leave man. Leaving his men to secure their prisoner, the lieutenant hurried toward the sheep-herder, exclaiming joyfully:

"Good news, friend Stewart, good news! We have just received word from England that you were innocent of the crime for which you were transported."

"Ah, lieutenant, you are a tardy bearer of such news. This lady has outstripped you, and captured a bushranger into the bargain."—Boston Globe.

Melting a Crowd.

At 5:30 o'clock in the afternoon, when hundreds of people were rushing into the New York end of the bridge, a man who stood on the steps of the "L" station, about half way up, suddenly called out:

"Jim—oh! Jim!"

At least one hundred people stopped and turned their faces in his direction.

"I say, Jim—wait a minute," continued the man.

The crowd now numbered two hundred and threatened a jam, when the man shouted:

"Here's a poor woman whom I want to raise a purse for. All you who are willing to—"

But the two hundred had melted away like a summer mist.—M. Quad, in N. Y. World.

Where Freedom Shines.

Foreigner—This may be a free country, but I don't see that the freedom has any effect on the people. Such a patient, meek, subdued lot of humanity I never saw in my life. I should think a free-born American would act as if he were monarch of all he surveyed.

Native—Wait until you see a passenger car brakeman who expects soon to be a conductor.—Good News.

—A Man of Deeds.—Hyde—"Cornerlotte, the real-estate dealer, is a very silent man." Parker—"Quite natural, considering his business. A man of deeds, you know, is seldom a man of words."—Saturday Evening Herald.

HOME HINTS AND HELPS.

—Never put salt into soup when cooking till it has been thoroughly skimmed, as salt prevents the scum from rising.

—Coughs may be much alleviated and dry throats cured by glycerine and lemon juice taken at night. The glycerine should be diluted.

—Biscuits can be warmed to be as good as when just baked by placing them in the oven dry, covered closely with a tin. It is a great improvement over the old way of wetting them.

—For a cut, take powdered resin, pound it very fine, and spread or sift it over the cut; wrap a piece of soft linen around it, and wet it in cold water quite often. This will prevent inflammation and soreness.

—If the material is washable at all black dye can practically be rendered a fast color by the help of the salt water bath before the general washing is commenced upon. After such a treatment faded black caused by washing will never occur.

—Berry Cake: One cupful of sugar, one-half cupful of melted butter, one cupful of milk, four cupfuls of flour, berries to suit, three eggs, one and one-half spoonfuls cream tartar, one spoonful of soda. Put berries in flour to prevent settling.—Good Housekeeper.

—Freshly-powdered charcoal as an absorbent of gases is a good thing to keep continually in a milk-room in warm weather. Vegetables, meats, etc., should not be kept in the same room with milk in pans or other open vessels, as it is liable to be more or less infected by the odors which prevail.—N. Y. World.

—Caramel Cake: Two and a half cups sugar, one cup butter, one cup sweet milk, four cups of flour, four eggs, two teaspoons baking powder; flavor for taste. Filling for cake—two cups brown sugar, one-half cup cream, butter size of an egg. Boil all together until thick, then spread it between the layers.—Housekeeper.

—Common Mustard: One tablespoonful of ground mustard. One teaspoonful of sugar, one saltspoonful of salt. Mix the salt, sugar and mustard together, and then pour on some boiling water gradually, stir it with a horn spoon or knife till it is quite smooth. Some like it quite thick, others prefer it so thin as to run on the plate.—Boston Budget.

—Black satin can be stiffened by sponging with vinegar and water, a tablespoonful of the former to a pint of water. Sponge on the wrong side, then more lightly on the right side, and press on the wrong. If there are grease or other spots on it they may be removed by the use of alcohol and ammonia in equal parts, diluting each tablespoonful of the mixture with a pint of water.

—Chocolate Mold: Grate three ounces of chocolate into half a pint of milk. Add nearly one ounce of gelatine and rather more than a quarter of a pound of powdered sugar. Mix in an earthen jar and stand in a saucepan of cold water over a fire. Stir continuously while boiling fifteen minutes. Dip a mold in cold water, pour in, and turn out when set. Flavor with vanilla just before pouring into the mold. A beaten egg is a great improvement, and should be added when the chocolate is about half done.—Detroit Free Press.

The Ladies' Frock-Coat.

A novel garment designed by English tailors as a wrap when walking, driving, yachting, or for general summer wear in the country, takes its name from the long frock-coat worn by men, which it closely copies. This is an easy-fitting coat of serge of very light quality, cut double-breasted, with cross seams at the waist line, and long enough to reach almost to the knee; it has a notched revers collar, broad cuffs, large side pockets, and slender lapels set down the seams in the back of the skirt. The new fancy is to make this coat of navy blue serge, or else of the brighter bluet blue, using pale yellow serge as a facing for the revers, collar, cuffs, etc., and also lining the coat throughout with yellow. Bright brass buttons set in a double row down the front, edging the revers and cuffs, and on yellow lapels in the back add the final touch to this showy coat. With this should be worn, either by blonde or brunette, a very low sailor hat of black straw, with a small wreath of yellow blossoms under the brim (or else a torsade of yellow chiffon), while a narrow band of black velvet ribbon surrounds the crown, and a rosette of ribbon holding a yellow aigrette is set far forward on the left side.—Harper's Bazar.

No Prices on Women's Headwear.

Two men stood in front of the show-window of a Wabash avenue millinery concern looking at the styles and guessing at the prices. Of course, neither had any sort of idea about the articles on exhibition. Then they went in and asked the floor-walker how near they had come to guessing at the prices. After she had told them one of the men asked: "Why don't you put the prices on your goods the same as clothiers do on what they exhibit in their windows?" "You betray an ignorance that is pardonable under the circumstances. Here is a hat that we sell for one dollar and fifty cents. Do not faint—there are hats for women that can be bought for that figure. Suppose we put that price on the hat and displayed it. No woman would ever purchase it, because she would be afraid if she did that her neighbor might have seen it and would know what she paid for it. One of the privileges of a woman is to deceive her sex about the cost of her hats and bonnets."—Chicago Tribune.

Linen In the Toilet.

Parisians are wearing plaitings and collars of the sheerest linen cambric, with embroidery, drawn-work or lace as trimming. Linen collars, which have been so long out of fashion, are again wore here with tailor gowns. The collar is the English band of linen with points broken over at the throat or else a wider collar that flares slightly and is turned down narrowly all along the edge. A chemisette neatly tucked or in a wide box-plait like a shirt front is added to such collars and a four-in-hand scarf of foulard or of crepe de chine is worn. Linen cuffs are wide and are made to meet and fasten with linked buttons of gold or chased silver.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

—"Have you any photographs of your children, Mr. Peck?" asked a friend of Hon. Alpheus Peck. "I should say I had," answered Mr. Peck, "I've about a bushel of them." "Why, Alpheus!" exclaimed his wife. "Well, haven't we? Haven't we photographs of all four of them, and don't four pecks make a bushel?"

THE DAIRY.

—Because a cow happens to be a good milker is no reason to expect that she certainly will produce good milkers, unless she comes from a good milking family. —Western Rural.

—A poor milker will often ruin the value of a good cow. Patience and good temper nowhere pay better than in dairying. Raw foreigners set to work as milkers seldom pay.—Massachusetts Plowman.

— Women make the best butter makers because of their superior ability to see or smell anything wrong, says Prof. Hunter Nicholson. This is because their sense of smell is not deadened by smoking or chewing tobacco or drinking whisky.—Farm and Home.

—No cow should cost less than forty dollars for her year's keep, and none should make less than sixty dollars a year. This leaves the smallest margin of profit that any man should be content with. It is quite possible to make a forty dollar a year cow bring in eighty dollars a year, which is the least that a dairyman should aim at. — Practical Farmer.

— Experiments conducted by the bureau of animal industry and quite fully described in the report for 1890, seems to prove very conclusively that Texas fever is caused by cattle ticks; that southern cattle that have no ticks will not communicate it, and that the ticks themselves artificially hatched from the egg and placed on healthy cattle will communcate the disease.—Ohio Farmer.

—Fifty dollars should be the minimum earnings of a dairy cow, and great excellence is easily attained that will increase it to $100 apiece. Farmers can do this with high-grade cattle, such as each of you can raise from native cows upon the farm. I find that the use of pure-bred Guernsey bulls on our common cows, and raising the heifer calves, will soon bring about the kind of a dairy every farmer should own who intends to make the butter dairy his farm business.—H. Talcott.

—It should be evident to every dairyman that constitutional vigor is one of the most essential things in a dairy cow. It does not follow that dairy cows should be coarse in structure; often the most finely organized are the most vigorous; but dairymen should always avoid "delicate" cows and "delicate" calves. Calves that are difficult to rear, should never be reared. The first thing that should be considered in selecting a cow, or in choosing a breed, is vigor of constitution. Whenever a breeder discovers that his calves are lacking in vigor he should change his course of breeding, whatever may be the reputation of the strain that he has been producing. Nothing in a dairy cow can compensate for the lack of vigor.—Kansas Farmer.

KEEPING MILK SWEET.

To Whom Important, and Why—How it May Best be Done.

The question of keeping milk in a sweet working condition during hot weather is important to the private dairyman wishing to preserve his milk long enough to raise all the cream, and then after it is skimmed needing to be kept sweet long enough to be fed before souring, so that the value of the milk sugar may be saved. It is important to the cheese factory man, as on its sweetness depends the fact whether he will have time sufficient to curd and work his milk before souring sets in. If he must use an extra amount of rennet, and rush the curding of the milk, he is making a rank flavored, short-lived and, as a consequence, low-priced cheese. It is important to the creamery even if the separator is used; for sweet, well-kept milk, will make a finer flavored cream and butter. It is of the highest importance to the patron of the cheese factory, and especially the creamery. If the milk is on the verge of souring, the whey and the skimmed milk will be sure to be sour before they can be drawn home and fed, and a great proportion of the value is thus lost. Hence this question is of the highest importance to the dairy farmer all round.

A great deal of confusion, has been caused in the discussion of aeration, by not considering at the outset that the rule which governs handling milk for cheese-making is different from that in creaming by the gravity process. In private dairy use where the gravity process or open setting for cream raising is practiced, it is of the highest importance that the milk be strained as quickly as possible from the cow, and not stirred or agitated thereafter. Every housewife knows that if the milk is disturbed after being set, it checks the rising of the cream. Agitation or stirring before setting has the same effect. Experienced persons know that the same milk, set as soon as drawn, will yield considerably more cream and butter than if transported to a factory and then set. Stirring milk prevents cream seperation by natural rising. That is a law of nature. Of course, if the separator is used, it makes no difference, for the force is so great as to overcome all resistance. This law, so detrimental to creaming for butter, is just the thing for cheese-making. The more the milk is stirred the better, for it prevents the separation of the fat, and enables the rennet to gather it in the curd by coagulation, thus preventing after waste of fat in the whey.

For this reason, aeration is especially valuable in handling milk for cheese. Too quick cooling in cold water is, for the same reason, injurious for that purpose, for it tends to a sudden separation of the fat. If milk at ninety-eight degrees is immersed in iced water at forty or forty-five degrees, the cream will completely separate, as a rule, in twelve hours. This would be all right for butter-making, but all wrong for cheese-making, for just in proportion as the cream is separated will it be wasted, as we said before, in the whey vat. Experience has shown that the proper way for the patron of the cheese factory or separator creamery to handle his milk so as to retain the valuable quality of sweetness, is to cool down to about sixty degrees, and, while the cooling is going on, frequently aerate it, either by dipping from the bottom with a large dipper and pouring it back from a point in the air two or three feet above the can. This, of course, applies sspecially to the night's milk. The morning's milk should be cooled also and aerated once or twice. In hot weather, patrons will find it necesrary quite often to dip the milk as late as nine or ten o'clock at night. When this kind of care is taken, milk almost universally comes to the factory or creamery in prime condition. This care is very important to the patron if he expects to receive the full feeding value of his whey or skimmed milk, and that means a great deal in the course of a season.—Hoard's Dairyman.

IN THE ELECTRICAL WORLD.

—The electric light of 20,000,000 candle-power in the lighthouse at Hanstholm, coast of Jutland, said to be the most powerful light in the world, is now lighted for service.

—Electricity derives its name from the Greek word for amber, electron, because Thales, about 600 B. C., discovered that amber, when rubbed, attracts light and dry bodies, and in the twelfth century the scientific priests of Etruria drew lightning from the clouds with iron rods

—The city of Appleton, Wis., is to be lighted by electricity. In this there is nothing remarkable, but the reason given for the resolution of the city council on the adoption of the electric light is an entirely novel one—being that better light than gas is required from the fact that at present so many women are insulted nightly in the streets.

—An account of an interesting balloon ascension experiment is told by a traveler who has recently returned from Thorn, Prussia. The balloon was 13x15 metres, and required 1,000 metres of gas to fill it. The car was connected by telephone with a near-by fortress. The apparatus worked splendidly both ways, and the voice of the commandant of the garrison could be distinctly heard at a height of 600 metres.

—In view of the fact that the statistics on the use of the telegraph during the year 1890 in the various European countries will shortly be published, it is interesting to note that the number of telegrams for every 100 inhabitants during 1889 is as follows: Great Britain, 163; France, 88; Germany, 45; Italy, 26; Austria, 20; Hungary, 19; Russia, 9. For 1888 the figures are: Great Britain, 140; France, 80; Germany. 42; Italy, 30; Austria, 22; Hungary, 19; Russia, 9.

—The cutting of veneers is now done by electricity. The veneering machine, instead of cutting or shaving around the entire circumference of the log, as usual, takes a thin slice from the flat side of it. The logs are of any diameter and are cut into lengths of ten feet. The veneering cutting knife is fixed between two parallel shafts and the log is carried up and down in front of it with a circular motion by revolving cranks and is fed against the knife by a rachet and pawl in the ordinary manner.

—Little Morris Corey while riding with drayman Shaw was so unfortunate as to get his big toe beneath a barrel of apples as it jolted up in driving along the street cutting the toe badly and causing the loss of the nail.

—Joseph Kubon's family have moved to Minneapolis where Jo has a job. His son Willie, a former typo, in this office, went with the family and, we are informed, has already obtained employment at his trade, in a city office. He is the making of a good compositor.

—Rev. John Sargent, of Champlain, preached on Sunday evening to a large and appreciative audience at the M. E. church. His text was Hebrews chap. IV, ver. 16, "Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need."

—Charles Cronk on the old Sam Copeland place got a fine mare overheated on Friday and Saturday and on Sunday was, in his eagerness to save a fine crop of grain working her again when she gave out and died. The Cronk boys are hard workers but they should pay more attention to the ten commandements.

—One of the legal fraternity of Delano, was overheard, on Monday morning giving as his opinion concerning the enforcing of Sunday laws that "if a man should be tried by twelve men, peers of the 'realm,' it would be hard to convict him. That public opinion must favor the enforcment of the laws before they can be enforced was doubtless, the idea sought to be conveyed.

—The Republican high license law is not lived up to by those doing business under its provisions as closely as it might be in our town. Old drunkards drunk on the streets, men drunk on Sunday, saloons open after eleven o'clock at night, children of tender age buying beer by the pail full and boys scarce yet in their teens selling intoxicating drinks furnish most too many opportunities for the law to step in, to go much longer unheeded

—Delano has a Cornet Band of which her citizens are proud. It is made up mostly of business men, in the prime of life, with growing young families in their charge, whom they wish to have grow into good, law abiding American citizens. Their music is fine, and as wafted out over the gentle zephyrs of these hot August nights is highly appreciated by all, but those in attendance at church on Sunday evenings where the services are not always in chord with "Marching through Georgia," "Old folks at home" or some other selection, by the band. We understand many of the band boys would as soon play on some other evening and we assure them that their sweet strains would be fully as well appreciated, even more so, while their attendance at the churches during services would be equally as acceptable.

—The Delano Fair, on Saturday, last was well attended considering the busy time of year. Buyers were in attendance and although prices generally, were not very high considerable stock changed hands, mostly sheep, calves and hogs. Fairday is getting to be quite a visiting day for old settlers and here and there we noticed gatherings of three or four or more of the hardy pioneers who first blazed the trees, and made the roads into the "big woods" where they built their log cabins, most of which have given place to more commodious and convenient habitations of frame or brick. The subject of conversation now, is usually, the large acreage of grain, the plump, full kernel, and the probable price to be obtained by selling now or by holding it for a rise which may never come in season to benefit the holder of this year's crop. Occasionally reminiscence is indulged in and the number of deer killed, or of pounds of "seng" dug or a fish story or some incident of the Indian troubles serves to interest the crowd of eager listeners. They sell their stock just the same.

—Several straw-stackers, engines, and other implements for the farmers benefit surround our depot now-a-days.

—Ice cream festival on Saturday evening from 7 to 9 o'clock, by the Ladies Aid Society at the M E. Church grove. All are invited —Quite a number of teams and jolly harvesters pass through town every day on their way west to assist in gathering the crops and threshing them. Many go by train for a like purpose.

—One of the Young men about town had a narrow escape from the hand of Justice on Monday. It is not altogether safe to interfere with the official duties of a magistrate.

LATER.—A postal card informed our boys yesterday morning that the Watertown band will not visit them on Sunday next. Possibly they have reformed. If so, good.

—Neighbor Buckley made a flying trip to Twincite, on Tuesday to purchase type with which to set up the new Bulletin to be issued by the Agricultural College, the printing of which the Eagle job office has captured.

—We are in receipt of a handsome Souvenir of the National Editorial Association, giving pictures of prominent places and men in and about St. Paul, The book is neatly and handsomely gotten up and is an excellent Souvenir.

—John Renswick, of Winona, arrived in town on Monday evening. He came to fix up his property near the depot on Franklin Avenue. He does not at present think of moving back to Delano, though he says he is living here while he is in town.

—The work of tearing out the old heating and ventilating apparatus that has so long been a reflection upon the intelligence of our district is about completed. Some improved apparatus has been contracted for and is to be ready for use Sept. 1. A guarantee of satisfaction is given. The whole apparatus should be thoroughly tested by competent judges before it is accepted.

Teachers' Institute.

The State Teachers' Institute for Wright county will open at Monticello on August 31st, 1891, at 11 o'clock a. m. by an address of welcome by the county superintendent and music by the Teachers' Glee Club of Monticello.

There will be the usual three evening entertainments; one set lecture; the literary evening, and the institute will close with the Friday night sociable on Sept. 4th. Teachers are requested to bring their text books along with them and to review nouns and pro nous with special reference to case and to give the verb a careful review Those subjects will be discussed by the county superintendent

The institute will be conducted by Profs. J.T. McCleary and W.W.Pendergast. and every effort will be made to make the work effective and instructive. Teachers who occupy the schools of Write county are expected to attend the institute and school boards can consistently requre them to do so.

Teachers who reach Monticello by railway on purchasing their tickets can take a receipt of the agent that they have paid full fare one way and thereby secure reduced rates on their return. Teachers desiring private boarding should write Mr E.B. Mc Cord or Mr. J. R. Longfellow. F. H. LINDSEY, County Superintendent.

Woman's Column.

For God and Home and Humanity.

EDITED BY MRS. E. A. STACY.

A Drnukard's Will.

The following is a will left by a drunkard of Oswego, New York: "I leave to society a ruined character and a wretched example. I leave to my parents as much sorrow as they can in their feeble state bear. I leave to my brothers and sisters as much shame and mortification as I could bring on them.

I leave to my wife a broken heart—a life of shame. I leave to each of my childern poverty, ignorance, a low character and a remenbrance that their father filled a drunkard's grave."—Rams Horn.

The Greatest Enemy of Christianity.

The licensed liquor traffic is, beyond all questions, the worst hindrance to the enternal purpose of Christ to save the world, and the most powerful and unscrupulous enemy to the coming of his kidgom. For every young man that is saved at the church altar, at least fifteen are destroyed by the saloons. For every three dollais given to evangelizing work, thirty-nine dollars are spent for strong drink. For every missionary sent to Africa with the gospel, 30,000 gallons of New England rum are shipped over there to demoralize, debauch and damn that heathen people, whose moral condition now is darker than their skins. And the effort is being made on the part of the goverment to aid United States brewers to extend their trade to the Central and South American states.

We can expect no more great revivals in our church until we get rid of this woful evil. The responsibilities for the continued existence of this country.—Quest.

Dr. N. S. Davis on Alcohol.

"These direct effects of alcohol, as demonstrated by rigid experimental inquiries, are in perfect harmony with the phenomena presented by thier use in all the grades and conditions of human society. The diminution of nerve sensibility, developed in proportion to the quantity of alcohol taken, may be seen in all stages from simple exemption of weight as exhibited by ease buoyance hilarity, ect., to that of complete unconsciousness and loss of muscular power. It is this anaesthetic effect of the alcohol that has led to all the popular errors anc coutradictory uses which has proven so destructive to human health and happiness It has long been one of the noted paradoxes of human action that the same individual would resort to the use of the same alcoholic drink to warm him in winter, to protect him from the heat in summer, to strengthen him when weak or weary, and to soothe and cheer him when afflicted in body or mind. From the facts already stated in regard to the actiou of alcohol on the constituents of the blood and tissues, all this is easily explained.

The alcoholic drink does not relieve the individual from cold by increasing his temperature, nor from heat by cooling him, nor from weakness and exhaustion by nourishing his tissues nor yet from affliction by increasing his nerve force, but simply by diminishing the sensibility of the brain and nervs, and thereby lessening his consciousness of impressions of all kinds, whether from heat or cold, wearness or pain. In other words, the alcohol by its presence does not in any degree lessen the effects of the evil to which he is exposed but directly diminishes his consciousness of their existence, and thereby impairs his judgment concerning the degree of their effects upon him. Well did the wise man of old say that 'Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise.'

"I say then, as I have repeatedly said on other occasions, that from all the facts hitherto adduced, whether from accurate experimental investigations in different countries, from the pathological results developed in the most scientific societies from the most reliable statistics of sickness and mortality, as influenced by occupations and social habits, or from the life insurance records kept on a uniform basis through periods of ten, twenty, thirty or even forty years, it is clearly shown that alcohol when taken into the human system not only acts upon the nervous system perverting its sensibility, and is increased in quantity, causing intoxication or insensibility, but it also even in small quantities, essens the oxygenation and decarbonization of the blood and retards the molecular changes in the structures of the body. And when these effects are continued through months and years, as in the most temperate class of drinkers, they lead to permanent structural changes, most prominently in the liver, kidneys, stomach, heart, blood vessels and nerve structures, and lessens the natural duration of life in the aggregate from ten to fifteen years. Consequently there is no greater or more destructive error existing in the public mind than the belief that the use of fermented and distilled drinks does no harm so long as they do not intoxicate."

WE are opposed to an extra session of the Legislature.

MOUNT Orizaba, Mexico, has lately been determined to be the highest in North America.

THE marriage of Senator Sabin and Mrs. Swan of Milwaukee, is announced as having taken place a week ago.

SENATOR DURANT has named the members of the committee left to him to select by the Democratic meeting held at Harmonia Hall, in Minneapolis, last June. He has increased the committee from each Congressional district to six. For the sixth district including Wright county the committee is W. P. Renner, St. Cloud; F. W. Lamb, Little Falls; A. C. Weiss, Duluth; A. J. Demeules, Brainard; J. L. Harwick, Monticello and H. C. Bull, Cokato.

The committee has been called to meet at the Nicollet house, in Minneapolis, at 10:30, A. M., Friday, Aug. 28, when a plan of campaign is to be made and the work of organizing clubs in each voting precint begun. This is a move in the right direction.

SOME of our protection brethren are telling us that the Exports of American manufactures of iron and steel increased from $25,542,208. to $28,808,175. for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1891, under the McKinley bill. $3,366,967.00 increase in exports of iron and steel manufactures alone in one year!

What if this is a fact is it any evidence of beneficial effects of the McKinley bill, or does it simply show that America's resources are becoming developed as she grows older and more densely populated. When our Southern iron fields are opened up, and the iron and steel works of New England, Pennsylvania and the North generally, find it impossible to compete with their more favored friends, with their cheaper labor, living south of Mason and Dixon's line. Has that anything to do with the Exports? We presume it has. As the tide of emigration flows westward and the Indians, no longer pitch their teepes in the Black Hills country but the white man's cities are built up and laborers can live there without fear of loosing their scalpes the tin mines, which it is claimed for quantity and quality are among the best in the world will be worked, and being handy by, we have a right to expect tin will be cheaper and of better quality than heretofore. Possibly tin may figure among our Exports then. We have not heard anyone claim for the McKinley bill that it made the production of iron in the South now cheaper than it used to be in the North, nor that it drove the dusky red man from the Black Hills, leaving the tin mines in possession of those who will work them, and yet the protectionists claim that the McKinley bill increases our Exports of iron and steel, and as soon as tin is Exported of course they will claim they did it.

The people are beginning to study tariff for themselves, and when the schoolboy orators come around as they did during the last presidential campaign and claim most all the good things in this country are due to our protective system and then say that the tariff question is one too intricate for them to understand! "that it is a mystery beyond the comprehension of our Legislators!" That "it is too profound for solution by our most learned Statesmen"? we expect some of our farmer readers will proced to propound to them conundrums beyond their comprehension? and ability to answer at each meeting.

Binding Twine Under the McKinley Tariff.

From the Sherburne County Times we clip the following extract from the Tribune, South Bend, Ind:

"It is nine months since the McKinley bill went into effect, so far as it concerns binding twine. The price of binding twine last harvest under the old tariff law is as follows:

Standard 14 cents to 15 cents per pound
Jute - 12 cents to 16 cents per pound
Manilla - - - - 16 cents per pound

Standard - - - - 10 cents per pound
Jute - - - - 8 to 12 cents per pound
Manilla - - - - 13 cents per pound

The farmers of Indiana are getting standard twine 4 cents to 5 cents cheaper, jute twine 4 cents a pound cheaper and manilla twine 3 cents a pound cheaper under the McKinley bill, instead of paying double price as democratic papers and orators declared last October they would."

From an old farmer of Hennepin county we learn that the binding twine this season is not up to what it was in former years. He says he purchased just before harvest Extra Manilla twine for 14 cents, at Rockford, and that it was the dearest he ever used although he had paid 23 cents for twine on a former occasion. This new twine broke and lots of bundles, he says, had to be re-bound, while a ball of twine he had had on hand for two years was put into the same machine about the middle of the harvest and not a bundle failed to stay tied. He claims the grade was not what it should be for the name it has and the price it cost.

ANNANDALE.

Rev. Mr. Higgins held his usual service in the M. E. church last Sabbath, and in the afternoon the Rev. Paul Johnson; of Cokato, delivered a discourse in the Swedish tongue assisted by Elder Lindburg of Grove City who is taking his vacation here with his brother-in-law Ole Olson and looking after some property interests which he has in this place. Mr. Johnson is of the Baptist denomination and is a forcible speaker. The meeting was well attended by the Swedish friends.

Mr. Henery Schaum has recently purchased two lots in the village of Mr. J. M. Pratt, whereon he proposes to erect a pwelling for him oun use

Rennie & McLane have a new clerk in the person of Jessie Henniman whom they are instructing in the mysteries of he mercantile business.

W. E. Feeny of Blooming Prairie has arrived here to attend to the wheat purchases for the Flat House. Mr Zevner who has atteneded to that business here for the last two years has gone a station farther west.

Frank Lewis has his meat market building nearly ready for occupation, the building is quite tasty, especially the front, which excels everything of the sort in the village.

Holstein Nelson is adding a veranda to a part of the front of his house, greatly improving the appearance as well as being a comfort to the occupants.

Jim Erickson and A. A. Linder have started out a new and improved threshing machine.

John Nyler is progressing rapidly with the wood work part of S. H. McGuires new store.

The Klatt Bros. proprietors of the Roller Mills here, say of the new wheat that has been brought to their mills, that "it could not be better"

We had a maddog excitement here Monday morning: a strange dog has been prowling about here for two or three days and in the mean time made some threatening demonstrations and on Sunday evening attacked Elder Higgins as he came out of church, and the Elder, though a courageous man has no time for a maddog so hastily retreated to the nearest pantry. The news spread abroad Monday morning that we had a rabid dog in the village a force of some ten men, non-commissioned officers and privates, was soon organized and equipped and under the command of a corporal marched down Oak Avenue, in platoon order, to the church, for orders; the order of battle was soon issued and the force was put under the command of the chief of staff, who promptly proceeded to post his command in strategic positions, and while this was being done, agreeably to modern military tactics, the cur perceiving blood in their eye and that the force against him was overwhelming, and considering that "discretion is the better part of valor," decided to retreat within his own lines, and with him to think is to do so he at once executed a hasty, successful and gallant retreat, receiving a few harmless random shots by way of benediction To show that he had sand in him he reappeared on the field again the next morning. Aunt Jerusha says it is making a good deal of parade oyer a little miserable cur dog-yes.

Our leading hotel keeper and our late photographer met in front of Cofield & McDonald's furniture warehouse last Monday afternoon and were exchanging compliments when Will McDonald appeared upon the ground, elected himself "referee," called a halt and as the call was disregarded he takes one in each hand and with strong arm extends them apart so all they could do was to make faces at each other. As evidences of the "scrap" one has a black eye and the other a skinned nose. This is as we understand it we have not seen the belligerents ourself, since the affray.

Two of our professional friends went out upon Big lake boating and fishing last Monday afternoon and like true knights were accompanied by two charming young ladies and although very much bewildered and confused, as we are told, we are glad to learn that they retained their heads enough to get hooks on their lines and bait on their hooks this time and that they met with good success and brought away a fine string of fish. Experience is a good school master.

The funeral of the youngest daughter of Charles Barttlett, of Corinna, was held in Grace church, Monday forenoon last and was conducted by Mrs Norris, wife of the pastor of the Free Methodist church in South Side, with great solemnity and impressiveness.

We have another instalment of Bronchoes, this time from the ranch of R. E Fletcher.

MONTROSE CHIPS.

Uncle John Burch, of Minneapolis, who has been visiting at Swartout's for several days returned home on Wednesday last.

Judge Alley of Buffalo, passed through our village on day this week.

We hope for a marrage to take place in our village soon.

Herman and Gerdson our meatmarket firm are the busiest business in the village now-a-days.

The I. O. G. T. of this place intend to give an ice cream sociable on Friday evening of this week in Mr. Gerdsen's hall.

Harvesting and stacking are about completed in this locality and threshing commenced. The wheat averages from 25 to 30 bu. per acre as far as heard from.

Yes, gentelmen, we have a village council but from all appearances it exists in name only. There are many things it could do if it would. Our side walks are not only in a bad condition but even dangerous to walk over after dark. And unless steps are taken soon by the council to repair them the village may have a bill of damages to pay ere long. At present conditions our village does not present a very desirable place for strangers to locate in.

ROCKFORD.

A large number of men went to the great west from here to harvest and thrash among them were C. D. Mills, E. Farnham, Tom Conklin, Amos Kinney. Amos don't expect to stay very long under the circumstances; probably ten days.

Miss Morgan is visiting friends in town.

Levi Bowen says he has about 45 at his place now. It keeps him on the road most of the time; but he enjoys it.

D. R. Thompson accompanied by his body guard, Frank Johnson, done business in the city.

Wednesday, August 26 the Exposition opens. Tickets will be sold every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday at 1:40 including tickets to the Exposition.

H. Young is rushing his box stuff off to Iowa and Nebraska.

P. J. O'Brien has given up his commission job "ha."

M. J. McGuire has returned to the city after taking care of his mother's harvest. He works in the Pillsbury A. mill.

Al Rader made a flying trip to the city; Wednesday.

ST. MICHAELS.

The new Catholic church is about ready for the roof which is to be of slate. When completed this will be one of the finest church edifices in this diocese.

J. C. Hitz, Delano's rustling Insurance man visited town on Wednesday.

Crops are fine and harvesting progressing nicely, which will prove more effectual in prohibiting foreign products than does the McKinley tariff of 25 cents per bushel on potatoes.

LORETTO.

The Moses boys have an abundance of one of the sweets of this life, honey. They have about 150 hives and expect to have about two tons of honey this year.

Ennis Brandon, passed through Loretto, Wednesday.

Mike Becker had the misfortune to fall through the hay rack one day last week and broke three ribs.

Fred Lindsley drove down this way Thursday.

J. Muckenhirn and wife visited Mr. Jno. Fick, Friday to Sunday, returning by team.

F. L. Scherer and son, of Delano, were in Loretto, Saturday.

Mrs. Felix Barabeau visited relatives in this vicinity, Sunday.

We are sorry to learn that Mr. Henry Case is laid up again with his old trouble.

The Soo Line began building from Boynton, Monday, They are hauling considerable construction material over the road now.

Mrs. Daniels, Jos. Daniels and Mrs. Charles Shaar started for Stillwater, Monday, to visit their son and brother.

John Burg has been fixing up his barn to accommodate more of the traveling public.

Pat O'Brien has been on the sick list the past week. but is improving.

Some of the farmers of this vicinity are kicking themselves for not selling their wheat last spring, when they were offered over one dollar in Loretto. Now they have to clean out their granary for the new crop, and are obliged to haul to Minneapolis for 85 or 90 cents. One dollar is a good price, these days.

WATERTOWN WAYS.

Mr. J. F. Campbell made a business trip below last Friday.

Mr. George. P. Schaffer, of Delano, made Watertown friends a pleasant call last Friday.

Attorney W. J. McLeod, of Arlington, was doing business in Watertown last Saturday.

Mr. W. F. Kohler, our rustling harness maker, has received four large bales of horse blankets for the Fall trade. Call and examine when you are passing by, and see what he will have to offer in the future.

Max Crandall who has been visiting with Dr. Shannon and family for the past two weeks, returned to Hamline last Monday.

Quite a heavy windstorm passed this place last Wednesday afternoon doing considerable damage to the orchards and smaller trees it also twisted the new City Hall about three inches and cracked the plastering a great deal and blew Mr. Davies' barn to the ground.

Threshing in this vicinity will be commenced in full blast the latter part of this week and everybody is busy again.

No. 2.

The Watertown dance in the City Hall will be held Monday, the 24th.

INDEPENDENCE.

EDITOR BUFFALO GAZETTE.—In looking over my stock of news I find nothing much but what is stale and marked fifty cents below cost; but what I have will put upon the market and let it come in competition with foreign production. As most everybody has business of their own to attend to just now it is rather hard to pick up local items of much interest.

The most that makes up the conversation when you meet a friend now days is about the crops and the weather and the future price of grain, etc.

We see from the different papers over the state the big calculation made of this years crop in Minnesota. But I learned one thing years ago, never count your chickens until they are hatched, when your grain is thrashed and in your granary; then you can count the bushels. But who can tell what the price will be? Should the price of new wheat start in at 90 cents or a dollar that would be all right. The second day it would raise to 91 cents and the next day drop two cents making it only 89 cents and so on in this way the year through. Now many of the farmers know this is not the case when you have an honest market. But that we do not get in wheat any more. Wonder if it was this way when Joseph bought wheat, down in Egypt for Pharo, that should afterwards feed the hungry and famishing. These fellows that gamble upon the farmer's wheat, that make the price up one day and down the next; that one rich to-day and poor tomorrow, are men who have no honest ambition but are willing to live off the hard earnings of their fellow man, and you can find plenty of them on every street corner in the cities and many times in the country too. Some people say the world or rather the people are growing better all the time and soon we will have a millennial reign of a thousand years. And yet there is no text in all Scripture to prove it.

The shrill whistle of the steam thrasher is heard; but have not lerrned how grain is turning out.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, Aug. 14, 1891.

Repsentative Wilson, of West Virginia, the chairman of the Executive committee of the National Association of Democratic Clubs, which met in New York this week and several other members of the committee came back to Washington much pleased. The meeting was a seceret one of course the members of the committee will not talk for publication other than in a general way of what was done but it can be stated without any violation of confidence that the meeting was in every sense of the word a successful one and that the reports received were of the most encouraging nature showing the rapid growth of democratic clubs to be with out precident in the annals of political organizations, and adding to the confidence which each member felt before the meeting that the man nominated by the next democratic national couvention would be the next President of the United States.

In the absence of any thing more importint the resignation of the negro demagogue Fredrick Douglass as minister to Hayti was much discussed here this week. When Douglass was first informed by a newspaper man that his resignation had been accepted he was disposed to blackguard the administration and the State department partucularly for having forced him out of the diplomatic service but later, probably on a promise of some other office he changed around completely insisted that he had been misunderstood by the first newspaper man and that his resignation had been entirely voluntary. This is simply rot as it has been an open secret here for many months that the State department wanted to get rid of Douglass but that Mr. Harrison hesited to dismiss him for fear of the effect it might have on the negro delegates to the republican nominating convention next year. According to his own statement Douglass has spent the greater portion of his time in Hayti in pushing through private claims aginst the Haytian goyernment. Notwithstanding the general belief that Mr. Blaine wishes to send a white man of abilety to to Hayti in order to secure the Mole St Nicholas for a coaling station, half a dozen negroes have already filed application for the place and some are reported to have made threats that Harrison dare noe appoint a white man to a position that Cleveland filled with a negro. A prominent republican told me to-day that no appointment would be made until after Congress meets.

Owing to the pecular distribution of the available vessels of our navy the only vessels that the navy department could order to China with any hope of getting them there in time to assist in protecting American interests should the revolutionion in that country prove as serious as expected had to be taken from the Behring Sea fleet. The Charlston, Marion and Alert have been ordered to proceed to China. The Charlson is at San Francisco and it is thought at the Navy Department that she can sail on the 15 inst. She will proceed direct to Shanghai and her commander has been directed to make all the speed possible. The Monocacy is at Yokohama but a cable-gram says she is too unseaworthy to make the trip to Chinase waters.

One of the imporant results of the meeting of the executive committee of the National Associationof Democratic Clubs held in new york city this week is the opening of a bureau of information in Washington under the management of that committee which shall be ready and willing at all times to furnish polttical information to democratic organizatisons. This bureau will be opened just as soon as the necessary arrangement can be perfected and in the meantine Mr. Lawrence Gardner the efficient Secretary of the National association will take pleasure in answering any inquirys that may be adressed to him at his office in this city.

It is reported that Mr. Harrison has made a bid for the Pacific Coast delegation nominating convention by tendering the appointment as minister to China to Senator Squire of Washington.

The Fifty-first annual meeting of the Association of American Agricultural Colleges is in session here. There are aboutseventy delegats present representing nearly all the agricultural colleges and experiment stations in the country.

The last member of the Cabinet in the person of Attorney-General Miller has gone on a vacation leaving the question of whether citizens of China will be allowed to land in this country who may wish to visit the World's Fair which has been referred to him by the Treasury department unanswered.

The Artificial Production of Rain.

To the Editor of The Scientific American:

I have read in our daily papers lately of the production of rain by means of mechanical appliances, and also by explosives, and that our government has set aside a sum for experiments by the latter process.

If they are successful, is there not great danger in store for us, as every person having the means could use these appliances and rob the atmosphere of its moisture? And what a wet time we would have! Those owning small water power would want rain nearly all the time to drive their increased machinery, while the tillers of the soil would want dry weather to develop their crops; but what is more serious to think of, what effect would the heat of the sun have on the earth if we drew all the moisture from the heavens or clouds above us?

JAMES MALLEN.

Stanton's Ginseng Fram.

From the Scientific American we clip the following concerning what at one time was a staple article of commerce in this county. And if it can be successfully cultivated and raised in New York perhaps it may again become a leading product of Wright county:

My attention has recently been called to an article written by Nicolas Pike, entitled "The Ginseng," published in your valuable paper, January 10, 1891, in which Stanton's ginseng farm is located at Summit Station, N. J. The article in question refers to a subject which is of interest to a large class of the American people, and is calling out some correspondence which is being improperly directed to Summit Station, New Jersey. Will you kindly make correction in your next issue? There is a place called Summit, in New Jersey, but Summit Station and Stanton's ginseng farm are in Onondaga county, State of New York.

WAS MUD-BURNED.
That is the cause of the Boiler Explosion at Litchfield.

R. C. Clarke, the chief state boiler inspector returned from Litchfield last night, where he had been investgating into the cause of the boiler explosion there on the 31th in which several people where badly hurt a horse killed and considerable property destroyed. He found that Amos G. Clements of Raymond Dak., was the engineer. It was a threshing engine boiler, the property of S. J. Kulset and the explossion occurred in the village.

The engineer testified that he noticed suspicious circumstances that lead him to fancy the boiler might have been burned around the mud ring.

Mr Kulset the owner testified that he bought the engine and boiler second handed last July. The pressure carried varried from thirty-five to seventy pounds to the square inch. The steam gauge when tested proved to be twenty seven pounds slack and it was set so that it was only five pounds slack.

Mr. Clark states that he is perfectly satisfied that the explosion was occasioned by the boilers being barred arround the mud ring and also that the engineer carried twenty pounds too much pressure. The engineerhad no license.—GLOBE.

BRAZIL this year has a coffee crop of nine million bags, nearly double the crop of last year. In Guatemala the crop is also excellent and is expected to bring sixteen million dollars in gold.

ACCORDING to official reports from Behring sea, the Alaska commercial company, composed of Americans, having reached its legal allotment of seals this year, has suspended operations until the sea shall be reopened.

IT is now quite the fad, don't you know, to search up your family history. There are many ways to do it, but the easiest and surest is to have yourself mentioned for the presidency and let nature take its course.

THE light-weight champion among the powers of the earth is Switzerland, and this month she is celebrating the 600th anniversary of her organization and capture of the belt. Long live the bantam, and long may the war cocks of France, Italy and Germany keep their spurs from her plumage.

DOVE COTTAGE, the simple little dwelling at Grasmere, wherein Wordsworth lived so long with his sweet sister Dorothy and wrote much of his best work—and where De Quincey lived afterward and wrote the "Opium Eater"—is now the property of the British nation. It is to be restored and kept in perfect order.

THE belle of Charlotte, a fashionable summer resort near Rochester, N. Y., was recently won heart and hand, and married a dashing young stranger. The impromptu wedding feast was hardly cold before the groom was arrested as a common sneak-thief. He is in a prison cell and his bride is bowed down with humiliation.

AN English army officer just from Chili says: "As fighters the Chilians are a brave lot of fellows. There is no such thing as flunk among them, and all they need to win victories is good leaders. They are naturally inclined to be cruel in warfare, but when they are led by educated men, as in the case of the congressional army, their methods cannot be criticised."

IF there is one department of human knowledge in which the average Britisher excels it is that devoted to the geography of the people inhabiting the North American continent between Canada and the Gulf of Mexico. For instance note this bit of profundity: "The 'city article' of the London Times informs its readers that Chicago is destined to become one of the greatest grain-growing states in the union." The fair will do more for our English cousins than a course at Oxford or Cambridge.

A NEW YORK bartender touched an electric motor in his saloon and fell dead. The electric light people say electricity didn't do it, and a coroner, who knows no more about medicine than a pig knows of Greek, says it's a clear case of heart disease. That settles it, so the man may have died of croup, or dyspepsia, or home sickness, for all these diseases are of course quickly engendered by laying your hand on a live motor and bringing your head in contact with the other pole in some unexpected fashion.

THAT fashionable school of girls, Agontz, is said to have a running class where young women exercise with a run for a mile or two every morning. American girls no longer allow it to be truthfully said that English women excel them in their devotion to physical exercise. In walking, rowing, and many other outdoor recreations American girls ask no favors of the young men. They can walk as far and row as well as most of the young men. The American girl allows no other girl in christendom to excel her in anything.

MANY states have stringent laws against food adulteration, but they fail to check the evil. The last report of the dairy commissioner of New Jersey shows that 43.96 per cent. of all the food preparations submitted to him for examination were adulterated. Sometimes the adulterations were harmless, but in many instances rank poisons were found in articles of everyday consumption. A large percentage of canned vegetables, such as peas and string beans, were found to contain copperas, used to give a green color, and a number of baking powders had been "doctored" with ammonia.

THE potentiality of Texas as a wheat-growing state is something incalculable. Three years ago they didn't know they could raise it—cotton seemed their stronghold. This year they turned out 7,500,000 bushels, and of this 6,500,000 came from the Panhandle, which, five years ago, they thought good only for grazing. After this season land can't be bought in the Panhandle for twenty-five cents an acre. It was a big sensation this season when Texas shipped ninety thousand bushels of wheat to Liverpool. The farmer got from sixty-eight to seventy-eight cents at the nearest point of shipment.

WILHELM BAUM, of Chicago, who ignored the majesty of the law by transferring his young wife to his cousin with a quit claim deed for a consideration of seventy-five dollars, appears to have leaped into a variety of trouble. Impatient at the receipt of the payments on the installment plan he demanded the return of his wife, and made things so lively that he was arrested for disorderly conduct, which resulted in his original matrimonial transaction becoming public. There are African districts where men sell their wives, but Mr. Baum will probably be convinced that his proceeding was very irregular.

LUCKLESS HUMANS.

Thirty Lives Lost by the Sweeping Away of a Bridge in Hayti—Fourteen Persons Killed by a Railway Collision in Switzerland.

PORT AU PRINCE, Aug. 18.—The river St. Marie has overflowed its banks. Monday a bridge over the river was swept away and thirty lives were lost.

BERNE, Aug. 18.—By a collision between the Paris express and an excursion train on the Jura-Simpton railroad near Zollikofen fourteen people were killed, twenty-four seriously injured and thirty others slightly hurt. The excursionists were en route to this city to take part in the centenary fetes which are now in progress. The train was flagged near Zollikofen for the purpose of being placed upon a siding when the Paris train ran into the rear car. The engine of the express cut into and almost demolished the guards' van at the rear of the excursion train, which was empty, and then crashed into the rearmost of the passenger cars, wrecking it and causing the loss of life. Assistance was sent from here. The excursion train was partly composed of baggage-vans temporarily converted into passenger carriages. The line was blocked by other excursion trains in advance, and another excursion was coupled to the Paris express. A curve in the line prevented the engineer of the express from seeing the danger ahead, but the passengers of the excursion train heard the express approaching and many jumped out, all of the occupants of the open goods wagons escaping in this way almost unhurt. The victims were all Swiss peasants. The historical procession was under way when the news of the disaster was received here, but was hastily stopped. In consequence of the disaster the fetes in this city have been abandoned. The occupants of the Paris express escaped with only slight bruises.

CHINA WARNED.

She Must Make Reparation—Ministers from Other Nations to the Celestial Kingdom Threaten War.

SHANGHAI, Aug. 18.—In this city at present great excitement prevails at the increased and still increasing tension between the Chinese government and the ministers of the foreign powers. From all appearances the former are obstinate in their refusal to redress the injury done to foreigners during the recent riots. Some people say that the government dare not take this step demanded in common justice to the powers for fear of incurring a storm of popular disapproval; in any case there is no doubt as to the obstinacy of the refusal to right the wrongs inflicted upon the foreign residents of China.

On the other hand, there is no reason to doubt that if the Chinese authorities do not yield to the firm demands of the ministers of the powers concerted hostile action upon the part of the war vessels of the various nations represented in these waters is imminent.

It is now known that the foreign ministers have been compelled to inform the Chinese government that a joint naval demonstration of an effective nature, in which the French, American, British and German squadrons will take part, will be ordered in the near future unless speedy reparation is made for the injuries, outrages and abuses complained of by the ministers of the powers. Naturally the foreign population of this city, being aware of the firm stand taken by the ministers and having knowledge of the ultimatum sent to the Chinese government, is in a state of considerable anxious expectation and will so remain until the reply of the Chinese government is made known.

FOSTER ON THE FUNDS.

The Secretary of the Treasury Talks of the Financial Resources of the Government in Case of an Emergency.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 18.—Secretary of the Treasury Foster arrived Sunday night on his way to Cape May Point to see the president. Questioned about the monetary situation, he said:

"I think there is a marked improvement taking place now in the monetary situation in the country. This great grain movement is helping us wonderfully. It is not only helping us directly, but it is creating a feeling of confidence which materially assists the improvement. There has been a feeling of uneasiness all around until recently as to the possibility of stringency in the money market, but now a much more hopeful feeling prevails in this respect, and the danger seems to have passed.

"I know there is an impression abroad that the government is almost without immediate resources in the way of actual money on hand, but this impression is wrong. There is, including the $100,000,000 of gold reserve, more than $200,000,000, which is available in case of any emergency. Without the gold reserve there is nearly $107,000,000 which could be made readily available. Of this about $2,000,000 is charged off as liabilities, which are in fact merely technical liabilities. In these liabilities there is, for instance, the bank redemption fund, which is the fund made up of 5 per cent. of the banks' circulation, deposited to redeem mutilated currency. Then there is also in this sum about $7,000,000 in the treasury, which is placed to the credit of the disbursing officers' accounts, which could be used in case of emergency. Then there is also continuously outstanding checks aggregating $7,000,000, and the money which is now held for them could be made available. Then we also have $5,000,000 post office money. Of course, this $84,000,000 made up of these items, varies from time to time, but there is practically about where the figures stand all the time, according to tables compiled from the records of a department for the last four years. Now, after these technical liabilities which this $84,000,000 represents are charged off, there is a balance of $23,000,000, against which there is no liability, making up $107,000,000, in addition to the gold reserve of $100,000,000."

Another Unlucky Æronaut.

ROME, Aug. 18.—A balloon which ascended Sunday at Macerata, the capital of the Italian province of that name, was carried out over the Adriatic, and while it was hanging over the water the aeronaut either fell or jumped out of the car and was drowned before he could be reached by craft which put out to his aid.

LONDON, Aug. 18.—The foreign ministers to China are said to have made a concerted demand for reparation for the lives of Europeans and Americans killed in the recent riots in the Celestial empire.

TOOK A TUMBLE.

December Wheat Soars to $1.14 at Chicago—A Reaction Sets in and It Closes at $1.03—A Day of Excitement at New York.

CHICAGO, Aug. 18.—Wheat was king Monday on the board of trade. It went up like a rocket and then fell somewhat like the stick thereof, with a reckless disregard for the fortunes that rose and fell with it. Up 7⅞ cents and down 11 for December is the record of the day on the floor. So great were the tension and uncertainty that the most reckless plungers hesitated and held back. Nearly all the trading done was that which had to be done to even up old deals. Wheat for December delivery was the most variable factor in the excitment, but every thing else was unsettled by the crazy action of this option.

December wheat, which closed Saturday at $1.06¼, opened yesterday at $1.09 and above. Rapid and heavy buying by the shorts sent it up to $1.13½ to $1.14 inside of fifteen minutes after the opening, with a rumored sale as high as $1.15. When at these figures the witch of Wall street herself could not have predicted what was coming next. What did come was nothing less than a landslide. Down the price went by jumps of from a half cent to a cent until it reached $1.04¼.

At 12 o'clock prices rallied slightly, and reached $1.07 when the bulletin was posted showing an increase in the visible supply of wheat of 1,390,000 bushels since the same time last week. This increase was larger than was expected and sent prices down, down, a quarter of a cent at a time till they reached $1.03 and 1.03½. This depression proved to be something more than temporary, as December wheat remained at this figure, with occasional small rallies, and closed at $1.03.

Corn felt the effect of the excitement in wheat. September corn closed Saturday at 62½, opened Monday at 66 to 67, flew up to 69½ when wheat went up, and dropped back to 65 when wheat took its headlong plunge. Pork and oats were also affected by the erratic ups and downs of wheat, but in a less alarming degree. Rye made a sharp advance and the interest was as intense if not as vociferous as that in the wheat pit. September opened at $1.06, went to $1.10 and $1.11 and then fell back, closing at $1.02. All the markets closed weak and nearly at the bottom and left operators at a loss for what to expect to-day. Thus far no firm, as far as can be learned, has been forced to the wall, but there is no telling what a continuance of the unusual fluctuations of the last few days may bring forth.

It is easier to ask than to correctly answer the question as to who has the money in this big advance of the last ten days, but the opinion generally held is that the profits on the abnormal advances have for the most part gone to the east and to the foreigners, with the western operators the under dogs in the fight.

IN NEW YORK.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—There were 21,930,000 bushels of wheat bought and sold by the speculators around the wheat pit at the New York produce exchange Monday. This was about 1,500,000 bushels more wheat than the entire supply of the country. Nothing like this has been seen on the produce exchange for twenty years.

The net result of the day, to sum up the situation, was a drop of from 3 to 5¾ cents a bushel. In brief, the course of the wheat market for the day for the active months was as follows:

August—opened at $1.13¾@1.13¾; highest point, $1.14; closed, $1.11¾. September—opened, $1.13@1.15; highest point, $1.15; closed, $1.11¾. December—opened, $1.14¾@1.18; highest point, $1.18; closed, $1.13. May—opened, $1.18¾@1.21; highest point, $1.21; closed, $1.16¾.

Rye sold as high as $1.15 a bushel but broke to $1.09¾@1.10. Corn went up 2 cents a bushel for August and September deliveries and lost it in sympathy with the wheat decline. August options sold for 77 cents and closed at 75¾ cents. September deliveries opened at 73½ cents, reaching 74 cents, closing at 72¾ cents. October corn opened at 69¾ cents, went up to 71 cents and sold at the close of the day at 70 cents. These prices are about 1½ cents lower than Saturday's last. One day's trading aggregated 1,200,000 bushels.

In Philadelphia wheat sold at its highest—$1.13—just after the opening. At the close it had been driven, or rather it had dropped, down to $1.11, the asking price, with $1.10 bid.

In Paris there was an active demand in the grain market, especially for rye, which advanced 2 to 3 francs per 100 kilograms. Wheat and flour advanced 1 franc.

In Vienna the grain market was firm. Autumn rye advanced 50 kreuzers and wheat advanced 70 kreuzers.

IN ST. LOUIS.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 18.—Many failures on 'change were averted Monday by an agreement between brokers that the settling price for December wheat should be $1.06 per bushel, and the bulls could draw all margins deposited below $1.03 and the bears all above $1.10 and that no trading should be done on the exchange Monday or Tuesday except it was necessary to close trades. The agreement arrived at is all that saved at least 150 traders from being forced to announce their failure. December wheat sold as low as $1.03 and on the regular board at $1.04.

Shot His 14-Year-Old Daughter.

OSCEOLA, Ia., Aug. 18.—Michael Ahern, a farmer living near Murray, in this county, is lying in the county jail charged with shooting his daughter, aged 14 years. Sunday morning while the family were at the breakfast table a dispute arose between Ahern and his wife, and during the quarrel the daughter made some remark that angered her father, whereupon he deliberately drew his revolver and shot her in the back while she was attempting to make her escape. Physicians are unable to extract the ball and say the girl cannot recover.

Stole $100,000 of Scrip.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Aug. 18.—A great sensation was caused here by the arrest of J. L. Ray on a warrant sworn out by State Treasurer Morrow, charging him with the larceny of $100,000 of state scrip. Ray was a clerk employed by the bondsmen of ex-State Treasurer Woodruff to examine the books of the defaulting state treasurer.

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS

WHICH ONE IS IT?

The Murder of Rosa Bray Involved in More Doubt.

At the May term of the district court in Fergus Falls Adelbert Goheen was convicted of murdering Rosa Bray and sentenced to be hanged. At the trial his brother, Anderson Goheen, went on the stand and swore that Adelbert Goheen was at home in bed with him at the time of the murder. About a month ago Adelbert made a statement that it was Anderson Goheen who killed Rosa Bray, and that he saw him do it. He gave all the details of the crime. On the strength of this statement a warrant was issued for Anderson and he was arrested. This turn of affairs would postpone the execution of Adelbert. It was thought that both were involved in the crime.

New Mail Box Invention.

United States Commissioner R. R. Odell, of Minneapolis, has invented a mail box which he claims will save no end of time for carriers who collect the mail. One motion of the arm is sufficient to dump its contents into a mail sack after it is unlocked. It is not unlike a roll top desk in principle. The box has a double lining, and when the lid is raised it carries with it the curved bottom which slides up between the lining and the outer sides. This permits the box's contents to drop out below. Mr. Odell hopes to get the government to adopt the box after he has obtained a patent.

A Friendly Tussle Ends in Death.

Max Schidorsky, a Polander who carried on the business of a junk dealer in St. Paul, met his death in a very sudden manner. He drove up to his store with a team, and meeting a friend, the men commenced a wrestle in a good natured way. Suddenly Schidorsky released his hold and fell heavily to the ground. He gave no sign of life, and Dr. Bole was called, who certified the man was dead. Dr. Bole performed an autopsy and the diagnosis showed that heart disease caused the death. The deceased was a single man and 22 years of age.

Cockrell Doesn't Get It.

An answer has been filed to the attorney of the Lena Weinberg estate and Administrator E. A. Gerdtzen in the suit of replevin brought by Col. F. M. Cockrell to obtain possession of the $12,900 found recently in the piano stool of Lena Weinberg at Winona. The answer served upon the plaintiff's attorneys denies the claims to the ownership of the money by Col. Cockrell. No reply would be made to the answer, and the case would be brought up at some general term of the district court.

Wheat Spilled on the Ground.

Thompson's feedmill at Minneapolis was crushed by the bursting out of the adjoining wall of the Star elevator under the enormous pressure of wheat. The loss to the mill was $24,000 and that of the elevator company $25,000. There were 60,000 bushels of wheat let out. Thompson's building was fully insured. No one was hurt.

A Very Useful Book.

"Health and Pleasure on America's Greatest Railroad" is the title of a charming little volume issued by the Passenger Department of the New York Central & Hudson River railroad, with new and attractive features added to the publication of former years.

The frontispiece is a fine view of that noble structure, the Washington Bridge across the Harlem, but that is merely a hint of the beauties that follow. No one who glances over the book can fail to get a comprehensive idea of the wealth of scenery through which the road passes, not to mention the valuable information that is systematically arranged throughout the book in regard to the hotels and boarding houses, the prices of board, the fares, the distances, the possible excursion, and, in a word, all that that usually inquiring person, the Summer tourist, can possibly think of desiring to learn.

Copies of the book will be forwarded free to any address upon receipt of ten cents postage by George H. Daniels, General Passenger Agent, Grand Central Station, New York, or W. B. Jerome, General Western Passenger Agent, Chicago.

DELANO, WRIGHT COUNTY, · MINN.

It is said that Mr. Blaine has made $450,000 out of the sale of his book, "Twenty Years in Congress."

George Francis Train having been around the world two or three times, ought to sit down now and give the world a chance to return the compliment.

The first American built steel clipper ship, the Thos. E. Stanbuck, has just completed a voyage between New York and Liverpool. Time from Liverpool twenty-five days."

A philological statistician calculates that in the year 2000 there will be 1,700,000,000 people who speak English, and that the other European languages will be spoken by only 500,000,000 people.

Brazil this year has a coffee crop of nine million bags, nearly double the crop of last year. In Guatemala the crop is also excellent and is expected to bring sixteen million dollars in gold.

According to official reports from Behring sea, the Alaska commercial company, composed of Americans, having reached its legal allotment of seals this year, has suspended operations until the sea shall be reopened.

It is now quite the fad, don't you know, to search up your family history. There are many ways to do it, but the easiest and surest is to have yourself mentioned for the presidency and let nature take its course.

The light-weight champion among the powers of the earth is Switzerland, and this month she is celebrating the 600th anniversary of her organization and capture of the belt. Long live the bantam, and long may the war cocks of France, Italy and Germany keep their spurs from her plumage.

Dove Cottage, the simple little dwelling at Grasmere, wherein Wordsworth lived so long with his sweet sister Dorothy and wrote much of his best work—and where De Quincey lived afterward and wrote the "Opium Eater"—is now the property of the British nation. It is to be restored and kept in perfect order.

The belle of Charlotte, a fashionable summer resort near Rochester, N. Y., was recently won heart and hand, and married a dashing young stranger. The impromptu wedding feast was hardly cold before the groom was arrested as a common sneak-thief. He is in a prison cell and his bride is bowed down with humiliation.

An English army officer just from Chili says: "As fighters the Chilians are a brave lot of fellows. There is no such thing as flunk among them, and all they need to win victories is good leaders. They are naturally inclined to be cruel in warfare, but when they are led by educated men, as in the case of the congressional army, their methods cannot be criticised."

If there is one department of human knowledge in which the average Britisher excels it is that devoted to the geography of the people inhabiting the North American continent between Canada and the Gulf of Mexico. For instance note this bit of profundity: "The 'city article' of the London Times informs its readers that Chicago is destined to become one of the greatest grain-growing states in the union." The fair will do more for our English cousins than a course at Oxford or Cambridge.

A New York bartender touched an electric motor in his saloon and fell dead. The electric light people say electricity didn't do it, and a coroner, who knows no more about medicine than a pig knows of Greek, says it's a clear case of heart disease. That settles it, so the man may have died of croup, or dyspepsia, or home sickness, for all these diseases are of course quickly engendered by laying your hand on a live motor and bringing your head in contact with the other pole in some unexpected fashion.

That fashionable school of girls, Agontz, is said to have a running class where young women exercise with a run for a mile or two every morning. American girls no longer allow it to be truthfully said that English women excel them in their devotion to physical exercise. In walking, rowing, and many other outdoor recreations American girls ask no favors of the young men. They can walk as far and row as well as most of the young men. The American girl allows no other girl in christendom to excel her in anything.

Many states have stringent laws against food adulteration, but they fail to check the evil. The last report of the dairy commissioner of New Jersey shows that 45.96 per cent. of all the food preparations submitted to him for examination were adulterated. Sometimes the adulterations were harmless, but in many instances rank poisons were found in articles of everyday consumption. A large percentage of canned vegetables, such as peas and string beans, were found to contain copperas, used to give a green color, and a number of baking powders had been "doctored" with ammonia.

The potentiality of Texas as a wheat-growing state is something incalculable. Three years ago they didn't know they could raise it—cotton seemed their stronghold. This year they turned out 7,500,000 bushels, and of this 6,500,000 came from the Panhandle, which, five years ago, they thought good only for grazing. After this season land can't be bought in the Panhandle for twenty-five cents an acre. It was a big sensation this season when Texas shipped ninety thousand bushels of wheat to Liverpool. The farmer got from sixty-eight to seventy-eight cents at the nearest point of shipment.

Wilhelm Baum, of Chicago, who ignored the majesty of the law by transferring his young wife to his cousin with a quit claim deed for a consideration of seventy-five dollars, appears to have leaped into a variety of trouble. Impatient at the receipt of the payments on the installment plan he demanded the return of his wife, and made things so lively that he was arrested for disorderly conduct, which resulted in his original matrimonial transaction becoming public. There are African districts where men sell their wives, but Mr. Baum will probably be convinced that his proceeding was very irregular.

LUCKLESS HUMANS.

Thirty Lives Lost by the Sweeping Away of a Bridge in Hayti—Fourteen Persons Killed in a Railway Collision in Switzerland.

Port au Prince, Aug. 18.—The river St. Marie has overflowed its banks. Monday a bridge over the river was swept away and thirty lives were lost.

Berne, Aug. 18.—By a collision between the Paris express and an excursion train on the Jura-Simpton railroad near Zollikofen fourteen people were killed, twenty-four seriously injured and thirty others slightly hurt. The excursionists were en route to this city to take part in the centenary fetes which are now in progress. The train was flagged near Zollikofen for the purpose of being placed upon a siding when the Paris train ran into the rear car. The engine of the express cut into and almost demolished the guards' van at the rear of the excursion train, which was empty, and then crashed into the rearmost of the passenger cars, wrecking it and causing the loss of life. Assistance was sent from here The excursion train was partly composed of baggage-vans temporarily converted in to passenger carriages. The line was blocked by other excursion trains in advance, and another excursion was coupled to the Paris express. A curve in the line prevented the engineer of the express from seeing the danger ahead, but the passengers of the excursion train heard the express approaching and many jumped out, all of the occupants of the open goods wagons escaping in this way almost unhurt. The victims were all Swiss peasants. The historical procession was under way when the news of the disaster was received here, but was hastily stopped. In consequence of the disaster the fetes in this city have been abandoned. The occupants of the Paris express escaped with only slight bruises.

CHINA WARNED.

She Must Make Reparation—Ministers from Other Nations to the Celestial Kingdom Threaten War.

Shanghai, Aug. 18.—In this city at present great excitement prevails at the increased and still increasing tension between the Chinese government and the ministers of the foreign powers. From all appearances the former are obstinate in their refusal to redress the injury done to foreigners during the recent riots. Some people say that the government dare not take this step demanded in common justice to the powers for fear of incurring a storm of popular disapproval; in any case there is no doubt as to the obstinacy of the refusal to right the wrongs inflicted upon the foreign residents of China.

On the other hand, there is no reason to doubt that if the Chinese authorities do not yield to the firm demands of the ministers of the powers concerted hostile action upon the part of the war vessels of the various nations represented in these waters is imminent.

It is now known that the foreign ministers have been compelled to inform the Chinese government that a joint naval demonstration of an effective nature, in which the French, American, British and German squadrons will take part, will be ordered in the near future unless speedy reparation is made for the injuries, outrages and abuses complained of by the ministers of the powers. Naturally the foreign population of this city, being aware of the firm stand taken by the ministers and having knowledge of the ultimatum sent to the Chinese government, is in a state of considerable anxious expectation and will so remain until the reply of the Chinese government is made known.

FOSTER ON THE FUNDS.

The Secretary of the Treasury Talks of the Financial Resources of the Government in Case of an Emergency.

Philadelphia, Aug. 18.—Secretary of the Treasury Foster arrived Sunday night on his way to Cape May Point to see the president. Questioned about the monetary situation, he said:

"I think there is a marked improvement taking place now in the monetary situation in the country. This great grain movement is helping us wonderfully. It is not only helping us directly, but it is creating a feeling of confidence which materially assists the improvement. There has been a feeling of uneasiness all around until recently as to the possibility of stringency in the money market, but there is much more hopeful feeling prevailing in this respect, and the danger seems to have passed.

"I know there is an impression abroad that the government is almost without immediate resources in the way of actual money on hand, but this impression is wrong. There is, including the $100,000,000 of gold reserve, more than $200,000,000, which is available in case of any emergency. Without the gold reserve there is nearly $107,000,000 which could be made readily available. Of this about $3,000,000 is charged off as liabilities, which are in fact merely technical liabilities. In these liabilities there is, for instance, the bank redemption fund, which is the fund made up of 5 per cent. of the banks' circulation, deposited to redeem mutilated currency. Then there is also in this sum about $7,000,000 in the treasury, which is placed to the credit of the disbursing officers' accounts, which could be used in case of emergency. Then there is also continuously outstanding checks aggregating $7,000,000, and the money which is now held for them could be made available. Then we also have $5,000,000 post office money. Of course, this $54,000,000 made up of these items, varies from time to time, but there is practically about where the figures stand all the time, according to tables compiled from the records of a department for the last four years. Now, after these technical liabilities which this $54,000,000 represents are charged off, there is a balance of $53,000,000, against which there is no liability, making up $107,000,000, in addition to the gold reserve of $100,000,000."

Another Unlucky Æronaut.

Rome, Aug. 18.—A balloon which ascended Sunday at Macerata, the capital of the Italian province of that name, was carried out over the Adriatic, and while it was hanging over the water the aeronaut either fell or jumped out of the car and was drowned before he could be reached by craft which put out to his aid.

Two Men Killed in a Wreck.

Brighton, Col., Aug. 18.—An extra train dashed into the regular freight near here Sunday morning killing two men, S. W. McAdam and Charles McKillop.

Two Were Drowned.

Newport, R. I., Aug. 18.—Eugene Maloney, Manuel C. Cear, Annie Bollen and Annie McCormick left here Sunday for Jamestown in a cat-boat. The boat was capsized by a squall and Annie McCormick and Eugene Maloney were drowned. The other two succeeded in reaching the shore in safety.

Want Reparation.

London, Aug. 18.—The foreign ministers to China are said to have made a concerted demand for reparation for the lives of Europeans and Americans killed in the recent riots in the Celestial empire.

TOOK A TUMBLE.

December Wheat Soars to $1.14 at Chicago—A Reaction Sets in and It Closes at $1.03—A Day of Excitement at New York.

Chicago, Aug. 18.—Wheat was king Monday on the board of trade. It went up like a rocket and then fell somewhat like the stick thereof, with a reckless disregard for the fortunes that rose and fell with it. Up 7½ cents and down 11 for December is the record of the day on the floor. So great were the tension and uncertainty that the most reckless plungers hesitated and held back. Nearly all the trading done was that which had to be done to even up old deals. Wheat for December delivery was the most variable factor in the excitment, but every thing else was unsettled by the crazy action of this option.

December wheat, which closed Saturday at $1.06½, opened yesterday at $1.09 and above. Rapid and heavy buying by the shorts sent it up to $1.13½ to $1.14 inside of fifteen minutes after the opening, with a rumored sale as high as $1.15. When at these figures the witch of Wall street herself could not have predicted what was coming next. What did come was nothing less than a landslide. Down the price went by jumps of from a half cent to a cent until it reached $1.04½.

At 12 o'clock prices rallied slightly, and reached $1.07 when the bulletin was posted showing an increase in the visible supply of wheat of 1,300,000 bushels since the same time last week. This increase was larger than was expected and sent prices down, down, a quarter of a cent at a time till they reached $1.03 and $1.03½. This depression proved to be something more than temporary, as December wheat remained at this figure, with occasional small rallies, and closed at $1.03.

Corn felt the effect of the excitement in wheat. September corn closed Saturday at 62½, opened Monday at 66 to 67, flew up to 67½ when wheat went up, and dropped back to 66 when wheat took its headlong plunge. Pork and oats were also affected by the erratic ups and downs of wheat, but in a less alarming degree. Rye made a sharp advance and the interest was as intense if not as vociferous as that in the wheat pit. September opened at $1.05, went to $1.10 and $1.11 and then fell back, closing at $1.02. All the markets closed weak and nearly at the bottom and left operators at a loss for what to expect to-day. Thus far no firm, as far as can be learned, has been forced to the wall, but there is no telling what a continuance of the unusual fluctuations of the last few days may bring forth.

It is easier to ask than to correctly answer the question as to who has the money in this big advance of the last ten days, but the opinion generally held is that the profits on the abnormal advances have for the most part gone to the east and to the foreigners, with the western operators the under dogs in the fight.

IN NEW YORK.

New York, Aug. 18.—There were 21,930,000 bushels of wheat bought and sold by the speculators around the wheat pit at the New York produce exchange Monday. This was about 1,500,000 bushels more wheat than the entire supply of the country. Nothing like this has been seen on the produce exchange for twenty years.

The net result of the day, to sum up the situation, was a drop of from 3 to 3½ cents a bushel. In brief, the course of the wheat market for the day for the active months was as follows:

August—opened at $1.13⅞@1.13⅞; highest point, $1.14; closed, $1.11⅝. September—opened, $1.13@1.15; highest point, $1.15; closed, $1.11⅛. December—opened, $1.14⅛@1.18; highest point, $1.18; closed, $1.13. May—opened, $1.18⅛@1.21; highest point, $1.21; closed, $1.16⅝.

Rye sold as high as $1.15 a bushel but broke to $1.09⅝@1.10. Corn went up 2 cents a bushel for August and September deliveries and lost it in sympathy with the wheat decline. August options sold for 77 cents and closed at 75⅝ cents. September deliveries opened at 79½ cents, reaching 74 cents, closing at 72¾ cents. October corn opened at 69⅝ cents, went up to 71 cents and sold at the close of the day at 70 cents. These prices are about 1½ cents lower than Saturday's last. One day's trading aggregated 1,200,000 bushels.

In Philadelphia wheat sold at its highest—$1.13—just after the opening. At the close it had been driven, or rather it had dropped, down to $1.11, the asking price, with $1.10 bid.

In Paris there was an active demand in the grain market, especially for rye, which advanced 2 to 3 francs per 100 kilograms. Wheat and flour advanced 1 franc.

In Vienna the grain market was firm. Autumn rye advanced 50 kreuzers and wheat advanced 70 kreuzers.

IN ST. LOUIS.

St. Louis, Aug. 18.—Many failures on 'change were averted Monday by an arrangement between brokers that the settling price for December wheat should be $1.06 per bushel, and the bulls could draw all margins deposited below $1.03 and the bears all above $1.10 and that no trading should be done on the exchange Monday or Tuesday except it was necessary to close trades. The agreement arrived at is all that saved at least 150 traders from being forced to announce their failure. December wheat sold as low as $1.03 and on the regular board at $1.04.

Shot His 14-Year-Old Daughter.

Osceola, Ia., Aug. 18.—Michael Ahern, a farmer living near Murray, in this county, is lying in the county jail charged with shooting his daughter, aged 14 years. Sunday morning while the family were at the breakfast table a dispute arose between Ahern and his wife, and during the quarrel the daughter made some remark that angered her father, whereupon he deliberately drew his revolver and shot her in the back while she was attempting to make her escape. Physicians are unable to extract the ball and say the girl cannot recover.

Stole $100,000 of Scrip.

Little Rock, Ark., Aug. 18.—A great sensation was caused here by the arrest of J. L. Bay on a warrant sworn out by State Treasurer Morrow, charging him with the larceny of $100,000 of state scrip. Bay was a clerk employed by the bondsmen of ex-State Treasurer Woodruff to examine the books of the defaulting state treasurer.

Australia's Big Failure.

Melbourne, Aug. 18.—The suspension of the British Bank of Australia is announced. The liabilities are $800,000, half of which is owing to creditors in England.

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS

WHICH ONE IS IT?

The Murder of Rosa Bray Involved in More Doubt.

At the May term of the district court in Fergus Falls Adelbert Goheen was convicted of murdering Rosa Bray and sentenced to be hanged. At the trial his brother, Anderson Goheen, went on the stand and swore that Adelbert Goheen was at home in bed with him at the time of the murder. About a month ago Adelbert made a statement that it was Anderson Goheen who killed Rosa Bray, and that he saw him do it. He gave all the details of the crime. On the strength of this statement a warrant was issued for Anderson and he was arrested. This turn of affairs would postpone the execution of Adelbert. It was thought that both were involved in the crime.

New Mail Box Invention.

United States Commissioner R. R. Odell, of Minneapolis, has invented a mail box which he claims will save no end of time for carriers who collect the mail. One motion of the arm is sufficient to dump its contents into a mail sack after it is unlocked. It is not unlike a roll top desk in principle. The box has a double lining, and when the lid is raised it carries with it the curved bottom which slides up between the lining and the outer sides. This permits the box's contents to drop out below. Mr. Odell hopes to get the government to adopt the box after he has obtained a patent.

A Friendly Tussle Ends in Death.

Max Schidorsky, a Polander who carried on the business of a junk dealer in St. Paul, met his death in a very sudden manner. He drove up to his store with a team, and meeting a friend, the men commenced a wrestle in a good natured way. Suddenly Schidorsky released his hold and fell heavily to the ground. He gave no sign of life, and Dr. Bole was called, who certified the man was dead. Dr. Bole performed an autopsy and the diagnosis showed that heart disease caused the death. The deceased was a single man and 22 years of age.

Cockrell Doesn't Get It.

An answer has been filed to the attorney of the Lena Weinberg estate and Administrator E. A. Gerdtzen in the suit of replevin brought by Col. F. M. Cockrell to obtain possession of the $12,000 found recently in the piano stool of Lena Weinberg at Winona. The answer served upon the plaintiff's attorneys denies the claims to the ownership of the money by Col. Cockrell. No reply would be made to the answer, and the case would be brought up at some general term of the district court.

Wheat Spilled on the Ground.

Thompson's feedmill at Minneapolis was crushed by the bursting out of the adjoining wall of the Star elevator under the enormous pressure of wheat. The loss to the mill was $24,000 and that of the elevator company $25,000. There were 60,000 bushels of wheat let out. Thompson's building was fully insured. No one was hurt.

Farmer and His Son Crushed.

A terrible reaper accident happened about 15 miles northwest of Worthington. A German farmer by the name of John Witt and his son, John Witt, Jr., were so severely injured that both died, caused by both being thrown under the team and the reaper and dragged under it and crushed by the bull wheel.

On Its Last Legs.

Several ladies and gentlemen visited Central park, New York, and they admired the animals very much, and more particularly the kangaroo.

"That poor animal is going to die pretty soon," remarked Gus Snobberly, punching it with a cane.

"I don't see anything wrong with it," said Gilhooly.

"You don't. Well, I do. Can't you see that it is on its last legs?"—Texas Siftings.

A Very Useful Book.

"Health and Pleasure on America's Greatest Railroad" is the title of a charming little volume issued by the Passenger Department of the New York Central & Hudson River railroad, with new and attractive features added to the publication of former years.

The frontispiece is a fine view of that noble structure, the Washington Bridge across the Harlem, but that is merely a hint of the beauties that follow. No one who glances over the book can fail to get a comprehensive idea of the wealth of scenery through which the road passes, not to mention the valuable information that is systematically arranged throughout the book in regard to the hotels and boarding houses, the prices of board, the fares, the distances, the possible excursion, and, in a word, all that that usually inquiring person, the Summer tourist, can possibly think of desiring to learn.

Copies of the book will be forwarded free to any address upon receipt of ten cents postage by George H. Daniels, General Passenger Agent, Grand Central Station, New York, or W. B. Jerome, General Western Passenger Agent, Chicago.

Death and Taxes

Are not surer than the fact that if you are constipated, the most efficient, as well as the least painful laxative, is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, gentle and thorough, not violent and weakening like a drastic cathartic. Together with the bowels, the liver and stomach are regulated and invigorated by this genial reformer, which also subjugates malaria, rheumatism, neuralgia, nervousness and disorders of the kidneys.

NOT SUITED TO THE PURPOSE.

The editor struggled in vain with his pen,
In only one way would it willingly move;
He made a beginning again and again,
And then said abruptly: "I must be in love!"

Yes; this must be why one fair face of all faces
Between him and his "copy" continually crept,
Presented itself in the smallest of spaces,
And smiled at him out of the clouds when he slept.

"The remedy's surely before me—I'll write!"
He muttered, and seized his recalcitrant pen.
"If I speak, I may possibly illustrate fright,
And girls, as a rule, adore courage in men."

Now this editor had a clear title to use
The letters "B. A." as attached to his name,
And why should so simple a matter confuse
A mind so long trained to directness of aim?

The printers were calling for copy—no time
Was his to debate, he must do it at once,
"Perhaps she would fancy it more done in rhyme,"
He murmured: "Oh, why do I feel like a dunce?

"Well, simple directness, it may be, is best;
It might be ornate should I call her 'divine!'
If she loves me, her own heart will furnish the rest."
"I love you," he wrote; "dearest, will you be mine?

"I have analyzed carefully that which I feel,
And I give it substantially in the above;
Reply by the messenger to my appeal,
And state, if you can, a return of my love."

He mused, and then dreamily added: "P. S.
Write plainly on one side of paper, and give—
It need not be published—your name and address.
It is merely a form, for I know where you live."

The answer came swiftly; he read it between
Two paragraphs of a discourse upon banks;
And he stole to the shade of a Japanese screen.
"It's concluded," he said; "she's declined me—with thanks!"

THE HIGHEST BIDDER.

He Got Not Only the Broken Slipper, But a Wife.

Peggy Hildreth was the belle of the village. No one ever questioned that fact. There were many girls as pretty as Peggy, but none as bright and saucy. Certainly no young girl of eighteen had had more suitors or knew better how to refuse them and still keep them at her feet.

Now, Peggy had a stepmother and no father, and like the traditional stepmother, this one was hard to live with. Perhaps Peggy was a little to blame herself, for she strongly objected being dictated to, even when, as Mrs. Hildreth would inform her, "it was only for her own good;" but as it was only the week before she had been heard to say she "shou'd be glad when that witch was well married and out of the house," we can hardly blame Peggy for not having unquestioned faith in Mrs. Hildreth's desire for her good.

One afternoon, when these two had had a few words of anything but an amiable nature, the servant announced a caller for Miss Peggy, Mr. Jack Leslie, of the Seventh regiment, it appeared from the card, and Peggy hastened to meet him, looking, with her sparkling blue eyes and golden curls, gowned in a short-waisted white muslin tied up under the arms with a broad sash, like an animated Kate Greenaway picture.

"Oh, Jack, I am so glad you've come! Mrs. H. and I have been having it again, although I came out ahead," with a laugh.

"As usual, I see. But what were you quarreling over this time?"

"Well, I'll tell you. I called that young Bliss a fool or an idiot, I don't remember which, and as he is distantly related to Mrs. H., she naturally objected. We argued the matter to some length, and then she told me to prove my statement or take it back. I said I could, and that she would agree with me if she had only heard him propose the other night.

"It was done in this way," and Peggy stood up at an angle of forty-five degrees and toyed with an imaginary eyeglass: "Weally, Miss Hildweth, you weally must do me the au—extreme kindness of accepting my name and—au—estates, doncher know,' and then after that she gave in," and Peggy took two waltz turns and sank into an easy chair and said:

"Now, Jack, let's have it. I know you've brought some good news by the disagreeable way the lines in your forehead run."

"Well, you've guessed aright, so just catch your breath while I relate all I know. The Seventh intend giving a ball on the third of next month, and I've come over to invite you early so there can be no mistake about your going with me."

"Really; honor bright; cut your throat. Oh, how lovely! How nice of you to come over and tell me before the other girls knew anything about it!"

"Well, as long as you don't throw me over at the last minute for Overalle or any of the Wainwright boys, I shall feel repaid."

Peggy actually colored, for Howarth Overalle was one of the few men whom she could not bring to her feet. Not a very handsome man, but tall and distinguished looking, bearing himself like the true, honest soldier that he was. He had often watched Peggy Hildreth from afar, and contrasted her with the pale, tired, invalid sister he had at home in far-away Montana. Jack Leslie had purposely mentioned Overalle just to tease Peggy. He had always known her, and as she pestered him when it suited her mood, he once in awhile retaliated.

It was war to the knife between the two until Jack left, and then Peggy went upstairs to pull over some old trunks of her own mother's to see what she could find suitable to wear to the ball. She came across a beautiful white brocade with tiny pink rosebuds embroidered over it.

"Now," she soliloquized, "this would just suit me made up with a little of this honiton lace. Mrs. Hildreth will faint with horror at the idea, and say I'll look like my own grandmother. Then perhaps somebody will fall in love with my own grandmother. Now, I'll put it on and dance the minuet with somebody's grandfather. I wished the somebody's grandfather looked like Howarth Overalle, the hateful old thing. I'd like the fun of refusing him. Now, Peggy, wait a moment. If Mr. Overalle should ask you to accompany him to Montana and spend a dull existence with an invalid sister and an old mother, would you, after all, refuse? Oh, bother, it's too warm to get into discussions with one's self."

And doing the sweet, old-fashioned gown up into a bundle, Peggy sauntered down to the village dressmaker, and, after leaving there, decided she'd just run in and see if Widow Tucker's boy was recovering from slow fever.

It was a poor little cottage into which Peggy wended her way, and the widow herself looked half-fed.

"I don't believe you've had any dinner to-day," thought Peggy, "and as you're too proud to ask for it, I'll have to plan."

"Why don't you take a walk while I sit by Jamie and tell him stories?" she said, aloud. "And, by the way, if you're going by my house just stop in and get my cape and tell Hannah to give you your dinner. It will save you cooking here."

The widow gladly went, and Peggy amused herself and Jamie inventing stories.

While in the middle of one she glanced up and beheld Howarth Overalle standing in the doorway with a look of rapt admiration on his face.

"Do you come here often?" was his first remark.

"Never," she replied, while Jamie's eyes dilated to such an extent one would know she was not telling the truth.

"What are you here for?" he asked.

"My laundry," was the brief reply.

He saw her home through the twilight, and Peggy after that took more interest than ever in her gown for the "Third."

The evening came and with it Jack Leslie for Peggy, and when he saw her he exclaimed:

"Why, Peggy Hildreth, you lovely little picture! I'm almost tempted to carry you off by main force, you look so beautiful."

"Well, you needn't," serenely remarked Peggy, as she gathered her opera cloak around her and let him put her into the carriage.

Words of admiration could be heard from all sides as she entered the hall with her escort. And she did look lovely. The golden curls were gathered on to the top of her head, and the beautiful brocade was modernized. Slippers had been made to match the gown, and although Peggy took only a three boot, she had squeezed her foot into a two, the result being before the evening was half over in one giving way when she was dancing with Capt. Van Leaten.

"Now," said Peggy, philosophically, "I am finished for dancing. All I can do is to flirt."

"No such thing," said the captain. "I shall send for more slippers;" and he was as good as his word.

When they came Peggy was surrounded by admirers, and holding up the pretty broken slipper, she said:

"Now what do you bid for it?"

"A box of gloves," said Jack Leslie.

"Two boxes," said Capt. Van Leaten.

"I'll go you one better and offer three boxes and a five-pound box of candy," exclaimed an ardent admirer.

Peggy saw Mrs. Hildreth gazing at her in horror, and with her eyes dancing with merriment she said:

"Come quickly! Bid away! I'll marry the highest bidder!"

"A diamond bracelet!"

"Diamond pin!"

"Two tickets for Patti!"

And so the bids rattled on and Peggy found herself the center of a large and admiring circle and she began to wish she was well out of it all.

At that moment Mr. Overalle appeared, and stepping forward quickly, said:

"I offer over-all." And Peggy laughingly called: "Gone!" and started waltzing with the highest bidder.

The circle disbanded, murmuring: "Tricked," "Puns not allowed," and similar remarks, but Peggy was happy, and when half an hour later she met the possessor of her slipper in the conservatory, and he asked her if she would confirm her remark and marry the highest bidder, she only said in a half laughing manner, but with a serious look in the blue eyes for once: "I always keep my word."—Boston Globe.

CONFIDENTIAL BORES.

A Species of Nuisance That Makes One Long for a Sandbag.

Of the class Bore—and, alas! what a comprehensive class it is!—few specimens are so annoying as the individual who insists on being confidential with one on a short acquaintance. Of course, reader, you have met with him in society. An hour after you have been introduced to him he has made you his father-confessor. His likes and dislikes, his prospects, weaknesses, grievances, opinions, are all very much at your service. Every time he meets you he will treat you to a new installment of his experiences.

A more uninteresting creature than the confidential bore does not live, and yet it is his misfortune (and yours) to think that he interests everybody. He usually has some personal merit or defect which he makes his especial hobby, and rides over you roughshod with it. The laws of good breeding forbid one to insult the nuisances, but the unregenerate man longs to insert his fingers into their neckcloths and stop the flow of drivel with an impromptu tourniquet.

Perhaps these creatures ought to be pitied for their weakness—but the man who can pity one of them while being subjected to his persecutions is capable of weeping over the death of a mad dog or of saying to a hornet that has just stung him in the eye: "Go thy way; the world is large enough for thee and me." Of all bores, preserve us from the confidential species.—N. Y. Ledger.

Hamlin's Trout Brook.

Mr. Hamlin was one of Maine's noted fishermen, and one little yearly excursion of his used to puzzle the knowing ones not a little. Every year he prevailed upon the officials of a certain Maine railroad to let him off an early morning train in the middle of a dense forest. He would disappear in the woods and when the train returned in the evening Mr. Hamlin would be found waiting beside the track to be taken aboard. His basket on these occasions was always found to be filled with magnificent trout weighing anywhere around a pound to two pounds and over. Nobody else knew of a trout brook in the vicinity that gave promise of such trout as he got and as the old gentleman always persisted in going alone the exact locality has remained a mystery.—Lewiston Journal.

—The handsomest living member of the Hohenzollern family is Prince Albert, of Prussia, a noble-looking officer, nearly six feet six inches in height, and as graciously courteous as he is big. He is a cousin of the late Emperor Frederick, and succeeds Von Moltke as president of the national committee of defense.

PERSONAL AND LITERARY.

—By Henry Irving's special desire, his son Henry will commence his theatrical career under John Hare, the lessee, manager and leading actor of Garrick's theater. Young Henry Irving will make his debut at that theater during the coming season as Lord Beaufroy in the "School for Scandal."

—The fireplace in Robert Louis Stevenson's island home in Samoa is the only one in the land. The furniture in the dining-room is all Chippendale, of which there is probably not another piece in the southern Pacific. It seems somewhat incongruous and out of place in a room that has its walls decorated in native tapestry made from the mulberry tree.

—The little Spanish boy whom Minister Palmer brought home as a protege is a great favorite in Washington. He is the son of an army officer, and is a miniature Apollo. In fact, he is so handsome physically that his parents by adoption have had a plaster cast taken of his entire body for the purpose of having his graceful person preserved in marble.

—Lady Gordon-Cumming can not fail to be charmed with her new home, for Altyre, Sir William's family place in Morayshire, is one of the most beautiful in the Highlands. The house is a large building of no special architectural pretensions, but it is surrounded by charming gardens and grounds, which slope to the Deveron, and the famous woods of Altyre extend for many miles along that river.

—A number of the ladies at Bar Harbor have formed a club for playing billiards, a game at which Miss Hattie Blaine, the secretary's daughter, is said to be particularly expert. One of the prettiest women at this famous old New England resort this summer is Mrs. Joseph Nalle, of Philadelphia, whose brunette beauty is striking in its attractiveness. She is an accomplished pianist, a fine horsewoman and a good dancer.

—A work of great historical interest and value will shortly be deposited in the British museum. It will come through the Asiatic society of Bengal. After many years' correspondence the society has secured from Thibet a copy of the Jangyn, a monster encyclopaedia of Thibetan buddhism. It comprises 225 volumes, each of which is two feet long and six inches thick. There are, it is supposed, only two copies of the work outside of Thibet.

—Unique and beautiful will be the monument destined for the grave of the poet, Shelley, in the Protestant cemetery at Rome. The model represents the drowned body of the poet, which lies, absolutely nude, upon a narrow oblong slab supported underneath by two winged lions. In the center, at the base of the pedestal, is seated an exquisite figure of the Muse, bending slightly forward, as though to catch the last dying echoes of sound from her broken lyre. The slab and the recumbent figure will be of white marble; the Muse and the winged lions of bronze, while rare marbles of various colors will be used in the pedestal.

—A Dispute Settled.—Cyril (in the garden)—"Father! father! look out of the window!" Paterfamilias (putting out his head)—"What a nuisance you children are. What do you want now?" Cyril (with a triumphant glance at his playfellow)—"Tommy Cope wouldn't believe you' got no hair on the top of your head."—Yankee Blade.

—He Saved His Friend.—"My, that's a pretty girl," said one of the travelers, throwing himself half out of the window to see her. "For Heaven's sake pull in your head!" shouted his companion. "What's the matter?" was the terrified inquiry. "Why," suiting the action to the word, "I wanted that window to look at her myself."—Philadelphia Times.

—His Fatal Error.—"I am glad to hear that your graduation was such a success, dear." "But it wasn't." "Why, I heard you received round after round of applause." "So I did, but I was not half through with my essay. I merely intended to make an impressive pause. It was that hateful little idiot Charlie Tapecounter who started them, and I'll never speak to him again as long as I live. I don't care if he does—admire—me."—Indianapolis Journal.

—A surgeon had a rich but miserly patient who had injured his leg so badly that he told him that it would probably have to come off. "How much?" said the patient. "Fifty dollars." "Fifty dollars! Why, you ought to cut off two legs for that." "Well, I will if you say so." The man reluctantly agreed to pay the price and have only one leg taken off, but skillful treatment saved the leg. When the surgeon asked for his pay the patient, with many a grimace, handed over the money, remarking: "You're a good deal of a fraud in charging me so much, for you did not cut off my leg after all."—Detroit Free Press.

No Mistake.

Astonished Bill Clerk—Isn't there some mistake about this order from Banker's Corners for eight hundred pounds of bacon and two bags of chicory.

Traveling Salesman—No. That's all right. A fellow went there a week or two ago and started a first-class summer resort hotel.—Chicago Tribune.

HOME HINTS AND HELPS.

—To loosen a stopper in a toilet bottle let a drop of oil flow around the stopper and stand the bottle near the fire. After a time tap the stopper with the handle of a tooth-brush. If this is not successful repeat the process.

—Chocolate Caramels: Dissolve one pint of sugar in as little water as possible, half a cup of butter, one tablespoonful of vinegar, one cupful of grated chocolate, boil all together until quite thick. Put in buttered tins and cut in squares when partly cooled.

—The fashion of using a canton flannel cloth under the linen tablecloth is a very desirable one. It prevents noise when dishes are set down; it saves much wear on fine linen cloths, making them last longer, and if the tablecloth is old or thin, it gives body to it.—N. Y. World.

—Charcoal is one of the best agents for purifying foul water. If cistern water has an unpleasant odor from the cistern being too closely covered, it may be made as sweet smelling as when fresh by suspending in the water a muslin bag containing one or more pounds of charcoal, according to the size of the cistern.

—Foam Omelette: The yolks of six eggs and two whites, a tablespoonful of arrowroot, half a pint of milk, a little salt and a grain of nutmeg. Place a piece of butter in a pan and fry. Sift sugar over. Whisk the whites of four eggs to a snow, sweeten with pulverized sugar, pile it on the omelette, brown it and serve.—Detroit Free Press.

—Oyster Plant Soup: Thoroughly clean the plant and cut in small pieces; cook in boiling water till tender; add as much milk as you want soup; when it comes to a boil add one egg well beaten and one teaspoonful flour stirred smooth in a little cold milk; butter, salt and pepper. The egg may be omitted and the quantity of flour doubled.—Housekeeper.

—Rice Bread: Simmer one pound of rice in three quarts of water until the rice is soft and the water evaporated or absorbed; let it cool until it is only luke-warm, mix into it nearly four pounds of flour, two teaspoonfuls of salt and four teaspoonfuls of yeast; knead it until it is smooth and shining, let it rise before the fire, make it up into loaves with the little flour reserved from the four pounds, and bake it thoroughly. It will cost about twenty-five cents, and make more than eight pounds of excellent bread.—Springfield Republican.

—To Prepare Apples for Pies: Pare and core your apples, cut them in slices, and throw them into cold water. Then take them out of the water, put them into a stew-pan; if the apples are tender, the water which adheres to them will be sufficient to cook them; if not, a little more may be added. Cover the stew-pan, and place them near the fire. Let them stew till they are soft and burst; then mash them, and add half an ounce of butter to each pint of the stewed apple. When they get nearly cold, add sugar, rosewater and nutmeg to the taste.—Boston Budget.

—Deviled Kidneys: Take three veal kidneys, strip off the skin, remove the core and fat, and cut them in quarters lengthwise; score the pieces of kidney and cover them over thickly with mustard, seasoned with cayenne pepper, salt and a grate of nutmeg; roll them well in bread-crumbs, and pour some clarified butter over them. Broil over a clear fire about twelve minutes; in order to broil all over alike, and to keep them from curling on the gridiron, run a skewer right through the pieces of kidney. Mutton and pork kidneys are treated in the same manner, except that they are cut into halves instead of quarters.—N. Y. Ledger.

FRESH FASHION NOTES.

Interesting Brevities for Devotees of Dress.

Crepe de Chine is made in the most delicious of delicate self colors, and many fashionable milliners, both here and abroad, use it almost to the exclusion of ribbon.

New silks delightfully cool for genuine hot weather wear are imported from Tussah, India. They have gray or pale-cream grounds decorated with large dots, cubes, blocks, or palms, in various colors. They have also stripes of delicate color on ecru foundations.

Exceedingly strong yet light twilled silks are made in the natural unbleached shades from India cocoons of natural growth that are found in forests, and these are considered much more durable than the silks manufactured from the cultivated cocoons. These come in neat and attractive checks and narrow stripes, and are used for tennis dresses, traveling costumes, wraps and skirts.

Chiffon can not possibly be in greater favor. It is now produced in shot effects, one pattern for instance being of pink shot with pale yellow, with rather wide selvage of yellow silk, thus accentuating that color. Another piece has reseda green shot with pink. Striped chiffons with small colored polka dots on every alternate stripe are received this week; also beautifully-flowered chiffons with colors not at all pronounced, but in faint shadowy tints, as in chine silks.

The new tennis flannels are remarkably pretty, and those with a silk stripe or polka dot in rose, mauve, yellow or red, make up charmingly. The rich-surfaced surah silks sold this season at very low rates, considering their quality, are much used as sashes with smart tennis costumes. They are four yards long, and loosely knotted round the waist, hanging at the side in soft loops. The ends are drawn and terminate in a silk tassel, or they are simply gathered and fringed at the extreme end.

Low-throated dresses are everywhere worn, and a large share are collarless, with sometimes a bit of passementerie in points, or a band of ribbon as a substitute. Sometimes the void is lace-filled, but many corsages are left empty and unrelieved. Extra pretty women, with smooth, creamy throats, can endure this fashion, but at its best there is a certain loss of tidiness and an absolute loss of style and elegance with every inch of neck covering taken from the bodice of a street dress.

Gored skirts, variously decorated, bodices in Josephine and Marie Stuart styles, and seamless French corsages fitting with great perfection, sleeves in the quaintest and most picturesque shapes, and tinted satin brocade coats over rich lace waistcoats are among the chief features of new gowns. Jackets, corselets, guimpes, gilets, and other devices in silk, ribbon and lace are too intricate to describe. In the list, also, are lovely lace tea-gowns, overshot taffetas, silk, delicately colored in wondrous changeable effects, and a host of minor accessions which will impart a specially picturesque appearance to the summer girl in the outing season of '91.—N. Y. Post.

THE HUMBUG OF PROVERBS.

Assuming to Be the Essence of Wisdom, They Are Often Unwise.

A proverb has been defined as the wisdom of many and the wit of one. Into many proverbs are packed pithy suggestions as to conduct and generalized experience of mankind. They are sarcastic, hortative, minatory, mirth-provoking, but they are not wiser than the people that make them. Hence, many of them, some of them most widely current are arrant humbugs. If they were once true to experience, under certain conditions, they are true no longer. To say this is flat contradiction of that well-known proverb, "Nobody is wiser than everybody," but even that is one of the humbugs. It not infrequently happens that a single man is wiser than his whole generation. Such men become first the leaders, then the martyrs, of their age, but are the saints and heroes of the ages that follow. As a flagrant instance of proverbial unwisdom and humbug, take the distich that has been dinned into the ears of unnumbered generations of children:

Early to bed, and early to rise,
Makes a man healthy, wealthy and wise.

This is a terse and witty generalization of a pastoral community, where to get on in the world it was necessary to work in the fields from "sun up" to "sun down." It has no application whatever to town life. The wealthy and wise men of towns are men who work late and rise late; and as to health, it is notorious that no part of our population so suffers from all manner of diseases as farmers and their families. Yet how many have been deprived of their natural sleep by a superstition, begot of this wretched rhyme, that early rising is conducive to health. It is only in recent years that people have had the courage to take the sleep that nature demanded. The man who did so a generation ago was called "lazy"—the most intolerable of all epithets. Franklin even aimed a proverb at him: "Men need five hours' sleep, women six, children and fools seven." Nowadays, the man who takes less than eight is the fool. Take some of the maxims inculcating shrewd business policy: A penny saved is a penny earned" has ruined many a man who could not persuade himself to spend money with judicious lavishness in enlarging his business. The penny saved was so large in his eyes that it hid the dollar lost by his foolish economy. "Out of debt, out of danger," and "Better go to bed supperless than rise in debt" are a precious pair that have brought many to the poorhouse. Debt is the only salvation of many a man. Not debt recklessly incurred by extravagant living beyond his means, but debt incurred in the purchase of a home or the establishing of a business. Where would modern commercial affairs be but for credit. But credit means debt; for if A trusts B, B must owe A. Debt makes many a man careful and saving, who would spend all he gets if he had no pressing obligations to meet. So he is forced, as it were in spite of himself, to provide for sickness and old age.—N. Y. Examiner.

A TELL-TALE SIGN.

How He Knew That They Had Just Been Married.

Scene: A railroad train.

A man in a certain seat is deeply absorbed in a newspaper. Although the train stops at a station he does not look up or cast a glance through the window. But he has that queer self consciousness of what is going on about him that people sometimes have in the midst of the most serious reading. He was half conscious of a great shout and much laughter outside on the platform. The laughter was largely feminine, and the melodious din was punctuated by a series of slight reports that a person who gave full instead of half his attention might have recognized as kisses. Then the man dimly felt rather than saw the seat in front of him receive two occupants, and recalled afterward an impression of the two occupants having shouted and laughed a good deal through their window.

Then the train started. As it moved away the man with the newspaper finished the interesting thing he was reading and looked up reflectively. He saw in front of him a young man and a young woman, still without associating any thing with them. He was thinking of what he had read.

The young man wore a light derby hat. He pushed it on the back of his head to mop his heated forehead. As he did so there was a little patter on the newspaper that lay in the lap of the man who was ruminating. The man who was ruminating looked down and saw that this patter had been caused by some tiny grains of rice. This discovery broke the chain of his reverie. He looked up again with a highly interested expression. He saw the young man half turn his head as if he had heard the patter on the paper. The girl was very pretty. She exchanged a glance with the young man that made the middle-aged observer have a warm feeling under the left-hand upper side of his vest front. Then she leaned over and whispered to the young man:

"I've got some of that down my back."—N. Y. Recorder.

The smallest is the best in pills, other things being equal. But, with Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, nothing else is equal. They're the best, not only because they're the smallest, and the easiest to take—but because they do more good. They cleanse and regulate the liver, stomach and bowels in a way the huge, old-fashioned pill doesn't dream of. Think of trying to regulate the system with the ordinary pill. It's only good for upsetting it.

These are mild and gentle—but thorough and effective, no pain—no griping. One little pellet for a laxative—three for a cathartic. The best Liver Pill known. Sick Headache, Bilious Headache, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks and all derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels are prevented, relieved and cured.

They're the cheapest pill you can buy for they're guaranteed to give satisfaction, or your money is returned. It's a plan peculiar to Dr. Pierce's medicines.

You pay only for the good you get. Can you ask more?

A-head of everything that can be used for washing and cleaning, is PEARLINE. If your work is heavy, it is a necessity; if your work is light, it is a luxury. It lessens the labor of washing, and helps everywhere in the housework. There's nothing so harmless—nothing so effective—nothing so popular and yet so new—it is rapidly succeeding soap. Try it for washing dishes—try it for washing anything—everything; only try it—for your own sake and ours. A house without Pearline is "behind the times."

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you, "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, do the honest thing—send it back. 283 JAMES PYLE, New York.

GEO. W. BOLTON, Local Agent.

DELANO DIARY.

—Read the official Sidewalk Notice.

Mrs. John Jacops and daughter of Greenwood visited Delano on Tuesday.

—Mr. Bystrom and Theodore Zeibarth each have a new thrashing engine this week.

—Casper Janikula, Jr., has made application for a license to sell intoxicating liquors in Delano.

—Fred Adickes, Sr., brought in a load of old wheat, on Tuesday, to clean up his granaries for the new crop.

—John Coolen is establishing a branch lumber busness at St. Bonifacius with Nick Frank in charge.

—Jake Bryant's team took a runaway on Thursday from Wittman's drug store to William Stanley's farm. No damage more than a broken halter.

—Cargill Bros., have a new man in their elevator, at this place, Mr. Terry, of Howard Lake, who has moved into Elmer Babb's house. John Grover is going to Wisconsin.

—The ice cream festival at the M. E. Church grove on Saturday evening was quite a pleasant affair. The rain came about 8.30 P. M. and dampened the late comers a little. Receipts about $11.00.

—A school war is raging in the Rader neighborhood. From reports of some of the proceedings we would judge they were copying after some of the Delano methods of conducting school meetings.

—County Superintendent Lindsley has left out from his Teacher's Institnte notice the clause concerning the reduction of fare printed last week. As he was expected to get 100 passengers in order to have the reduction, on the G. N., he does not expect to get it.

—The ball game on Sunday was attended by considerable of a crowd. Delano and a picked up nine under the title of Smith Lake nine were the contestants. As usual Delano won. But the game must have lacked interest when so many tallies were run in. Score 19 to 20 in favor of Delano.

—On Monday the editor in chief of the Eagle and a blushing dame came from Buffalo by a round about road, when accosted with the remark that things looked suspicious and that perhaps they had a license along. There was no denial we are informed. If the Editor in chief of the Eagle wants to forsake his bachelor ways let him.

—Still successful. O. L. Billings informs us that he has secured a pension for C. H. Vorse under the new law. Mr. B. states that claims under his charge are being allowed at the rate of 2 and 3 per week. He has never lost a case having been successful in over 50 cases' and he still has about 80 claims pending before the pension department.

—The new furnaces for the school house have arrived and are being set up. Go and look them over and investigate the system of ventilation. Mr. Rogers, of St. Paul, who is putting them in says the old one could not ventilate the house, a fact long since established in the minds of all intelligent patrons of the school that know anything about the subject and have given it proper attention.

—The EAGLE says our "slap" at the band last week was rather out of place if" and advises us to turn our attention to our "saloon patrons." Possibly the editor didn't read the local immediately preceeiug the one to which he objects or he might have had a fine opportunity to have enlightened his readers as to the contents of a little tin pail in the hands of one of the "children of tender age" whom he met coming out of a saloon a short time before. Screech out old bird give us your opinion on saloons then practice what you preach and we think a small reformation will have been started in Delano.

—The whistle of the steam thrasher is heard in the land and as its toot-a-toot sounds fourth in the early morning the neighbors know who is going to thrash that day. The steamer is a great improvement over the old horse power for speed; but unless competent engineers are in charge they are very dangerous, and may destroy property or, possibly the lives of the farmers, their families and friends. The explosion at Litchfield, a few days ago, which happened in the village, while preparing to start out, calls forcibly to the minds of many old settlers here the sad occasion of the explosion of Peter Bork's engine on the Devine farm, resulting in the death of five persons, among them the late lamented Dr. S. D. Grant who, passing by, called to see the machine work only to help swell the death list. It stands farmers in hand for the safety of themselves, and families, and their property to see to it that only the most skilled and careful men are employed with the safest outfit to do the thrashing. Of what good is your few cents saved or few hours time less taken by hiring the cheapest and most convenient, if your farm should be the scene of an explosion like those referred to, and your family and friends or yourself among the killed. Look out for good machines run by competent men and obviate occurrences of this kind.

—Several eclestials were aboard the G. N. on its trip west and again going east this week. They appeared to be taken in the country from the car windows same as other travelers do and enjoying the scenery.

—C. M. Conzet, President of the Delano Cornet Band, in quite a lengthy article in our "cotemporary" up street informs the public that the band concert, on Sunday evenings in the near future will be commenced "at 7:30 sharp, moon or no moon."

Uncle Joe Bland, of Montrose was a GAZETTE caller on Thursday. He thinks H. W. Watterson is about right, and that Grover Cleveland stands a good chance of being our next President Mrs. Gast, Mrs. Wittman, Mrs. Al Epple, and Mrs. C. F. Peters and children are among the rusticators.

Points About Advertising.

John Wanamaker says: "I never in my life used such a thing as a poster or dodger, or handbill. My plan for fifteen years has been to buy so much space in a newspaper and fill it up with what I wanted. I would not give an advertisement in a newspaper of 500 circulation for 5,000 dodgers or posters If I wanted to sell cheap jewelry or run a gambling scheme I might use posters, but I would not insult a decent reading public with handbills. The class of people who read such things are poor material to look to for support in mercantile affairs. I deal directly with the [illegible] by to him. "How long will you let me run a column of matter through your paper for $100 or $500? as the case may be. I let him do the figuring, and if I think he is not trying to take more than his share I give him the copy. I lay aside the profits on a particular line of goods for advertising purposes. The first year I laid aside $3,000; last year I laid aside and spent $40,000. I have done better this year, and shall increase that sum as the profits warrent it. I owe my success to the newspapers, and to them I will freely give a certain profit of my yearly business."—Indian Rubber World.—Times and Register, Philadelphia.

County Cullings.

Wonder what has become of the Monticello Times we have not seen a copy for several weeks.

The Waverly Tribune came to us last for the first time for several weeks. The Jordon Brothers are running it. In an editoral they announce their intention of following in the footsteps of Thomis Jefferson and other illustrious democrats. Good for them. These are good tracks to walk in.

FROM the Sherburne County TIMES we learn that the total imports of the United States increased during the nine months the McKinley bill has been in force to the amount of $31,426,100! Increased under the McKinley bill! And yet they argue that that bill was to protect our home markets, by stopping importation.

We are in receipt of a copy of the "Premium List and Rules and Regulations of the Twenty-third Annual Fair, of the Wright County Agricultural Society, to be held at Howard Lake, Minn., on Sept., 15, 16, 17, 18, 1891. Every body should get one and go to work to secure one or more of the premiums offered. We hope Delano and the town of Franklin will secure their share of the honors. Honor it is to obtain, by just competition with the county, an equal portion of the premiums. Advertising pays, and securing a prize at the county fair is a big advertisement for any artisan, tradesman, farmer, or any man or woman, boy or girl that may be so fortunate as to obtain this recommendation of their skill and industry.

Teachers' Institute.

The State Teachers' Institute for Wright county will open at Monticello on August 31st, 1891, at 11 o'clock a. m. by an address of welcome by the county superintendent and music by the Teachers' Glee Club of Monticello.

There will be the usual three evening entertainments; one set lecture; the literary evening, and the institute will close with the Friday night sociable on Sept. 4th. Teachers are requested to bring their text books along with them and to review nouns and pronous with special reference to case and to give the verb a careful review Those subjects will be discussed by the county superintendent

The institute will be conducted by Profs. J.T. McCleary and W.W. Pendergast. and every effort will be made to make the work effective and instructive. Teachers who occupy the schools of Write county are expected to attend the institute and school boards can consistently require them to do so. Teachers desiring private boarding should write Mr E.B. Mc Cord or Mr. J. R. Longfellow. F. H. LINDSEY,
County Superintendent.

Half Fare to State Fare.

The Great Northern will sell tickets to the Minnesota State Fair, September 5th, to 12th, at one fare for the round trip.

Ninneapolis Exposition, Aug. 25 to Sept. 26.

Reduced rates via the Great Northern Railway every Tuesday and Friday, beginning August 25th, and daily from September 5th to 12th.

Farm for Sale.

I offer my farm for Sale. One Hundred and Twenty-seven Acres, adjoining the Village of Delano. Well watered, good meadow and timber. About 70 Acres under. Good buildings and everything in good repair, With or without stock. Am growing old reason for selling.

AN EDITORIAL CONTRAST.

CAPTAIN JACK CRAWFORD, "THE POET SCOUT."

I've been a ruminatin' on the editors I see,
That come from 'way back yonder on a sort of jamboree,
A lot o'well fed fellers, wearin' hifalutin clothes
An' tolabl'y good lookin', fur as manly beauty goes.
An' I find myself contrastin' their condition with the boys
That hold the frontier sentiment in sort o' equipoise—
The Arizona Kicker brand, whose brainy bugle toots
Whar' the musical six-shooter robs the courts o' libel suits.
Back East opinion architects have nothing else to do
But write an' think, an' think an' write 'bout everything 'at's new,
But in the free an' easy West, across the dreary plains,
The bulk o' editorial work is done outside 'o brains.
The editor is coroner, an' justus o' the peace,
An' makes out legal papers from a last will to a lease,
Umpires the dog fights of his town, the two or four-legged sort,
And acts as final referee in all degrees o' sport.
He's lookout fur a faro game, an' of'n takes a trick,
A practicin' o' medicine w'en anybody's sick;
He plays a nervy poker game assis'ed by his sleeve,
Laughs with the people in their joys an' grieves with them as grieve.
He allers makes the speeches on the Fo'th day o' July,
An' plays the parson's hand when thar's a nuptial knot to tie,
An' now an' then contracts to do some practicin' at law,
W'en either party wants a man 'at slings a hefty jaw.
His sanctum table allers sets a facin' to the door,
So's when a angry citizen comes smellin' arter gore,
He ain't got no advantage, an' kin seldom git the drop
On the publisher and editor an' owner o' the shop.
He wears his britches in his boots an' never combs his hair,
Except for legal holiday or extra big affair,
An' thinks a starchy collar is a mark o' servitude,
An' wearin' socks excusable in nothin' but a dude.
He's prominent at Lynchin's, calls the figers at a dance,
Works a minin' speculation every time he gets a chance,
Keeps a pair o' runnin' hosses fur the Territorial fair,
An' never shirks at meetin' when he's asked to lead in prayer.
So I find myself contrastin' his condition with the men
Who preach out to the nation with a stubby-pinted pen,
An' he seems to be more gasfiller a dogonation sight
Than them 'at don't do nothin' top 'o God's green earth but write.
—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

A MEETING of Democrats is being held in Minneapolis, to-day, to further arrange for organizing the state forces for the coming Presidential campaign.

CONFLICTING reports of an engagement between the Chillian government forces and the Insurgents, near Valparaisoare being flashed over the country.

THE summer is over and the harvest is ended, and the husbandman has gathered his sheaves into stacks and his hay into barns and soon the golden grain will be ready for sale, and then is when the farmer needs his newspaper. Nearly every household in our county we believe receives one or more papers every week. From the newspapers we get most of our information of what is going on in the world. Of political matters, religious affairs, educational, social, scientific pursuits we read in our weekly newspaper. The market reports are given and from week to week the farmer can figure out for himself what the chances are for a rise or a fall in the price of what he has to dispose of. By keeping a little track of these things and being prompt to take advantage of any sudden rise that may be caused by speculators in commodities, gamblers in bread-stuffs, sellers may often pocket a little extra change; only 5 cents a bushel on a 40 bushel load would give $2.00, enough to pay for the GAZETTE for two years.

Combinations.

Combinations are always wrong and a combine among farmers is no exception to the rule. Supply and demand should always control the price: That the product of the farm has been made the sport of speculation and monopolists is too true but how can it be avoided so long as so many farmers are obliged to convert their products into money at the earliest possible moment after they are ready for the market in order to meet their pecuniary engagements. Men will speculate so long as the money is in the hands of so few and can be had by promising interest for its use and such a state of things cannot be avoided so long as the custom of paying and receiving intrest is tolerated. It is true that few men would lend money if they knew it was to be used to play baccarat but would readily lend it to be used in speculating in stocks or commodities which is only another species of gambling. There are more consumers than producers of wheat and every dollar that the price is advanced beyond a fair remunerating price for its production is just so much wrong to the consumer whether it be extorted by the speculator or producer.

The idea that the producers can hold back their wheat and starve the consumers into paying fabulous prices is not only cruel but absurd. Experience teaches that when it becomes known that any particular crop is short the best prices are obtained at or near the opening of the market for that crop, and with respect to the present wheat crop of the world it appears that there is a large shortage in many foreign countries while we have a larg surplus it will hardly be wise to build our hopes too high on the necessities of others. The higher the price the less the consumption and every bushel starved out of the consumers is just so much towards filling the gap of shortage. My advice to farmers is not to rush their wheat upon the market but bring it foward as the market seemo to require thereby handicaping speculation and realizing what the demand justifies. REX.

KANSAS IS GONE.

The Handwriting on the Wall. Minnesota, Iowa, Ohio, and Penn., on the go. Quay and Dudley are first to Read it and have Gone, Too.

Verily here is an object lesson, which seems to teach that parties as well as individuals must be obedient to the will of the people.

John J. Ingalls has been casually telling the people that he is a politician out of a job. Taking his canibalistic Democratic-eating record in the U. S. Senate it is evident that he has been out of a job for the last fifteen years. Had he spent one quarter of his time studying the wants of the good people of Kansas and tried to relieve them of one single burden, instead of spending his nights mushrooning new ones, he might to-day be a better man, than a politician out of a job.

There are certain parties telling the farmer's that they are poorly generaled. That there is no use to organize because that organization would have a tendency towards class legislation.

My friends, that is just what the farmers are kicking about, is the class legislation we have had for the past twenty-five years.

The farmer's have heard all about that class. It is called the Infant Industry class. William McKinley, of Ohio, is Professor of this class. He teaches home consumption, home market, and they all sing Home sweet home. Of course they respect their teacher. He has a parental and watchful eye over "The Infants." H. E. C.
Rockford, Minn., Aug. 6, 1891.

Fair Notes.

ED. GAZETTE:—The Cornish, Curtis and Greene Company of St. Paul, manufacturers and dealers in all approved kinds of butter and cheese apparatus for the farm, creamery and cheese factory, offer a No. 1. Lever Butter worker valued at $6.50 for the best twenty pound tub of creamery butter on the Wright county Fair Grounds. Also a No. 3. Rectangular churn valued at $10. for the best exhibit of milk cows, it being understood that if any one has two cows decided by the judges to be superior in milking qualities to any others on the fair grounds, the No. 3, rectangular churn shall be awarded to the owner of the two cows, regardless of the larger number of cows that another competitor may display or the average of the remainder. The No. 1 Lever butter worker and the No. 3. rectangular churn will be on exhibition at the fair grounds, and these premiums are, of cousre, in addition to those offered by the Society and by private individuals published in the Premium list. C. H. Burwell, of Minneapolis, one of the large breeders of thorough-bread Shorthorns will exhibit a sample of his stock at our county fair. He has on hand some excellent young stock from the best cows and the celebrated bull "Waterloo Wild-eyes." He will exhibit heifer calves of this stock six months old, weighing 500 pounds.

We have been requested by the World's Fair managers of Minnesota to state that they desire one half bushel each of our premium varieties of wheat oats, barley, rye, timothy, flax, clover and any other seeds or grain worthy of exhibition not enumerated, but which may be displayed at our county fair. The products should be put in separate bags and the necessary shipping tags giving particulars, of ownership with directions can be had at the fair grounds on application to me. If the producer of the product sent to Chicago, feels that he will not be recompensed for the value of the sample furnished, by having it on exhibition at the World's fair; please attach the cost of whatever expense you may be at for bags drayage, ect, and the same will be duly audited by the State board of managers and remittance made to address given for the full amount The committee will be pleased to see Wright County exhibiting the best of its premium varieties at Chicago.

CORRESPONDENCE

ANNANDALE.

Mr. Higgins occupied the M. E. pulpit in the morning and Bishop Gilbert in the afternoon. To say that the Bishop gave us an able and eloquent discourse would be no compliment to him. The Bishop was assisted by Mr. Parshal, who holds a service here every other Sabbath afternoon, as a lay reader.

We have noticed three specimens of apples on the EDITORIAL table of the Annandale Post, grown by Mr. Frank Heaton, senior, of Albion. The fruit was remarkably large and well developed, demonstrating that such fruit can be raised in this vicinity.

Prof. Dood, the gentleman who has been engaged to take charge of our school the ensuing season made a call upon us last week, Thursday and was introduced to many of our people by Mr. S. P. McGuire, one of the board of trustees.

Presiding Elder Stafford held the quarterly conference here last Friday afternoon and in the evening held a regular service and confirmed three persons into the church by the rites of baptism. The Elder spoke complimentary words of the labors of our pastor, Mr. B. F. Higgings, during his pastorate here. Mrs. Lizzie Newcomb, state organizer of the W. C. T. U. gave us a lecture on the subject of Prohibition, Sunday evening in the M. E. church. The lady's ability as a lecturer is recognized by her appointment to the position. There was a society organized by the ladies here Monday.

Mr. J. L. Sherman has the foundation of a house erected on Cherry Avenue and Mr. D. F. Powers, blacksmith, has a house frame up and covered on the same avenue.

Clark Reynolds was arrested and brought before Justice McLane, last Saturday for assaulting W. J. Smith. He plead guilty, was fined $5.00 and costs which he paid and was discharged. And on the same day John Bray was brought before Justice W. W. Towle for assaulting with a deadly weapon, in the night time, Mrs. William Dorman, of Southside. John waived an examination, was bound in the sum of $100. Failing to get the bail was carried to Buffalo but for some reason the authorities there did not appreciate his company so constable Mike O'Loughlin brought him back Monday and he was discharged. Many people think John to be a more proper subject for a lunatic asylum.

John Schyer, Esq., has negotiated a sale of 120 acres of land for P. C. Muth and wife to Charles Pomerenke for $2,400. also 40 acres for A. J. Reiter and wife to the same party for $800. all cash, as we understand it.

Mr. James M. Pratt has surveyor Morgan, of St. Cloud, here this week platting out village lots.

H. F. McLane of Rennie & McLane is in the twin cities this week making selections for the fall trade.

We can breathe easier and deeper now that Sam Wells has left for good, as is hoped.

States Attorney Cutting was here Monday last, on official business as was supposed.

Prof. Davies appears out with a new sewing machine rig and the ladies may be expecting him to appear at any time with a nice machine.

Cofield & McDonald have sold out their furniture ware rooms to L. Richter and A. Ringer, who will continue the business in connection with the undertaking business in the same rooms.

Mr. Ringer has purchased lots on Cherry avenue and Elm street on which he purposes erecting a warehouse and a dwelling another season.

Cofield & McDonald report the receipts of wheat at their elevator at about 2000 bushels daily all, or nearly all, grades No. 1, northern.

Mr. A. R. Adkins has rented the livery barn of Hiram McCalla and proposes to put in a livery stock, he has also rented the dwelling house on Maple avenue owned by said McCalla.

It is getting to be customary for professional gentlemen to take a summer outing or vacation but your correspondent has not yet had his this season and that he may not be out of fashion seriously contemplates taking one yet, even though it may be a little late in the season. The only drawback about it is we don't know where to go, none of our friends have invited us, we are unable to conceive the reason why only that they do not think they could relish our company. They little imagine how much they are missing but we know to a dime what our loss will be. Worst come to worst we shall shut ourself up in a back room for a week or two and the public will suppose we are away on a vacation and you will have to excuse items from us during the time.

WATERTOWN WAYS.

Wheat goes from 25 to 30 bushels to the acre in this vicinity this year. All No. 1.

George Cunningham went below last week and purchased a new traction engine and a new straw stacker. He now has one of the best threshing outfits around here.

Rev. Father Cawley returned home last Saturday evening after a months visit with his sister in the east.

W. W. Holcomb came up and played for the dance last Monday evening and made things lively for the boys and their ladies.

The dance on Monday evening was well attended by the young people of our village and the surrounding country about 75 couple being present. All who attended report having had an enjoyable evening.

Mr. V. Heck has his store nearly ready to move into, he will have the veneering done as soon as he can get the brick here.

Among those who visited the people of our village on last Sunday we noticed the following: Messrs John and Joe Giblin and M. E. Kelly and Misses Nellie, Minnie and Lessie Giblin from Waverly, Miss M. McGinn, of St. Paul.

Mr. Roos the gentleman who has been living on L. Cunningham's farm about a mile and a half east of here died last Sunday at two o'clock, P. M., with Typhoid fever. Four other members of the family are down with the same disease but are getting along nicely and it is hoped that none of them will have to follow in the footsteps of the one who has just gone. The family have the sympathy of a large number of friends who sympathize with them in this their sad affliction.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, Aug. 21, 1891.

Ex-Senator Mahone, of Virginia, is daring enough and unscrupulous enough to attempt almost anything but if my information is correct and there is every reason to belive that it is, his latest scheme is one of the most desperate in which he ever engaged. He once captured the State of Virginia and got himself sent to the Senate by getting control of the so called re-adjuster movement in that State and he is now plotting to get control of the Farmer's Alliance movement in that State in order to capture the legislature and get himself again sent to the Senate this time as successor to Senator Daniel. The plot is all mapped out and the decision of the republican State committee of which Mahone is the owner to nominate no republican candidates for the legislature was part and parcel thereof. The word has passed along the republican lines that they must support the nominations of the Alliance for the legislature if told to do so by their local leaders, and they are to be told to do so in every instance that a blind pledge—Mahone's name is not yet to be used—can be secured from the farmers candidate to vote as they may be told for the successor to Senator Daniel.

Harrison republicans have never been plenty outside of the holders of the Federal office, but there is now a manifest dispostion even among that class of republicans to get aboard of the Blaine train which is believed to have been given impetus enoughby the semi-endorsement of the Pennsyvania State convention to enable it to make the trip to nomination station without any serious difficulty even should Mr. Harrison attempt to play the part of train wrecker by placing obstructions on the track which he may or may not do as circumstances may determine.

All the rumors about the coming retirement of Secretary Noble and Commissioner of Pensions Raum have been revived this week. One of the causes for this was the statement made by Secretary Foster that Mr. Harrison would return to Wasnington the first week in September instead of remaining away until the first of October as he had originally contemplated because there was some very important business connected with the Interior department that required his personal attention. The only question pending befor the Interior department so far as the public knows that might be considered important enough to require the personal attention of Mr. Harrison is that of compelling the cattle kings to vacate the Cherokee outlet they having up to the present time quietly ignored the orders of Uncle Sam to get out but the general sentiment seems to be that the important business is naming the sucessor to Seceary Noble and to Commissioner Raum who are the two most imporant officials connected with the Interior department. Another thing which is probably having its effect in making Mr. Harrison change his plans is that he can pull the wires for securing delegates to the national convention, Should Blaine allow him to continue to think himself a candidate to far greater advantage in the White House than anywhere else.

It is now absolutely certain that a very large amount of the 4½ per cent bonds will not be presented for extension at 8 per cent and Secretary Foster is now putting his trust in the belief that the most of the bonds that will not be presented for extension are in the hands of guardian or trustees and that it will be a long time before they are presented for redemption and that they will come in slowly and in small quanties. Should he be wrong and the most of these bonds be presented for redemption immediately after they mature September 2, Mr. Foster will, if he carries out his present intention of using a part of the $100,000,000 gold reserve fund to pay them in the opinion of able constitutional lawyers render himself liable to be held personally responsible for the amount taken from the fund to say nothing of impeachment by Congress.

There are those who say that Land Commissioner Carter, Russell Harrison's protege has not overworked himself trying to cary out the law by driving the cattel kings some of whom are said to be warm friends of both "Russ" and himself from the Cherokee outlet Some inquiry in to this business may have to be made by Mr. Harrisen, senior.

Mr Wanamaker was the principal speaker at a reunion of the Old time telegraphers and the Military telegraphers held last night. Wires were run into the hall and every word of the proceedings was instantly ticked into more than one hundred thousand telegraph offices through the land.

American Screws In England.

Another industry, of an important character, is about to be introduced into Leeds. For some time past, says Iron, the American Screw Company, of Providence, R. I., has had in contemplation the establishment of a screw factory in this country, and circumstances being now favorable for the enterprise, Leeds has been selected as the industrial center offering the most advantageous conditions. An eligible site has been obtained in Leeds, viz., that of the Old Perseverance Iron Works, in Kirkstall Road. It is proposed to cover the frontage to Kirkstall Road to the extent of 100 feet, and to carry the building back for 344 feet with a width (over the greater part of the latter) of 80 feet. When the time for extension arrives a duplicate of this building will be erected; and when this has been done, the two buildings running backward from the road will be separated by a yard 40 feet in width. The screws manufactured will be exclusively of the kind used by joiners and carpenters, and they will be of the English pattern. The machinery for the factory will come from America, and be adapted to the requirements of the trade in this country. The screws are packed in paper boxes, and together with the necessary labels and trade marks will at the outset be procured from English firms, but the company intend eventually to make the boxes on their own premises, and will, in all probablity, print the labels and trade marks there likewise. The finished wire used in the manufacture of the screws will also at the start be obtained elsewhere; but the scheme of the company includes the construction of wire mills and annealing furnaces alongside the screw factory.—Scientific American.

THE canal which is to connect Manchester with the sea is one of the greatest undertakings of modern times. Its total length will be 33½ miles. It will be 26 feet deep, 120 feet wide at the bottom and 220 feet at the top. It is about three-fourths completed, and will cost about $45,000,000.

THERE is considerable excitement in China over the demands of foreign governments for reparation for the numerous outrages recently committed on foreigners. The Chinese officials have been so indifferent to the demands that a concentrated naval demonstration is hinted at. There is an intense feeling of hatred in the Empire against foreigners and more trouble is expected.

KATE FIELD, in a late number of her weekly, has a good word to say for men's knee breeches. Men, with a fatality for talking of things they know nothing about, have long agitated modifications in the fashion of woman's apparel. Miss Field is, perhaps, seeking revenge in this way for the steady stream of unsolicited advice about clothes which men have poured upon women.

VERMONT, a few days ago, celebrated the centennial anniversary of her admission to the Union, and in connection with that dedicated the Bennington monument, which marks the battlefield on which Gen. Stark and his militiamen defeated the British troops on August 16, 1777. The monument is more than 300 feet high, the loftiest shaft ever erected in this country to commemorate a battle.

NOT content with practicing law and medicine, and even acting as conductors on street cars, women seem to aspire to a perfect equality with the ruder sex in deeds of darkness as well as works of light, for a Brooklyn woman has just been sentenced to the penitentiary for entering with burglarious intent the room of a sleeping man. Of all the professions that of burglar one would suppose to be the least attractive to shrinking femininity.

A SAN FRANCISCO chemist says there is only one refinery in the world that makes absolutely pure sugar. This manufactory is in Germany, and it supplies chemists and druggists with sugar for solutions which must be unclouded. This chemically pure article would not find much sale for table use, as it is a dirty, grayish white in appearance. When dissolved it gives a perfectly clear solution, there being no artificial coloring matter in suspension.

THE expenditures for pensions for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1891, as now officially stated, amounted to $124,415,951.40. In the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, we paid $109,357,534, while in the year before that we paid $87,644,779.11. In the past ten years our pension payments have amounted to $776,282,100.07. The cost of the German army, it may be interesting to note, is for this year estimated at $80,979,733. Besides our pensions our army costs $30,000,000.

GOV. PATTISON had an embarrassing experience when in camp with the boys of the Second Pennsylvania brigade. While he was crossing the drill grounds a plump matron of five and forty rushed up to him and, exclaiming, "Say, governor, can I kiss you?" threw her arms around his neck and planted a resounding smack upon his lips. The governor blushed a rosy red, while the surrounding crowd laughed, and the woman said: "I only kissed you on a bet that I could, and I have kept my word."

AT end of the last year there were in the country 166,817 miles of railroad track, and of this grand total 157,976 miles were in operation. The total track existing at the end of the calendar year was 5,421 miles in excess of that which existed twelve months before. The cost of these roads and their equipment was about $8,790,000,000, and the other property belonging to them was worth about $2,000,000,000. Their capital stock amounted to $4,640,239,578, and their total indebtedness was $11,506,000,000, of which $5,106,000,000 was bonded and $6,400,000,000 floating debt.

VARIOUS plans have been heard of from time to time by which young women agreed to boycott young men for different social offenses, from the absorption of strong drink to the mastication of tobacco in female society. But New York has the most advanced specimen of this class of boycott. MINNESOTA STATE NEWS

Called It Swindling.

Insurance Commissioner Smith has refused the application for licenses to do business in Minnesota to the Red Cross, New England Order of Industry, Order of the Golden Grail, Order of Mystic Seven, Mutual One Year Benevolent Association and Order of the Fraternal Circle, all of Massachusetts. The commissioner says the majority of these companies promise $100 for $50 annually, and he characterizes such dealings as swindling. Any agent soliciting or accepting any business for these companies will be subject to prosecution under the laws of the state for every policy taken.

Dead a Week When Found.

Coroner Hanson was called to investigate the death of a man named Christian Larson, living in an unorganized township about 12 miles northeast of Duluth. The man, who was a Dane 35 years old, lived alone on his homestead. The neighbors say that he was insane on the subject of religion. His dead body was found near a lake about 1 mile from his cabin, with a revolver near by. He had evidently been dead about a week. About $85 was found in the house. On the table was a card on which was written a request that all he had should be used to build a church near his place.

Exploded in the Streets.

A thrasher engine boiler, the property of S. I. Kulset, exploded in Litchfield and A. Clements, the engineer, was badly scalded and had a leg crushed. John Lund, passing by in a wagon, was struck and had his arm broken and one of his horses killed. The head of the boiler, weighing about 300 pounds, was thrown about 400 feet and crashed into Angell's candy store, while smaller pieces went a much greater distance.

Her Mother Objected.

William Bender, manager of the Indiana branch of the Anhauser-Busch Brewing association at Fergus Falls, eloped with Kate Bell, one of the best known young society ladies of that city, and the couple were married at Ashby. The cause of the elopement was opposition by the mother of the bride to the match, because Bender had been divorced from his former wife.

State Treasurer's Report.

The report of State Treasurer Bobleter is just out. The actual state debt, after deducting investments in sinking fund and cash in redemption fund, is $2,185,187.86. A NEW antiseptic called microcidine has been discovered. It is a powder, formed of naphthol and soda. It is almost harmless, and is neither poisonous nor irritant.

IN Australia, where deadly snakes abound, it has been discovered that strychnia is almost an infallible cure for their bites. The antidote acts quickly, snake poison slowly. All physicians use it.

A LEIPSIC scientist has demonstrated by facts and figures what most people have always believed, that colds are oftener caught by those who wrap themselves up and avoid the severity of the weather than by those who dare to brave the elements.

CLOUDS consist simply of water divided into minute globules or drops. They differ in no essential respect from the steam emitted by a teakettle, or the mists and fogs that fill river valleys at sunrise. These forms of water are all produced in the same way.—Portland (Me.) Expre

OUR ABSOLUTE WEALTH.

A Census Bulletin Giving the Assessed Valuation of Property in the United States.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—The census bureau has issued a bulletin on the assessed valuation of real and personal property of the several states and territories. The valuations are shown for the years 1890 and 1880, with the exception of Michigan, which is for 1886, and of Arkansas, Delaware, Iowa, Mississippi, New Mexico, Washington and Wyoming, which are for 1889. The bulletin shows that the assessed valuation of all property has increased from $16,902,993,543 in 1880 to $24,249,589,804 in 1890, an increase during the decade of $7,346,596,261, an amount equivalent to the true value of all property as returned by the United States census in 1850 ($7,135,780,228).

Should it be found upon the completion of the inquiry in relation to the true value of all property in the United States that the same relation exists in 1890 between assessed valuation and true valuation as existed in 1880, the absolute wealth of the United States, according to the eleventh census, may be estimated at $62,610,000,000, or nearly $1,000 per capita, as against $514 per capita in 1860, $780 per capita in 1870 and $870 per capita in 1880. The final returns showing the absolute wealth of the country will necessarily be among the last publications of this office, as completed data for the calculation are not available until after the inquiries relating to agriculture and manufactures have been finished. The state of Illinois shows an apparent decrease of $59,200,142, because the state board of equalization declares that in 1880 the assessed value was 50 per cent. and in 1890 only 25 per cent. of the true value. Among the states showing an increase of assessed valuation are the following:

Alabama	$74,213,213	Nebraska	$98,184,523
Arizona	12,164,553	Nevada	4,628,075
Arkansas	85,999,133	New Mexico	34,677,694
California	485,524,291	New York	1,133,385,932
Colorado	114,439,632	N. Dakota	69,607,964
Idaho	19,140,429	Ohio	243,777,949
Illinois	49,300,142	Oregon	113,503,647
Indiana	55,054,995	Pennsylv'a	909,382,016
Iowa	79,646,997	S. Dakota	120,057,629
Kansas	129,702,022	Tennessee	135,731,565
Kentucky	102,051,535	Texas	375,477,806
Louisiana	74,158,341	Utah	79,983,471
Michigan	427,783,641	Washington	100,984,756
Minnesota	330,569,656	W. Virginia	30,304,892
Mississippi	46,800,777	Wisconsin	153,918,968
Missouri	253,547,952	Wyoming	17,809,666
Montana	87,873,090

The bulletin further shows that in 1890, exclusive of Oklahoma, the assessed valuation per capita was $387.62, against $337.01 in 1880, and that, while the increase in population was 24.86 per cent. the increase per capita of assessed valuation was 43.46 per cent.

THE LIST GROWING.

The Victims of the New York Horror Number Over 100—Thirty-Six Bodies Taken from the Ruins, and Eighty-Eight Persons Are Missing.

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—Men were kept at work all day at the ruins of the building which collapsed on Park place last Saturday. At midnight the thirty-sixth body had been recovered from the debris. Of the bodies taken there twenty have been identified by means of articles of clothing. Eighty-eight are missing. Five of the bodies recovered Monday were those of young girls. They were found huddled together in a vault under the sidewalk, which had been used as a resting-room for the women employed in the bronze mixing shop of Louis Rosenfeld. The scenes which followed the recovery of these bodies were heartrending. They were all identified on the sidewalk a few feet away from the fallen building and in view of thousands of curious people. There are immense masses of the ruins yet to be overhauled, and it will be Friday or Saturday before the hunt for the dead is finished.

A SUDDEN CALL.

An Electric Shock Hastens the Death of Postmaster General Raikes, of England.

LONDON, Aug. 25.—Rt. Hon. Henry Cecil Raike, M. P., the postmaster general, is dead. Mr. Raikes had recovered sufficiently from his late illness to go out walking Sunday, when he received a severe electric shock during a thunderstorm.

[Mr. Raikes, who was 53 years of age, was educated at Shrewsbury school and Trinity college, Cambridge. He was called to the bar at the Inner Temple in 1863 and elected a bencher in 1880. In parliament he represented Chester for twelve years, subsequently sitting for Preston, and from 1874 to 1880 was chairman of the ways and means and deputy speaker of the house of commons. In 1880 he became a member of the privy council, and in 1886 took the position of postmaster general in the Salisbury ministry. Mr. Raikes was active in the management of several railway enterprises and in church affairs.]

SONS OF VETERANS.

Tenth Annual Encampment of the Order at Minneapolis.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Aug. 25.—The tenth annual encampment of the Sons of Veterans began in this city with about 5,000 members of the order in attendance. This includes, besides the members of the grand commandery, which is the executive body, a large number of visiting camps who came to participate in the competitive drill. Commander Webb furnished the following statistics in advance from his annual address: During the year 26,423 members, have been taken in; 552 new camps with 10,320 members were mustered in. The actual membership of the order to-day is fully 150,000. The order, founded in 1881, was first officially recognized in August, 1889, by the G. A. R. and has since grown very rapidly.

Evidently Took His Own Life.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Aug. 24.—On Friday night the body of a well-dressed man was found floating in the river near this city and taken to the morgue. The body remained unidentified until Sunday afternoon, when it was recognized as that of George J. Osborne, superintendent of the Milwaukee company's elevators at Minneapolis, who mysteriously disappeared a week ago. Two ten-pound stones were found in the pockets of his coat, clearly indicating suicide. Mr. Osborne was quite a prominent man and no cause can be assigned for the act.

Uncle Sam's Assessment.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—The assessed valuation of the real and personal property of the United States and territories, as shown by a circular issued from the census bureau, is $24,249,589,804. This is an increase of over $7,000,000 since 1880.

Five Persons Killed by an Explosion.

VIENNA, Aug. 25.—A dispatch from Neusatz, a town on the Danube opposite Peterwardein, says that the boiler of the Danube company's steamer Apostag exploded Monday, killing five persons and seriously injuring two others.

MASSACRED IN ALASKA.

Sixty Whalers Killed by Natives of the Country—Crews of Two Steamers, Who Were Wintering Near the Mouth of the Mackenzie River, Slaughtered by the Indians.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—A catastrophe is reported by the treasury department from the Arctic regions. It is said that the crews of two small steam whalers wintering near the mouth of the Mackenzie, 500 miles east of Point Barrow, have been massacred by the natives of that region. There is a great whaling ground, probably the best in the Arctic, taking one season with another, for about 100 miles on each side of this great river. Some seasons, however, the ice is so solid that it is not until late in August that an entrance can be effected by crowding through the ice, striking the whales feeding off the mouth of the Mackenzie. In view of these facts the Pacific Whaling Company prepared two of their smallest steamers, the Grampus and Hume, for a winter stay at a small bay or inlet near the mouth of the river. All told the crews of the two vessels number sixty persons, well equipped and provisioned for a long siege, with rifles and ammunition, not so much for purposes of defense as for supplying themselves with game. Heretofore the natives have been very friendly to the whites. Whaling crews encamped on the land would not be under any such strict discipline as might be enforced on shipboard, and if their intercourse with the natives was offensive they have probably been overpowered by superior numbers.

SEVERE STORMS.

A Cyclone Does Great Damage in New Jersey—Railways and Dams Washed Out in Pennsylvania.

SUMMIT, N. J., Aug. 25.—A cyclone struck Long Hill, in the Passaic valley, during the thunderstorm Sunday evening. Whole orchards and corn fields were uprooted and scattered broadcast. The cyclone struck Long Hill about 5 o'clock in the afternoon, cutting a swath as though a huge mower had gone over the ground. The cyclone is the first ever experienced in this section. The damage amounts to $100,000.

READING, Pa., Aug. 25.—Near Vernersville, just after the engine of a freight train passed over a culvert in safety Sunday night, the culvert was washed away and the entire train of ten cars plunged into the culvert and was washed away. Over one-third of a mile of track was washed away. There were several slight washouts between Reading and Allentown, but the damage was soon repaired. At Mohrsville, this county, eight dams, each half an acre to an acre in extent, were washed away, and the hat factories and mills will be unable to resume until the dams' breaks have been rebuilt. Consternation reigned supreme at the Bowman Evangelical camp meeting near Mohrsville, this county. Lightning struck a number of trees, and some of them, on falling, came dangerously near crushing upon tents. A regular stream of water rushed through the woods and carried away bedding and furniture. In this city one-fourth of the streets were under water. Hundreds of cellars were filled and choked up and in many houses the flood reached the first floors.

EUROPE MUST INTERFERE.

Necessary for the Preservation of Peace in China—Riots and Other Hostile Demonstrations Becoming More Serious.

ROME, Aug. 25.—One of the leading papers here prints an article that is supposed to be inspired by the Italian minister to China and which goes into the Chinese question at some length. The deduction to be made from the article is that the chances and reasons for European interference becoming absolutely necessary are growing daily. Riots and other hostile demonstrations in China are becoming more and more serious. The two viceroys of the Yangtse provinces, which are inland, are absolutely at the mercy of the piratical rabble. The Chinese government has neither the strength nor the authority to put down the insurrection. To make the situation more critical it is rumored that certain high officials and other powerful personages in the empire are viewing the present state of things with a secret satisfaction. By some this whole agitation is attributed to religious prejudices and widespread hatred of Europeans; others affirm that the movement is the work of Europeans. It is also said that the movement is the work of secret societies seeking to upset the reigning dynasty. Those who favor the latter idea consider it good policy to breed and encourage this illfeeling between Chinese and European powers.

KANSAS' BIG CROPS.

Railroads Break the Record in the Number of Cars of Wheat Moved.

KANSAS, CITY, Mo., Aug. 25.—The greatest crop of wheat in the history of Kansas is being moved. Monday 667 cars of it were received here, the largest receipts in the history of the market. In 1882, the big-crop year, the largest receipts for a single day amounted to 610 cars. A blockade is threatened, as there are now in the yards here 2,000 cars of wheat waiting to be moved. The Union Pacific is the only line that seems to have fully prepared itself to avoid such a possibility. Hundreds of cars are coming from the west daily, from the shops and from foreign lines to move the immense output of grain.

Too Many Peaches.

EASTON, Md., Aug. 25.—The peach business this year is a bigger failure than last year when there was very little crop. The trouble this year is that there is too big a crop and prices are away down. Many growers have become disgusted with the business and are digging up their orchards and carting away the trees.

Fatal Railway Accident.

TULA, Miss., Aug. 24.—A freight train on the Louisville, New Orleans & Texas railroad went through a trestle near here, killing two men outright and injuring three others.

Reciprocity Rejected.

PANAMA, Aug. 15.—It is announced that the Venezuelan congress has rejected the reciprocity treaty proposed by the United States. It involved a heavy reduction in certain dues, amounting to 33 per cent. of the customs revenue, while the advantages to be derived by Venezuela are comparatively small.

Two Lives Lost in a Mine.

CARDIFF, Aug. 25.—An explosion took place Monday at a colliery near Methyr Tydvil, Wales. Two persons lost their lives by being suffocated. There was no further loss of life and nobody is reported missing.

PERSONAL AND LITERARY.

—Germany publishes more periodicals than all the rest of Europe.

—A newspaper in the gypsy jargon, the Romany tongue, is soon to be published in England with the expectation of making it the organ of the wandering people. It will be edited by George Smith, the "king" of the English gypsies, who counts upon getting twenty thousand subscribers to it.

—Among the few women in New York who have taken to the foolish fad of wearing a ring on the thumb Mrs. Charles H. T. Collis, Ella Wheeler Wilcox and Lillian Russell are named. Mrs. Collis' thumb ring is set with sapphires and diamonds; those of the others are set with diamonds alone.

—George Kennan is famous for his wonderful memory. He is an omnivorous reader, and his system enables him to retain a large proportion of what he reads. Kennan passes his summers at a charming spot in one of the British North American provinces, and his home is the scene of much hospitality.

—Puvis de Chavannes, who succeeds Meissonier as president of the National Society of French Artists, is a great painter of frescoes, and has decorated the walls of many public buildings in Paris and the provinces. He is well advanced in years, tall, intellectual and an elegant gentleman. It is hardly necessary to say that he does not share his predecessor's unreasonable hatred for Americans.

—Manuscripts left by Count von Moltke, containing accounts of his youth, notes on various tours, a narrative of the war with France, and other interesting matter, are already in the hands of German printers. The great general was an attractive writer, and had he devoted himself to literature might have gained as great fame as he won through the sword.

—The Mexican president, Porfirio Diaz, is a straight, dignified man of medium height, who impresses the beholder with his strength of character. There is nothing ostentatious about him. He dresses as quietly as a plain citizen of the republic, and exhibits a contempt for the gaudy regimentals in which many Central American leaders array themselves. He has a striking face and figure, and is undoubtedly the greatest man of modern Mexico.

—Walter Savage Landor and his wife separated because they had no life in common and no common sympathies or tastes. Kenyon records an occurrence in the pair's honeymoon which tells the whole story. On one occasion, it seems, the newly-married couple were sitting side by side. Landor was reading some of his own verses to his bride—and who could read more exquisitely?—when all an once the lady, releasing herself from his arm, jumped up, saying: "Oh, do stop, Walter, there's that dear delightful Punch performing in the street. I must look out of the window." Exit poetry forever!

—One takes as a matter of course the pictures of Salvini and Davenport and Mansfield scattered about on desk and table of the girl of the period, but a visitor looked a little surprised on seeing a picture of Rudyard Kipling on the colonial desk of a young woman afflicted with the journalistic fever. "Yes, I am very fond of Rudyard," said the owner of the "den," "and when I want a particularly 'pat' word or phrase I just look up and catch his eye, and it hops right into my head; and when I'm getting too prolox he looks over his glasses and says: 'But that's another story,' and I stop short."—Saturday Evening Gazette.

THE GIRLS OF NINETY-ONE.

They tell me 'twas the fashion,
Oh, long and long ago,
For girls to look like lilies white,
And sit at home and sew.
Forth strode their sturdy brothers
On many a gallant quest;
But the maids behind the lattice
Their weary souls possessed.

To-day the times have altered,
And pretty Kate and Nell
Are playing merry tennis—
In sooth, they do it well.
They ride across the country,
They climb the mountain side,
And with oars that feather lightly,
Along the rivers glide.

If they've not yet been to college,
They are going by and by,
To shake the tree of knowledge,
Though its branches touch the sky.
For all their Greek and Latin,
And poring over books,
With faces smooth as satin,
They'll keep their dainty looks.

Do you want a happy comrade,
In study or in fun?
Be sure you'll find her quickly
'Mid the girls of ninety-one.
She'll keep that bright head steady
Unharmed in any whirl,
And not a lad will love her less
Because she is a girl.

MARY CLARIMONT, M. D.

Her Profession Is Husband and Home to Her Now.

When Mary Clarimont's engagement was proclaimed to the world there ensued a general expression of surprise.

Miss Clarimont was one-and-twenty, a tall, imperial beauty, with dewy black eyes, a skin as fresh as damask roses, and dark brown hair coiled in shining bands at the back of her head.

Moreover, Miss Clarimont had a "career" before her. She had just graduated from Medfield Medical university, and taken out her diploma as an M. D.

"And only to think of it," said Aunt Jo, bursting into tears of vexation and disappointment, "that she must needs go and ruin all her prospects by getting engaged to Harry Marlow, down in New York!"

"It does seem strange, Aunt Jo, when I sit down and think of it," said Dr. Mary, laughing and blushing. "Six months ago my profession was all the world to me. I neither wished nor cared for anything outside its limits. The future was all mapped out before me without let or hindrance; and now—"

"Humph!" growled Aunt Jo. "Any brainless idiot can get married and keep a man's house and mend his shirts for him, but you were made for something higher and more dignified, Mary."

Mary's dew-bright eyes sparkled.

"Higher, Aunt Jo?" said she. "More dignified? There you are mistaken. There is no higher or more dignified lot in life than that of the true wife of a noble husband."

"Fiddlesticks!" said Aunt Jo. "As if every poor fool who was dazzled by the glitter of a wedding ring didn't say the same thing! You've disappointed me, Mary Clarimont, and I'm ashamed of you, and that is the long and short of it."

"Dear Aunt Jo," said she, "I shall not let my sword and shield rust, believe me. Harry has only his own talents to advance him in the world, and it will be at least a year before we shall be ready to marry. In the meantime I shall accept the post of visiting physician to the Aldenbury almshouse and practice my profession, just the same as if there were no engagement."

"I wish to goodness there wasn't," said Aunt Jo. "I tell you what, Mary, I don't fancy that smiling, smooth-tongued young man of yours, and I never shall."

Still Dr. Mary Clarimont kept her temper.

"I am sorry, Aunt Jo," she said, pleasantly. "But I hope you will eventually change your mind."

"I used to keep a thread and needle store when I was a young woman," remarked Aunt Jo, dryly, "and I always could tell the ring of a counterfeit half dollar when a customer laid it on the counter. I could then, and I can now—and I tell you what, Mary, there's base metal about Harry Marlow."

Dr. Mary bit her lip.

"Perhaps. We will not discuss the subject further, Aunt Jo," she said, with quiet dignity, and the old lady said no more.

"Aunt Jo is wrong," persisted the pretty young M. D. to herself.

"Mary is making a fool of herself!" thought Aunt Jo.

Aldenbury was a pretty manufacturing village, with a main street shaded by umbrageous maples, a "west end," where people who had made their fortunes lived comfortably in roomy old houses, surrounded by velvet lawns and terraced gardens, and an "east end," where people fought desperately and not always successfully to keep body and soul together on the merest pittance.

And a little way out of the village the almshouses, built and endowed by a certain smuggling sea captain, whose conscience had pricked him during his latter days, raised their gray stone gables to the sky and made a picturesque background to the landscape.

Dr. Mary Clarimont made something of a sensation at Aldenbury. Up to this time all the resident M. D.'s had been stuffy old gentlemen with wigs or pert young ones with eyeglasses.

A beautiful young lady who wrote prescriptions and compounded pills and potions was a novelty in the town, and by no means a disagreeable one. People rather liked the idea, once they had convinced themselves that the lady doctor understood herself and her patients.

And the poor old people at the almshouse grew to love Dr. Mary and listen with eager ears for the sound of her carriage wheels over the blue gravel drive which led up to the portico.

It was a brilliant December day when the young physician stood in the neatly-carpeted reception-room drawing on her fur gloves previous to entering her neat phaeton once again, while she reiterated to the white-capped maid some directions concerning old Ann Mudgett's rheumatism, when the matron hurried in.

"Oh, I beg your pardon, Dr. Clarimont," said she, "but I clean forgot the new old woman."

"That is," exclaimed Mrs. Cunningham, "she only came last night; a quiet old soul, half blind, and quite bad with the asthma. Perhaps you'd better just see her before you go. She brought a card of admission from Dr. Merton, the New York clergyman, who is one of our directors, you know. And she seems a decent body enough."

So Dr. Mary went cheerfully into the little brick-paved room with its white pallet bed, cushioned rocking chair and neatly-draped casement, where sat a poor, little, shriveled-up woman wrapped in a faded shawl.

She looked timidly up as Dr. Mary came in, from under the borders of her cap.

"I'm a poor body, miss," said she, "and I'm sensible I'm making a deal of trouble in the world. But the Lord don't always take us, miss, when we'd like to go."

"This is the doctor," said Mrs. Cunningham.

The little woman would have risen up to make a feeble courtesy, but Dr. Mary motioned her to keep her seat.

"What is your name?" said she, pleasantly.

"Louise Marlow, miss."

"Marlow? That is an unusual name, isn't it?" said Mary Clarimont, coloring in spite of herself.

"We're English, miss," said the old woman, struggling bravely with her asthma. "There ain't many of us in this country. I've a son, miss, in the law business, as any mother might be proud of."

"A son!" echoed Mrs. Cunningham; "and you in the almshouse?"

"Not that it's his fault, ma'am," the old creature made haste to explain. "My son is to be married to a fine, proud young lady, as is fit for any prince in all the land, and of course he can't be expected to burden himself with a helpless old woman like me.

"He says I'm to write and let him know how I get along, and if I'm sick or anything he'll try to see me. I sewed carpets until the asthma got hold of me, and supported myself comfortably. But, of course, I couldn't lay up anything for a rainy day—who could?

"And Henry couldn't help me, for he's getting ready to be married, poor lad! So I went to Dr. Merton and asked him did he know any decent place where an old woman like me could end her days in peace. And he gave me a card to come here and some money to pay my traveling expenses—God bless him!—and here I am."

Mary Clarimont listened quietly to the garrulous tale, but the color varied in her cheek more than once as she stood there.

"Is your son's name Harry Marlow?" she said, slowly and thoughtfully.

"Yes, miss, at your service," said the old woman, with a duck of her white-capped head, which was meant to do duty in place of the impossible courtesy.

"Is he like this?" said Dr. Mary, taking a photograph from her pocket.

The old woman, with trembling hands, fitted on her iron bowed spectacles and looked at the picture, uttering a little cry of recognition.

"Sure, miss, it is his own self," she cried.

"You are acquainted with him, then?"

"Somewhat," said Dr. Mary, composedly, as she returned the photograph to its place. "And now I will leave you something to relieve you of this difficulty in breathing."

But the old crone eyed her wistfully.

"Perhaps you know the young lady my son is to marry?"

"Yes," said Dr. Mary, writing something in her prescription book. "I have seen her."

"Perhaps, miss," faltered the old woman, "you would give her my humble duty, and tell her I would just like to look at her for once and see what she is like. There's no fear of my troubling her, miss, for I mean to end my days here. But I would like to see her just once. And if it wouldn't be asking too much, miss, would you please write to my son and tell him where I am, for I'm no scholar myself, and I'm his mother, after all."

"I will write to him," said Dr. Mary, quietly; and so she went away.

"I never see a lady doctor afore," said old Mrs. Marlow, with a long sigh. "But she's a pretty creetur, and it seems good to have her around. I hope she'll come again soon."

"You may be very sure of that," said the matron, brusquely. "Dr. Clarimont ain't one to neglect poor people because they are poor."

That evening Aunt Jo, frying crullers over the kitchen fire, was surprised by a visit from her niece, who came in all wrapped in furs, with her cheeks crimsoned with the frosty winter air.

"Bless me! this ain't never you!" said Aunt Jo, peering over her spectacles.

"I drove over to see you, Aunt Jo," said Mary, "to tell you that you were right. The metal was counterfeit."

"Eh?" said Aunt Jo, mechanically ladling out the brown, curly crullers, although she did not look at what she was doing.

"I have written to Harry Marlow, canceling our engagement," said Dr. Mary, calmly, albeit her voice faltered a little. "The man who will heartlessly let his old mother go to the almshouse sooner than to take the trouble to maintain her, can be no fit husband for any woman."

And then she sat down by the fire and told Aunt Jo everything, for crabbed, crusty old Aunt Jo had been like a mother to her, and the girl's heart was full to overflowing.

When she had ceased speaking, Aunt Jo nodded her head.

"You have done well and wisely," said she.

Old Mrs. Marlow died that winter in Aldenbury almshouse, with her head on Dr. Mary Clarimont's arm, and never knew that her garrulous confessions had deprived her son of his promised wife.

And Mary says quietly and resolutely that her profession must be husband and home to her henceforward.

"Just what it ought to be," says Aunt Jo. "No woman ever yet succeeded in doing two things at once."—Indianapolis News.

After the Culprit.

After the bridal party partook of a sumptuous banquet, a younger brother of the bride got up and said, solemnly, raising his glass:

"Ladies and gentlemen, I have to propose a toast, which, however, must be drunk standing. Please take your glasses and rise up."

The guests, although somewhat bewildered, did so.

AGRICULTURAL HINTS.

LABOR-SAVING LOADER.

A Hayrack That Is a New Departure, But No Experiment on Paper.

The hayrack shown here is a new departure in its line, but is no experiment on paper. I began using it in Kansas in 1878, when I had lots of heavy work for it. Some thought it would break down back of the front wheels, but it has stood severe tests and long service without any apparent weakening. One advantage is that it places the load down low, thus making it easier to load and less liable to upset. Again, the chances for cramping and straining, and possibly breaking the front wheels of the wagon, are done away with, as the wheels can turn under the load without touching the timbers, neither can they tilt the rack up edgewise. It also allows short turning, almost as short as the naked running gear, and for this reason saves the team much travel and many a hard pull.

The rack is well explained by the two cuts. Cut No. 1 shows the plain frame without the boards. A. A. are the two main bed timbers, 2 by 4 inches square and of the desired length and distance apart. B. B. are two shorter bed tim bers, 4 by 4 inches, while C. C. C. C. are cross timbers, 2 by 4 inches, as long as the rack is wide. These are firmly bolted together by 1-16 or ⅛-inch bolts. D. D. D. D. is a square of 4 by 4-inch timbers just large enough to fill between the bolster standards, and 1 inch to spare to notch ½ inch on each side for standard. The front cross piece must be on top of the side timbers, but the back one may be on top or underneath the long timbers, better on top.

Cut No. 2 shows the rack entire. By refering to cut No. 1 it will be seen that the hind wheels will run under E. E. Boards are run from the cross piece in front of the hind wheels to the cross back of the cut under. Now cut a piece of 2x4 inch joist long enough to reach from the end of the side timber to the outside of the rack, G. G., and set up on edge on the boarding F. Also cut two blocks 4 by 4 inches for the front corners of the square D. and on top of them lay the front cross timber of oak, 2 by 4 inches laid flat ways. Bolt the whole securely together. Now place on this cross-piece boards reaching to G. G. and also bolt. Do not nail anything in building this rack. For the cover to the hind wheels any boards will do, but elms is the best. Soak in water for 24 or 48 hours and bind over the wheels, bolting to the cross timbers, both in front and back of the wheels. A board as long as the rack and wide enough to fill between the long timbers should also be bolted underneath the cross timbers, which should be placed near enough together so the wheel cannot hit them when cramped under on a short turn. This makes the rack complete, but if desired a ladder may be added, as shown in cut No. 2. It should be bolted 6 inches back of the front cross-piece so it may lean forward when standing. When turned back it makes a good seat for the driver, as it rests across the back side of the front square.—L. H. Abbott, in Farm and Home.

FACTS FOR FARMERS.

THE use of complete fertilizers involves a waste in all cases where the soil already contains an abundance of one or two of the chief elements of plant food, and requires only the supplementary addition of the missing one or two elements.—T. Greiner.

WHAT I could earn in some other way outside of farming is wholly out of the question. Ninety-five per cent. of the farmers must earn their money on their farms or not at all, and must draw upon all really available sources of income.—W. I. Chamberlain.

IF you have no silo grow a crop of corn for fodder. Plant the seed in rows, cultivate well, and cut the fodder corn when the ears are glazed, the same as for ensilage, but the fodder should be well cured and then stored in the barn in a clean and bright condition.

MOST people think they must wait many years for returns from the planting of peach or cherry pits. We have heard, on good authority, that a Texas man ate peaches from a tree two years and two months after he planted the pit from which the tree grew.—Strickman.

IN Florida, where crickets often seriously damage choice plants just set out, the plan has been adopted of cutting off the top and bottom of three-pound fruit cans and placing the resulting cylinder over the very small rose bushes, cuttings and other small choice plants liable to attack.

CUT down the old fruit trees that may be standing in the pastures that have passed beyond their period of usefulness. Unless they are taken care of they will become nests for the various fruit pests, and will in turn be the means of populating your orchard with undesirable colonies.

I WANT to say this out of my own experience. I have often fed a dollar's worth of feed into one cow and got a dollar's worth of butter out of her. I have fed the same amount of feed into another cow and got two dollars out of her, and I am going to stand by the two-dollar cow.—H. Adams.

The Best-Paying Turkey.

The turkey that pays best for domestic purposes is the bronze, of the handsome breed that has been developed in the last generation in this country. All turkeys have been developed in America for that matter. Notwithstanding its foreign name the turkey is a native of this continent, and was not known in Europe till it was introduced from the western world. That is another debt the inhabitants of Europe owe to America. We have not only set them the example of a great people, happy and prosperous under republican government, but we have given them the turkey.—Prairie Farmer.

HEALTHFUL STABLES.

Farmers' stables are rarely constructed with a view to their healthfulness; are usually deficient in light, ventilation and drainage. These defects give rise to much evil to animals confined in them, and disorders of some kind are likely to result. Want of light or light in straggling rays from various small inlets injures the eyesight, and where there is insufficient light, there is almost surely insufficient ventilation. Stables thus closely built do not admit of free circulation of air, consequently they become filled with foul air, impregnated with the pungent vapors arising from manure, which, constantly breathed, irritates the mucus membranes of the throat and lungs, and keeps them in a more or less inflamed condition. And if drainage is insufficient, and absorbents are not supplied, the floor becomes filled with urine-saturated manure which increases these disgraceful vapors.

Stables should be built on somewhat elevated ground; if low and flat, the site should be well-drained; this would be well if done in any case. Where no other than an earth floor is had, absorbents should be used in abundance, especially if the stable be a low, close one. But it is better to have good floors. Wood floors of thick solid material do well enough. The floor should have a slight inclination from front to rear the seams between the planks covered with other plank, to prevent the liquids getting beneath the floor. Underneath the terminus of the floor at the rear should be placed a gutter to receive and carry off the liquids to the manure pile. If a good and lasting floor be desired, concrete is the most economical in the long ruin. These, too, should have a few inches inclination to the rear with drains to serve the purpose of carrying off the liquids. The following method makes a good concrete floor:

Take out the earth to about a foot in depth, fill in with coarse gravel; smooth this off to a proper grade, say four inches in ten feet. Upon this put small stones—cobble stones—and press down solid, making drains where required. Over this, when raised up sufficiently high and firm, spread a layer of mortar, press in the top of this, when half dry, some sand, and to add to the thickness and durability of the floor, more mortar and sand may be put on; instead of mortar, some use gas tar, then finish off with sand. Stables are often built too low, or in other words the loft or floor overhead, is put down too low. This floor should be at least eight feet high; it gives better ventilation, and instead of letting the light and air struggle in as best it may through small apertures, there should be made one or two long windows reaching well up to the ceiling or upper floor. The sash in them should be swung on pivots in the middle, so that the sash may be swung out at top; this gives better ventilation, the vapor within escaping at top, and the fresh air admitted at bottom. The windows should be in front, as side lights are hurtful to the eyes of stock, especially if there be no light on the opposite side. It costs but little more either of money or labor to erect such comfortable stables, and certainly nothing is lost by it. The proper saving of the manure in this way, the ammonia that otherwise would be lost, repays much, besides the advantage and profit arising from having good, sound, healthy stock.—James I. Baird, in Ohio Farmer.

WATER FOR STOCK.

Facts Proving That the Supply Should Be Absolute'y Pure.

Bulletin 13 of the Iowa experiment station in an article on pure water for stock, gives two or three examples in which the water being contaminated by manure washings, dead animal and vegetable matter, etc., all animals, both cattle, horses, sheep and hogs which drank it were attacked by disease and died, while others in every way similarly treated, except that they received pure water, were unaffected though in daily contact with the sick ones. In other cases animals having died of disease were hauled out into swales, sloughs, etc. These afterward filled with water, from rains, of which the stock drank and contracted the same disease.

If the farmers could but realize the loss which such careless, negligent management occasions, they would save themselves much expense. All dead animals, regardless of the cause of death, should be buried deeply that their bodies may not only not contaminate the surrounding air and water but may fertilize the soil. And since water is known to be a good medium for the transmission of disease germs, a pure supply should be provided for all domestic animals, and they should be carefully kept from any that is impure. "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."—Orange Judd Farmer.

SHEEP-DIPPING TANK.

A Useful Design Furnished by a South African Farmer.

A South African subscriber to the London Agricultural Gazette sends to that paper the subjoined design:

Top line of tank level with the ground; 20 feet long; depth in deepest part, 6 feet 6 inches; width, 3 feet; bottom line, 8 feet; stope out, 12 feet. Contents roughly calculated, 1,500 gallons.

The above, a very rough side view, may give more idea than measurements alone. At H a trap door is fitted, so that the sheep may be soaked if necessary. Such a tank will hold twelve to fifteen sheep at once, and 2,000 sheep can be passed through it easily in a day, even when each lot is soaked for a minute or two. I much prefer a swimming bath to hand dipping; sheep very seldom get any of the dip into their mouths.

Lameness in Young Turkeys.

At this season many complaints are made that young turkeys become lame and swell at the joints. The difficulty is due mostly, to the high roosting places, the young turkeys striking the ground too heavily. Old turkeys are not so liable to be injured, as they are matured, but the rapid growing young ones are too weak in the legs to endure the constant strain upon them when they jump from high perches.

WHICH IS THE FAVORITE?

The C., M. & St. P. Ry. Takes the Persimmons.—A Prominent Railroad Official Declares the Vestibuled Limited is "Out of Sight."

I was in the office of the Advisory Board of the Northwestern Traffic Committee in Chicago, the other day. A prominent official, well known in the Twin Cities for his ability and geniality, was looking over the pool sheet for June which a clerk had just made out.

"There's quite a traffic between Chicago and the Twin Cities," the official remarked as he produced a "Jay Gould Favorita," a high grade railroad cigar of the period, "and it's a constant source of wonder to me how the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road maintains its lead in passenger traffic, considering the immense competition. Just look at this pool sheet," he continued. I read. "The Minneapolis-St. Paul-Chicago lines carried 13,400 through passengers in June. The advisory board after a thorough examination of the reports fix the following percentages:

	PER CENT.
Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul	27
Chicago, St. Paul & Kansas City	18
Albert Lea	17
Northwestern	16
Wisconsin Central	15
C. B. & N.	07
Total	100

I asked to what he attributed the fact that the "St. Paul" got more than one quarter of the through travel between Chicago and the two big Minnesota towns.

"There is only one reason after all," he replied. "The public prefer the C., M. & St. P. R'y because its management inspires confidence; because its trains are the most luxurious; because one may always rely on getting to a given destination on time. This is not the history of a day, or a week, or a month, but it is the regular thing. As you know, I got my training on a competing road, but I must acknowledge the corn: The C., M. & St. P. is first in the estimation of the people. Did you ever try their vestibuled limited train between Chicago and St. Paul? If not, do so and you will understand the reason for that 27 per cent.

There's danger in a cough—more than ever when your blood is "bad." It makes things easy for Consumption. But there's a cure for it in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. A positive cure—not only for Weak Lungs, Spitting of Blood, Bronchitis, Asthma and all lingering Coughs, but for Consumption itself in all its earlier stages. It's reasonable. All these diseases depend on tainted blood. Consumption is simply Lung-scrofula. And for every form of scrofula and blood-taint, the "Discovery" is a certain remedy. It's so certain, that its makers guarantee it to benefit or cure, in every case, or the money is refunded. With a medicine that is certain, this can be done.

There's a cure for Catarrh, too, no matter what you've been led to believe. If there isn't, in your case, you'll get $500 cash. It's a bona-fide offer that's made by the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. There's risk in it, to be sure, but they are willing to take the risk—you ought to be glad to take the medicine.

"German Syrup"

G. Gloger, Druggist, Watertown, Wis. This is the opinion of a man who keeps a drug store, sells all medicines, comes in direct contact with the patients and their families, and knows better than anyone else how remedies sell, and what true merit they have. He hears of all the failures and successes, and can therefore judge: "I know of no medicine for Coughs, Sore Throat, or Hoarseness that had done such effective work in my family as Boschee's German Syrup. Last winter a lady called at my store, who was suffering from a very severe cold. She could hardly talk, and I told her about German Syrup and that a few doses would give relief; but she had no confidence in patent medicines. I told her to take a bottle, and if the results were not satisfactory I would make no charge for it. A few days after she called and paid for it, saying that she would never be without it in future as a few doses had given her relief." ⑦

DELANO DIARY.

—See notice "Sealed Bids" for a new tin roof to city hall.

—The lake campers are returning to town. Mosquitoes are too scarce.

—The Ladies' Aid Society will give a 5 o'clock tea at Mrs. Jonos Johnsons' to-day.

—The Episcopal Sociable in the City Hall last night was enjoyed by a good crowd. Receipts $20.45.

—Several of our enterprising ladies are engaged in manufacturing words to see who can get the most.

—Two more fortunate ones J. D. Young and Albert A. Dayis, have received notice through their pension agent, O. L. Billings, that they have been granted a pension under the new law.

--The dance on Friday evening gotten up by the ladies in the interests of band took in about $20. which is to go for a wagon box for the band. Won't our band shine when they get into their new "Band Box."

—Delano's Board of Public Education, as lately organized is as follows: President, C. W. Ingerson; Clerk, J. A. Brasie; Treasurer, I. Gutzwiller, Jr.; L. M. Maxfield, Swan Erickson, and John Cunningham.

--John Gerken adjuster for the Home Ins. Co., was in town on Wednesday and adjusted the loss of Peter Nolan who lost his house by fire on the 15th, inst. Mr. Nolan receives the full amount of his insurance, $350.

—Miss Mattie Cooper and two Murphy girls, from Greenwood were driving on Saturday, with Mr. Gast's rig While turning the corner near Sieloff's shop the buggy was overturned and the young ladies pretty badly frightened. Nobody hurt.

—The School furnace was fired up yesterday but as it was not completed was not accepted. It is to be in running order this afternoon. When the board is to meet. Those interested should be on hand to see for themselves.

—The Eagle says "we shall endeavor always to conduct it (the Eagle) in such a way that when 'one of the Eagle lies' is investigated it shall be found to be true, as in the late libel suit." Suppose they don't tell any "lies" it might cost the county less to prove them true.

—On Sunday while returning from his appointment in West Rockford, and while driving down the steep hill opposite Ed Ziebarth's on the other side of the river, Rev. Jabez Blackhurst met with quite a fortunate accident. Fortunate in that he did not receive bodily injury. The snap to the holdback strap broke, allowing the buggy to strike the horse's heels causing it to kick itself free from the buggy. Mr. B. deliberately took the first opportunity that was afforded him to get out of the buggy and on to the ground. The buggy was badly demoralized. The Rev. gentleman footed it home leading the horse.

—That great ugly bird up street must be wanting to set from the way she picks at us this week. None of your setten on us. Or, it may be reflections from small tin pails, or possibly black bottles. She intimates that she would like to have the saloons roasted. We are of the opinion that she could give a good description of their inner doings as she is much better posted on this subject than she is on school law, school furnaces, base ball, tariff is a tax, or city affairs at present, or even church matters. If you want the saloons roasted roast 'em. Do 'em up to a turn. You can do it, don't be afraid. You have our permission.

—At a regular meeting of the Band last Wednesday evening, The following resolution was adopted: Resolved that the Band extend a vote of thanks to the ladies who were instrumental in the success of the dance last Friday night and especially to Mrs. C. M Conzet, Mrs. O. L Billings, Mrs. F. L Scherer and Miss Dora Sweedback the committee who first suggested and carried out the enterprise, their kindness will ever be rembered and we trust that in the near future we will have a Band wagon that will be a credit to our City and upon which the Ladies can look with pride and at the same time have the satisfaction of feeling that it was through their instrumentality that the same was obtained.

—One of our newsgathers gives a very interesting account of the hairbredth escape and the trembling forms of a young commission merchant and his best girl who were enjoying? a ride last Sunday when the team, rather a spirited one became somewhat unmanageable, and threatened to throw the occupants of the carriage out upon the cold ground, demolish the vehicle and go home to the barn. After the team had been turned over to the tender mercies of an old farmer, living by the roadside, who trained them up and down the road a few times and drove them down the next hill the loving couple, after a short foot race again entered the buggy and pursued the path for home in a more quiet manner. The course of true love never did run smoothely.

Figs And Thistles

People never become any better than they want to be.

People who work for the devil never get any vacation.

He is not much of a man who isn't a hero to somebody.

God never had an enemy who was not a bitter foe to man.

The older people become the harder they are to teach.

No man ever finds life hard who is living it for Christ.

There is joy in hell when a young man takes his first drink.

The better we know men the better we may know God.

People are scarce who do not talk too much about themselves.

No man is ever alone. When God isn't with him the devil is.

The only weak people are those who are not sure that they are right.

No man can take from another a God-given right and enjoy it himself.

It isn't often that a man gets a fortune without paying too much for it. is because it is down on their vices.

The reason men are down on religion

No man can do things that God hates without some day hating himself for it.

The man who is rulled by his feelings will always travel in a zig-zag course.

Many of us expect others to be better than we are willing to be ourselves.

The school of experence is not a free school. We all have to pay our own tuition.

The house of a good man may be torn down, dut the man himself will live on forever.

The man who is stingy with kind words is not likely to be very liberal with his money.

Looking for flowers without thorns is one of the best ways in this world of fooling your time away.

The man who can be happy in the midst of tirals and tribulations is the one who has hold of the hand of God.

Common sense is something that a good many people need more of a great deal worse than they need more money.

WHEN THE EARLY TRAIN IS LATE.

Oh, where can the early train be,
It is due here at five twenty-three,
Will it never come again?

Here are crowds of anxious people,
The sun shines on the tallest steeple
And the early train is late.

The hotel folks are out of sorts,
Belated border fumes and snorts,
What can the matter be?

I went to bed early last night
Ought not to sleep so very tight
Because the train is late.

Always awake at five twenty-three,
Oh dear, what can the matter be,
I heard no train to-day?

At just twenty minutes past eight
Comes the early train, now so late,
And things go right again.

Looks Like Porcelain.

Special to the Globe.

ALBERT LEA, Minn., Aug. 12.—In digging a cistern for J. O. Annis, in the south part of the city, this week, the workmen discovered a bed of clay which is pronounced by exports to be of a very rare and valuable quality. It is of a very light brown color, and is found in layers as hard as shale. The bed was dug into seven feet, and there seems to be no limit of its extent. It is said that it will produce excellent porcelain, and it offers an opportunity for enterprise that capitalists are likely to improve.

Afraid of The Tariff.

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 25—Fifty Republican editors of the state met here yesterday to discuss the coming campaign and agree upon a plan of action. It was decided to make the coinage question the leading issue of the campaign. John Hohley, of Bucyrus, was chairman and S. J. Flickinger secretary. —Globe.

WOULD MAKE A BETTER WORLD.

[FROM THE TOLEDO BLADE.]

If men cared less for wealth and fame,
And less for battlefields and glory;
If writ in human hearts a name
Seemed better than in song or story;
If men instead of nursing pride
Would learn to hate it and abhor it;
If more relied
On love to guide,
The world would be the better for it.

If men dealt less in stocks and lands,
And more in bonds and deeds fraternal;
If Love's work had more willing hands
To link the world with the supernal;
If men stored up Love's oil and wine
And on bruised human hearts would pour it;
If "yours" and "mine"
Would once combine,
The world would be the better for it.

If more would act the play of Life,
And fewer spoil it in rehearsal;
If Bigotry would sheath its knife
Till good became more universal;
If Custom, gray with ages grown,
Had fewer blind men to adore it—
If Talent shown
In Truth alone,
The world would be the better for it.

If men were wise in little things—
Affecting less in all their dealings;
If hearts had fewer rusted strings
To isolate their kindred feelings:
If men, when Wrong beatsdown the Right,
Would strike together for to restore it—
If Right made Might
In every fight,
The world would be the better for it.

—[N. H. Cobb, in the New Bedford Journal.

Political Outlook.

From the present outlook of the political field Democrats hold the winning chances, and if they adhere strictly to party principles and nominate their own men they may expect victory to crown their efforts in 1892. With 30 out of 44 states in the union presided over by Democratic governors, a Democratic congress, many of whom were chosen on account of their views on tariff reform the one great issue of the last and bound to be of the next presidential campaign it looks as if the Democratic nominee will be the next president of the United States.

The Republicans are so widely apart on the tariff question coupled as it is with reciprocity that they cannot well agree. Think of a ticket with Blaine, the acknowledged leader, as a statesman among them, at the head and McKinley for second place. How would it look? Blaine and McKinley, for President and Vice President in 1892? One the author of the present high protective tariff, the other one of its strongest opponents. Should James G. Blaine's name chance to head the Republican ticket what will the McKinley crowd do anyway! Or, if McKinley should stand first on the ticket with his tariff bill that "will not open a market for a barrel of pork nor a bushel of wheat" as, in case he comes out of the race for Governor of Ohio in a manner pleasing to his friends he is likely to do would not Reciprocity Blaine's friends be around trying to capture the Democratic camp and get their chieftian at the head of the Democratic ticket?

The party of Lincoln, Seward, Garfield and Conklin has become the party of Reed, McKinley, Quay, & Co., with the Hon. James G. Blaine trying to hold them level and keep the party in the field. So great is the difference of opinions concerning the way to run this government among Republican leaders that the chances are that no man who is taking an active part in politics will secure the republican nomination but some man who rests leisurely on his oars will be suddenly elevated by a coming together of the waves of the conflicting sentiments of the once popular party. And, when the factions have learned that neither can have the leader they want and have placed a man at the head of the ticket who while he sweetens his coffee with cheap sugar which pays no tariff is supposed to believe that the high protective tariff on the tin spoon used in the process is cheapened by a directly opposite means and the educational campaign begins won't there be fun? While one political persuader tries to convince his hearers that a high protective tariff lowers the price of clothing of crockery of glass and of tinware and of cutlery while it raises the wages of the operator and cheapens his living by making eggs and potatoes and butter and other articles cheap another is tickling the ear of the western farmer with his theories that a tariff on wool would be to him a grand thing when few if any of his hearers sell anything like wool enough to pay for the woolens needed in the family, many of them keep no sheep.

The Alliance and Prohibition parties will probably cut some figure in the campaign and may succeed in throwing the election of Presieent and Vice President into the House of Representatives when the Democrats with their candidate, from the present outlook Grover Cleveland, would be triumphant.

BINDING TWINE.

"We would advise the Buffalo Gazette to make more extended inquiries in regard to the binding twine of the present season. We have investigated the snbject quite thoroughly even to looking into the wholsalers' and manufacturers' prices and varieties in this and several other parts of the country.

The Gazette tries to make out that twine of this year's make is of a poor quality and the twine is really as dear as last year, published prices to the contrary. The whole argument is based on the statement of one man, and he had but one ball of twine. Corroborative evidence against the fact that the farmer is getting his supplies cheaper under the new tariff law, contrary to free trade predictions last year, is hard to produce. The twine is cheaper and all right, and scores of good democratic farmers can be found to testify to it."—Sherburne County Times.

In accordance with the advice of the Times we have made further inquiries of farmers, who used twine, and know far more about how it worked than all the wholesalers' and manufacturers' consulted by the Times can or will tell them. We have found quite a number who bought twine at 9½, 10, up to 14 cents per pound. Most of them had trouble with the Manilla and Sisal twines. One good McKinleyite found fault with the complaints and insisted that the twine was all right but acknowledged that he had not used any himself this year, but hunted up three men who said they had no trouble until they came to stack when they found lots of the bands broke on account of having been eaten by the grasshoppers, which was another cause for the very provoking inconvenience of being obliged to re-bind bundles keeping high priced help waiting and making unnecessary trouble and expense.

As for the Gazette's argument being based on the statement of one man, we would say he was a competent and reliable witness, being a consumer and able to hold his own before a jury of all the farmers among our readers, where this case is now pending as against the testimony of the manufacturers and wholesalers who only make and sell it for the money they can make out of it and are not obliged to bind up the missed bundles. So far as the charge that our complainant had but one ball of twine goes, it matters not the farmer whose crop is small is entitled to good twine if he pays for it, and if it is not good he has a right to say so. In this case, however, the man with hayseed in his hair happens to use several balls of twine, and as we stated in the middle of the harvest his 14 cents a pound, Extra Manilla gave so much trouble that he brought out a ball that he had left over from his harvest of two years ago and put it on to the machine when the bundles were all tied so long as it lasted, when out the new twine was used with the same trouble as at first, it would not hold the bundles and many had to be re-bound.

One thing our farmers do want is good binding twine, and they do not ask the manufacturers nor wholesalers to tell them, after harvest is over, whether the twine was good or not. We are not claiming that there was no good twine, but that there was considerable of a poor quality, which was uneven and tangled and broke. Give the farmer good binding twine.

THE late unpleasantness between Balmaceda, president of Chili, and his Congressmen each party backed by its followers has come to an end. Balmaceda had the land forces at his command it seems, while the Congressmen took to the boats and the fleet being a good one, succeeded in the contest, till finally an attack was made on Valparaiso, the people coming to the help of the outs, aided them in taking the place. The new government is soon to be recognized by Great Britain and the late president is to go to France to live on the wealth lately sent by him to that country.

Thirty Democratic Governors to Meet in Ohio.

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 28.—Something new in the way of a political meeting, and which is expected will be one of the largest things of the kind ever held in Ohio, is now being arranged for by the Democratic state committe. It is to be a meeting of Democracic governors—and it is the intention to have every Democratic governor in the United States present, there being thirty of them in the forty-four states of the Union. Thurman, the "Old Roman." will preside. The meeting will be held in this city the latter part of September. —Globe.

CORRESPONDENCE

MONTROSE CHIPS.

John Herman has gone to North Dakota to engage in thrashing this fall.

Chas. Wright came over from Buffalo enroute for St. Paul where he intends to locate and pursue his calling.

Miss. Vina Crawford has gone to attend the Teachers' Institute at Monticello, Minn.

O. L. Woodard, Mrs. Halgren and Miss Vina Crawford went as delegates to attend the district convention of the I. O. G. T. held at Dassel last week.

Mrs. Core and Mrs. Halgren have gone to attend annual Convention of the W. C. T. U. held at Winona this week.

Henry Weekly, Mrs. Lyons, J. Pratt and Mr. Ferrill of Minneapolis, and Mr. and Mrs. Hauser of St. Paul came up to attend the funeral of Mrs. Rennix.

Work upon the reconstruction and enlarging of the public school building has commenced. When it is done we will have a school building that will reflect a credit to our village. There will be no NEW building for that purpose erected here as stated by the EAGLE correspondent.

Mrs. Matilda C. Renuix, wife of Mr. C. S. Rennix, of this village died on Aug. 27. Mrs. Rennix had been sick for a long time, bearing her ailment very quietly and patiently, willingly submitting to the Divine will whether it should be for a continuance of this life or the taking away to join the many in the unknown beyond. Finally realizing that she was to die she called the family to her bedside and bad them good-bye, and soon thereafter passed peacefully away, leaving a husband and two boys to mourn her untimely death. The family of the deceased has the sympathy of the community and more especially the immediate friends who did all they could to lighten the burden of sorrow. The funeral, which was one of the largest held here, took place last Sunday at the M. E. church, Rev. T. S. Gunn conducting the funeral ceremony.

We noticed in the Montrose items to the Eagle of recent date the following sentence relative to the Temperance society which we take exceptions to, to-wit: "We don't think the action taken by the two churches reflects any credit to them, nor do we think it will benefit them any from a financial standpoint. The temperance society has done more for the morality of our town than all the churches combined." With regard to the first sentence of the above quotation, we will simply say that if the action of the M. E. church relative thereto was not governed by good judgment it surely would not have received the endorsement of the Christian church, whose actions were similar, according to the correspondents statement. Anent the second sentence it is nothing but sophistry and pure buncombe to make such an assertion, and shows the lack of correct judgment and observation. If he can sustain his assertions by any facts or figures, or if he can verify them by the corroberation of the president of that society we will yield the contention and acknowledge that we have labored under wrong impressions entirely.

ROCKFORD.

Farmers are now thrashing in earnest, wheat going from 20 to 30 bushels per acre and oats 65.

The Atlantic Elevator Co., has made arrangments and commenced buying wheat at Rockford station September 1. W. H. Dorman will buy for them.

Miss Mabel Dorman, Fannie Ewing, Nellie Jacobs and Nellie Baker and Miss Ames went to Minneapolis, Saturday to go to school. Success to them.

Miss Maddocks, of Maine, is visiting Mrs. H. W. Dorman.

William Gent says with clear weather he will finish stacking to day, Thursday. Two weeks siege of it.

A. W. Dorman has just found that Joe Haumont's story about finding the money at the depot was a joke. A joke will come in good any time from Joe, "ha."

Mrs. W. H. Hatch accompanied by her sister, Miss Jennie Florida, started Thursday, for Moline, Ill.

Miss Ames started for the northern part of the state, to teach school the coming school year.

The butcher claims his meat commenced to get warm the other morning. Some body else might got warmed too if the painter had any sand, "ha."

E. E. Arnold, Auditor of the Soo Line, visited W. L. Haggerty, the other day.

P. J. O'Brien our popular section boss, we are glad to say that he is fast recovering from his late illness. Pat will know better next time.

W. H. Rutherford had a very narrow escape from loosing his team last week at Rockford station; they got scared at the train and he went to tie them and they ran away, first going through the wire fence and then jumping into the river, buggy and all, they did good swimming and got across all right; they were caught, all o. k. No damage to buggy or horses. We will have to give Mr. Rutherford the cake for his team first crossing the river, before ice coming in.

WATERTOWN WAYS.

Dr. Shrader, of Delano was a caller in Watertown, on Saturday, last.

School will commence about Sept. 15, with the same corps of teachers as last year.

The school house repairing is about ready for the painters now.

County Superintendent E. A. Taylor is in our village to-day, Wednesday, holding teacher's examinations. About six or seven teachers took the examination.

The Delano "Fats" must think they can play base ball or else they would have considered awhile before they challenged the Watertown "Plethorics." See the answer to their challenge appended below.

The scrubs of Woodland and the Watertown professionals played a friendly game of ball last Sunday which resulted in victory for the home team. We understand they are to play again a week from next Sunday when the Woodland boys have their full team

The Watertown Mill Co. got in a new bolting chest, on Wednesday, of this week and will now be able to make a still better grade of flour and more pounds to the bushel of wheat.

Mrs. H. Doyle and her daughter, of Howard, are visiting a few days in Watertown.

TO THE CAPTAIN OF THE FAT BALL PLAYERS OF DELANO NINE:—In answer to your challenge to play a game of Ball, at Delano, with the Watertown Fats, will say in behalf of Watertown Fat Nine, we are ready and willing to play any fat nine in Wright or Carver Counties, ready to meet all comers in our class, Delano Fats preferred. We have never been defeated, and mean business. We are also ready to fix dates, but hold the right to have the game to come off on our grounds, on any date your captain may choose, and according to the latest rules.

Yours &c.,
J. F. B.,
Captain Watertown Fats.

INDEPENDENCE.

EDITOR BUFFALO GAGETTE.—At this time news is rather scarce. Most everybody is attending to their own business and have not much time to circulate the news.

Corn is coming on slow, and it is a question whether it will mature or not.

The wheat yield in this town is turning out very well but not as big as some claim. Potatoes, we think, will be only a fair crop.

Now is the time to go to Minneapolis, while the Exposition is running.

Many of the farmers have begun plowing and a good many will sow fall rye.

Most every one that we have mentioned the subject to says times is rather dull in the cities, Minneapolis and St. Paul. Must be the McKinley bill has not taken effect up this way yet or times would be good. It is liable to take effect in Ohio about the first of November, next.

Some people still contend or want to make it appear that a high protective tariff is not a tax. If so how do the people of this country contribute means to help pay the government expenses? It does not all come from internal revenue. Let them call it what they will the people pay it all the same and the higher the tariff the more they have to pay. We claim it is dishonest to try and make some people who they think do not know any better believe, that a high protective tariff does not take any money from them, it is true that not all of it goes into the treasurey of the United States, but a goodeal of it goes into the pocekts of the manufacturers and trust combines. It is no use the common people have been kept in the dark about long enough. Some of these fellows do not want any silver money either, must have nothing but gold. Poor fools! There must and is bound to be silver in circulation as long as this is a free Republic no matter what John Sherman and a few of these other fellows say. Silver is the poor man's money and that is why they want to get it out of the way. Congress takes up about a third of its time trying to regulate our monetary system but it is to benefit the rich and not the poor.

But Mr. Editor, I only sharpened my pencil for a five minute's talk and will quit for this time hoping that all things will work together for our good in this present life and that which is to come.

Yours in hope of a Democratic victory in Ohio, this fall.

JOHN H. MCGARY.

Fair Notes.

The NORTHWESTERN FARMER AND BREADER of St Paul a lively agriculture paper published twice a month offers a yearlev subscription to the winners of every first premium at our County Fair. It is prepared if necessary to donate a hundred subscriptons but in case the first winners exceed that number the list is to commence with the live stock and combine through the vegetables and Grain till the limit of a hundred is reached.

Mr. Burwell who is to show some fine short horn stock at the county fair is a Wrigbt County exhibitor. He owns the "Elmhurst Farm" whice is situated one mile North-West of Maple Lake. He is very anxious to form an acquaintance with Wright County farmers. He writes to the Society, "My addres is Minneapolis but I would like to have it known that my cattle business is a Wright County institution and that all my young stock were reared in Wright County. We want to deal with the Wright County farmers as neighbors and we shall always welcome them, and our herd will be shown with great pleasure to all." Mr. Burwell's farm is in Sec. 1, Maple Lake. A portion of the farm was formerly owned by Thomas Dunham who moyed on to it in 1858. It is one of the oldest claims in the county.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, Aug. 28, 1891.

Secretary Foster is in a fair way of earning the title of the "Colonel Sellers of the administration" from his propensity to see every thing in its rosiest light. About the first of July he was telling everyone of the great benefits which would follow the extension of the $51,000,000 of 4½ per cent bonds at 2 per cent, and how glad the national banks would be to take all that might be surrendered by private parties in order that they might increase there circulation. Now that the extension of the bonds has broven a fizzle, not half of them having been presented for extension, one would suppose that Mr. Foster would feel bad enough to at least keep quet. Not he. He is, according to his own statement, not at all disappointed over the failure of his first large financial transaction and he preaches from the text of what a good thing it is for the "dear people" that $25,000,000 or $30,000,000 is to be put in circulation by the redemption of these bonds and how much good this increase in the circulation will do business circles. He reminds one of the young physician who when asked how he was making out in a family where he was attending a woman in confinement, said: "The mother is dead and the child is dead, but I hope to pull the father through."

Representative Mills has gone over to New York and it is probable that while there he will make a little investigation snto a statement made here a few days ago that the New York delegation was divided in its choice for speaker as follows: Crisp 16, McMillin 6, Mills 1. The statement was made by a member of Tammany Hall, but its accuracy was at once questioned by Mr. Mill's friends, who claim to have the best of evidence to prove that it was wrong in every case. Mr. Mills will go to Ohio shortly to make speeches in the campaign.

The noble army of "ex's" is again marching upon Washington, each and every member of it anxious to get the place which is to be vacated by Secretary Proctor, who has been formally notified that he is to be appointed to serve out the unexpired term of Mr. Edmunds in the Unitid States Senate, and those who fail will at least have the satisfaction of knowing that they have temporarily got out of the obscurity into which they had sunk, by having their names mentioned as possibilities for the vacant seat in the cabinet by the obliging newspapers. If you have curiosity to see these names get a copy of the last Congressional Directory and check off the names of all the men who retired from Congress with the Fifty-first Congress, and you will have a correct list of them. It is said that the New England Senators have demanded of Mr Harrison that he shall appoint a man from that section to the vacancy and that the republicans of the northwestern States have made a like demand. Mr. Harrison will place the appointment where it will fetch the most votes for Harrison in the next republican national convention no matter who it may please or displease, and the belief here is that the place will go to ex-Governor Cheney, of New Hampshire, unless Gen. Alger can be persuaded to accept it.

Some queer stories are being told around here of how Prof.. Dyrenforth is manipulating his dynamite and gun powder rain-forcer for the purpose of getting a big appropration of the next Congress to pay app futher experimentations, which made it certain that he could not fail, when he made the recent experiment about which so much has been printed. It is also said that none of the party now in Texas with the Professor have any faith in the efficiency of the apparatus to produce rain in a really arid section and that they regard the whole business as a sort of scientific humbug, which promises to furnish profitable employment for a long time at least that is said to be the substance of letters that have been received in Washington.

There is clash of opinion beteen the Interior department and the Department of Justice. Secretary Nobles holds that notwsihstanding the recent Judicial decision that the sale of lager beer in Indian Territory was legal, that he has the power, under a U.S. Statute, to prevent it, and has instructed the Indian agents to seize all found in the Territory. The Attorney General holds that the decison of Judge Bryant of the Eastern District of Texas is good law until it is reversed by a higher Court and under that decision dealers have a right to sell beer and to demand pay for all the beer seized by the Indian agents.

A Peculiar Claim.

NEW ORLEANS Aug. 28.— The Picayune's Houston, Tex., special says the city is made defendant in a suit filed to-day by H. H. Bruns in which he clams damages of $25,000, based upon the fact that last winter he came in contact with a case of small pox and contracted the disease, from the effects of which he is nearly blind, and charges that the city is reponsible in that the proper quarantine regulations were not established and maintained as soon as the disease was known to exist here, and that citizens did not have proper notice of the existence of the disease.

Knew Him.

A young son of the governor of an eastern state was asked in school the other day who the governor was.

"My father," was the reply.

"What is his name?"

"I dunno," said the child, "only mamma calls him Bill."—Peck's Sun.

SINCE Brazil became a republic it has vastly increased in favor for a field for German immigrants, of whom 7,927 have gone there during the first six months of the present year, as compared with 2,192 during the whole of last year, while in 1889 there were only 228.

A TOWN in New Jersey is excited over the coming marriage of a well-to-do man of 70 with a young lady of 28, whose sister is already married to the old man's son. Such a wedding, it is true, will mix the families up a little, but there is no trace of intermarriage about it, and as for the rest, weddings are, or should be, affairs not at all the business of the public.

THE president's salary is paid to him in monthly installments of $4,166.67. The warrant is brought to the white house by a special messenger of the treasury department, and after the president has indorsed it as he would an ordinary draft his private secretary deposits it at the Columbia bank. When the president is out of town the draft is mailed to him. The same method is pursued in paying the justices of the supreme court.

THE greatest known depth of the ocean in the Pacific is near the Ladrone islands, where soundings were made to a depth of 26,850 feet, or a little over five miles. In the Atlantic the greatest depth found is just north of the West Indian islands, which is 23,250 feet, or nearly four and a half miles. In those parts of the ocean most free from islands, as in the route from Newfoundland to Ireland, the ocean is most shallow, seldom exceeding 12,000 feet.

BY order of the German emperor the Prussian minister of the interior has forbidden parents to baptize their children with political names of a certain character or color. Young Germans may be christened with names from the Bible, of princes, or of "royal" statesmen, generals and patriots. This measure is intended to prevent socialists from commemorating in their own families prominent revolutionists. "Robespierre" has long been a very favorite name for socialists.

DURING recent years England obtained more wheat from Russia than from the United States. Last year, for instance, she received from Russia 3,900,000 quarters, or about 31,200,000 bushels, against 3,500,000 quarters, or 28,000,000 bushels, from the United States. The partial failure of the wheat crop in Russia practically cuts off England this year from that source of supply. Its wheat import from India will have to be reduced also. This country will be called upon to make up the deficiency.

"CAN a hypnotized person be made to commit crime?" was very emphatically answered in the affirmative by Dr. Voisin, of Paris, in a paper delivered before the British association. He suggusted to a subject under his influence to commit the act of arson while hypnotically asleep, and there was obedience in each case. More than that, a woman was recently sentenced in Paris for a succession of acts of robbery. It was ascertained that she had been habitually hypnotized, and upon investigation it was discovered that she had robbed under the suggestion of outside parties.

THE new rule at the immigration quarters on Ellis island in New York harbor, that every new comer must begin American life with a thorough bath, is excellent. Plenty of good soap is furnished and the dirt of the effete monarchies is not to be allowed any longer to pollute the land. To some of the immigrants a bath with soap is undoubtedly a bore, but we want it understood that we have already received our quota of the great unwashed. Let these people write home to their friends that they must be clean before they can enter here, and the result may be deterrent if not detergent.

THE report of the statistics of Massachusett's manufacturers for 1890 just issued shows a steady improvement in the condition of the working people of that state. In 1885 17.91 per cent. of the men, women and children employed in manufacturing industries received wages under five dollars. In 1890 the percentage of employes receiving such wages had sunk to 15.22 per cent. of the much larger number of workers. That means that there has been a positive advance in wages. There are more people employed than five years ago, and all this in spite of the tremendous immigration of European labor.

THE census figures make the total population of Alaska 31,000, divided as follows: Aleuts, 900; Indians, 5,000; Esquimaux, 12,000; Chinese, 2,300; whites, 4,800. This is a decrease of 2,000 in ten years.

UNITED STATES CONSUL MCCREARY at Valparaiso has informed the authorities in Washington that Balmeceda's power in Chili is broken. His army was crushed after five hours' hard fighting, in which 5,000 men were slain, and was scattered beyond all hope of reorganization. The revolutionists had taken possession of Valparaiso.

LATER.

Balmaceda Killed.

VALPARAISO, Sept. 1.—A report reached this city to-day from Santiago that Balmaceda had been killed in the mountains while trying to make his escape.

Exciting news is being brought today from the south by the straits steamer which came up from Talcahuano. The two regiments of government troops which were taken to that port recently from Coquimbo by the transport Imperials, revolted when they heard of the defeat of the Balmacedists at Blacilla last Friday. They shot to death all their officers and disbanded.

Nearly four hundred coal miners joined them and together they have practically taken possession of the town of Coronel on the coast, about twenty-five miles south of Concepcion. All sorts of excesses have been committed by them. Houses and stores have been sacked and burned. The slightest protest against their actions is met by pistol shots. Women have been abused and subjected to brutalities of the most revolting character. In fact, mob rule in its worst form prevails.

There is no disguising the fact that there is a very bitter feeling against the Americans on the part of the successful revolutionists. The feeling is so strong that, unless it is placated in some way, it will effect American commercial interests for some time.

The capture of the Itata created the impression that the United States was very much against the cause of the revolutionists.

CRUSHED AND SCALDED.

Five Lives Lost and Thirty Persons Injured in a Railway Disaster in Indiana.

EVANSVILLE, Ind., Sept. 1.—Five persons were instantly killed and thirty seriously injured in the derailing of a passenger train on the Louisville, Evansville & St. Louis "Air Line" railroad 2 miles east of Troy, Ind., at 11 o'clock Monday morning. Train No. 51, an accommodation in charge of Conductor James Gordon and drawn by engine No. 18, plunged through a trestle and down a 15-foot embankment and not a single person on the train escaped injury. The heavy passenger coach fell directly on top of the locomotive, smashing the steam chests and enveloping the victims of the disaster in a scalding cloud of vapor. Those who were able to get out of the wreck at once set about rescuing their more unfortunate fellow passengers. Hardly had the dead and wounded been dragged from the steaming wreck when the coach caught fire from the ruined engine and was entirely consumed. It is now feared that some of the occupants of the coach were pinioned in their seats and cremated. The list of dead, so far as can be ascertained at this time, is as follows: Mrs. John Cavanaugh, Troy, Ind., scalded to death; John Cavanaugh, Jr., aged 10 years, Troy, Ind., killed outright; Miss Barbara Nemier, aged 18 years, Harrison township, Perry county, Ind., killed outright; Emma Schue, aged 10 years, St. Meinrad, Ind., scalded to death; unknown man, farmer, of Hancock county, Ky., scalded to death.

The wounded number thirty, of whom a dozen are so badly crushed and scalded that they cannot recover. There was considerable delay in taking any steps to care for the sufferers, but finally one of the trainmen started back to Troy, and an hour and a half after the accident a relief party arrived on the scene and the dead and wounded were taken back to the village, where they are being cared for by the local physicians.

The accident was caused by the breaking of the flange of one of the drive wheels of the engine.

TEN MINERS KILLED.

Terrible Result of an Explosion of Fire-Damp in an English Colliery.

LONDON, Sept. 1.—An explosion took place Monday morning in the Malago colliery, near Bedminster, Somersetshire. A number of miners were at work in the mine at the time of the disaster. A dull, rumbling sound underground followed by a cloud of coal dust issuing from the shaft first announced that a terrible accident had happened. The alarm soon spread through the neighborhood, and crowds gathered about the mouth, the wives and children of the endangered miners uttering heartrending cries while the colliery officers rapidly organized an exploring party. The latter had not been long at work when they signaled that a fire-damp explosion of a most serious nature had occurred and that they had already found four dead miners. The bodies of these unfortunate men were then hauled to the surface. A moment or so later four other miners, all seriously injured, were brought out of the mine. Additional exploring parties were promptly sent down the shaft. The concussion shattered all the windows in the houses near the shaft and wrecked all the shaft workings. The bodies of ten miners have been recovered. About a dozen men are seriously injured.

A BRIDE SOON WIDOWED.

Ohio Youth Commits Suicide a Few Hours After His Marriage.

FINDLAY, O., Sept. 1.—A sensational suicide or murder occurred at the residence of George W. Wisely, 4 miles east of this city, at an early hour Monday morning, the victim being Orien Wisely, the eldest son of the gentleman named. Young Wisely was secretly married Sunday night to a lady whom his parents had long opposed, because belonging to a different station of life. This marriage under these circumstances seems to have unbalanced the young man's mind. He left his newly-wedded wife at midnight in this city and drove to his father's residence, where he was found dead Monday morning with a bullet-hole through the back of his head. It is supposed he committed suicide, but many circumstances point to murder, and the coroner's inquest may bring out new features in the case.

ROBBED A BANK.

Three Men Hold Up a Missouri Cashier and Get Away with the Funds.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 1.—At 3 o'clock Monday afternoon, just as Cashier Perry Ellis of the Corder bank of Corder, Mo., on the Alton road, 109 miles from here, was closing his doors masked robbers came in and put him under their guns. There were three of the thieves, all wearing long clerical black coats and white masks of thin glazed cloth. Two were armed with Winchesters and one, the leader, had two pistols, both of which were leveled at the cashier. Mr. Ellis at once threw up his hands and told the robbers to take anything in sight. Six hundred and ninety dollars was lying on a counter, and the two reserves immediately raked it into a long canvas bag. The robbers were as badly frightened as the cashier, and a passing wagon scared them from the place.

MORE BODIES FOUND.

Mayor Grant Makes a Ghastly Discovery Among the Ruins at Park Place.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—Mayor Grant made a personal visit to the scene of the Park place disaster shortly before noon. He poked about in the debris in the vault under the sidewalk, and was horrified to discover the charred and mutilated body of a man. What looked like another human body was lying near by. Word was immediately sent to the board of health, and the coroner's office and the mayor has issued directions that all of the debris be cleared away at once.

North Dakota's Crop.

GRAND FORKS, N. D., Sept. 1.—The wheat crop just harvested in this state exceeds 50,000,000 bushels. Commissioner of Agriculture Helgesen's official estimate places wheat acreage at 3,000,000 acres, with an average yield of seventeen bushels to the acre, making the aggregate yield 51,000,000 bushels, and this estimate will fall short of the actual crop. Wheat thrashed in Grand Forks county Monday yielded thirty-three bushels to the acre. In Nelson county on Saturday two and one-half acres yielded 235 bushels of oats. Everybody is happy here.

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS

Eloped with a Married Man.

A few weeks ago Mrs. Henry McCann, of Altona, Wis., went to Rochester to visit relatives, taking with her four children. She corresponded with her husband regularly in the meantime. The other day Mr. McCann arrived, expecting to meet his wife and after a short visit to return home, but to his astonishment he found that his wife had eloped with Sanford Wicks, of Rochester, a married man about 50 years of age. Mrs. McCann took her children with her, but Wicks left his wife and children in destitute circumstances.

A Narrow Escape.

The Grantsburg accommodation train of the St. Paul & Duluth road was wrecked about 5 miles from Grantsburg. The train was about an hour late, and was thundering along at the rate of 40 miles an hour when a freight car jumped the track, turning completely over. The passenger coach at the rear was derailed and dashed into the ground about 4 feet. The passengers, twenty in number, were thrown in all directions, and it was nothing short of a miracle that some were not killed. Six were injured, but not fatally.

An Enormous Wheat Crop.

Full crop reports have been received from all parts of the state and show an acreage of 3,000,000, while enough thrashing has been done to allow fair estimates of the yield. The wheat crop in Minnesota this season will not be below 70,000,000 bushels, and will probably exceed that amount. The present condition will also warrant the statement that the farmers of Minnesota will receive upwards of $80,000,000 for their crop of products this year. The yield last year and in 1889 was but 42,000,000 bushels.

Minneapolis' Great Show.

The sixth annual Minneapolis Industrial exposition was opened with due ceremony. The parade was a military one, the participating bodies being the First regiment, M. N. G., the visiting camps Sons of Veterans and the police mounted and on foot. The exercises at the exposition included addresses by Mayor P. B. Winston and ex-Senator Gilbert A. Pierce. President T. B. Janney touched the button which set the machinery in motion.

Cut in Two by the Cars.

Two young men while walking on the railroad track near the union depot in Duluth found the mangled remains of a man lying between the tracks. The body was cut in halves and the trunk had been dragged 100 feet from where the legs lay. The victim's name was Henry Bierman, aged 50 years. A few years ago Bierman, who had relatives in New York, was a respectable member of society, but drink was his ruin.

Mangled by an Explosion.

At the sewer excavation on Monroe street in Minneapolis a blast which failed to go off on time exploded after the workmen had returned to the spot and terribly mangled C. Larson and C. Pierson, the former, it was thought, fatally. Larson's leg was broken in two places, his heel was blown off, and he was internally injured. Both have families.

Did Great Damage.

It was estimated that a hailstorm that visited Deer Creek, Otter Tail county, laid low between 12,000 and 15,000 acres of grain, and the damage would reach $300,000. J. J. Bolton is the principal loser. Senator J. B. Hompe was a victim, and Josh Mead, Fred Peck, A. D. Baker and F. C. Field lost their entire crop.

Killed by His Jealous Wife.

Mrs. John D. Miller shot and instantly killed her husband at Nicollet. They had been divorced for some weeks but Mrs. Miller had continued to live in her husband's home. She was jealous of his attentions to a young woman named Schee and on meeting them together drew a revolver and killed her husband.

MISPLACED INSTINCTS.

Fable of the Hen That Hatched Out Ducks.

A certain Hen of advancing Years had been accustomed all her life to hatch out Geese eggs. From watching Brood after Brood take to the water with a skill born of Heredity, she grew to plume herself on her talent as a teacher of the art Natatorial, and standing on the edge of the Pool would cackle instructions to the Gosiings, and cluck with a becoming sense of Superiority when her sister Hens scuttled around in Horror at such actions on the part of young Fowls.

It so happened that one spring she hatched out a Brood of Chickens. Down to the Pool she marched with the flock and said: "Now, my Dears, I will teach you to Swim." But the youngsters hugged the dry Land, and seemed to fear the water. Then said the Hen: "Do you doubt my Wisdom? Swim as did your Brothers before you. Law sakes what Geese you are!"

Then she pushed them into the Water, where they sank like Plummets, nor did they come to the Surface again.

"Madam," said an old Rooster, "I hope you have Tumbled to the fact that the Youngsters were not such Geese as you thought them."

Moral.—This Fable, kind reader, teaches us that a Hen's instincts are apt to be Misplaced.—Charles Battell Loomis, in Puck.

Spiders Good Authority.

A good story is told on one of the weather observers, a gentleman who understands his business thoroughly and uses a great deal of practical sense in making his calculations. He was making up a forecast one evening when all the reports indicated rain the following day. He was dubious himself about the correctness of his forecast owing to an incident he had observed the same evening at his residence. In his yard there was a grape arbor, and as he was leaving home he observed a spider energetically at work spinning its web. The observer knew that the spider would never spin in the face of approaching foul weather, and whether to follow his reports or the spider was the question that puzzled him. The report, however, indicated that the spider did not know his business, and the forecast was made out as the reports suggested, a modifying and saving clause thrown in. The next day showed clearly that the spider was right and the guessing apparatus of the forecaster wrong.—Washington Post.

Romance of a Sultana.

The favorite wife of the sultan was once a poor girl living in the coal mines of France. She was a beautiful girl, and some charitable person found her occupation in a famous dressmaking establishment in France. She was sent to Constantinople with dresses ordered by the sultan's mother. Nothing more was heard of her for many years, until a little inheritance was left by relative and notices were posted asking for her whereabouts. In answer to these notices a wonderful equipage, escorted by mounted eunuchs, stopped at the door of the embassy, and the sultan's only legal wife stepped down to declare herself the once Flora Cellin and renounce the legacy in favor of her kindred, who are still poor.—Indianapolis Journal.

HE WANTED A SHOCK.

A Maine Man Had His Curiosity More Than Satisfied.

The upper Pine street man who does not come into town often stepped into a Lisbon street druggist's one day, and seeing a dry electric battery on the counter began to ask questions.

After his curiosity had been satisfied he said that he'd like a shock. He was given one, but it didn't suit, and he intimated that he preferred the business end of a fluid battery to the action of the so-called dry battery.

Under the counter the apothecary keeps a very large fluid battery. It is a peculiar battery also. It is out of order, but it goes spasmodically. Now it moves easily and softly, and now it rips and tears and just rears up on its hind legs and kicks. It is a vicious machine, but this man is big and strong and he wanted a real hard shock, and—well, he got it.

Fixing the battery in order and setting it to buzzing, the druggist went back to his desk and left his callar in the ecstatic enjoyment of the warm and pleasant current of the sunshine side of that battery. The day was quiet in the store, and the "buz-z-z-z" of the battery alone broke the stillness.

Suddenly there was a yell. It was an awful yell.

"See here! Hi, there! Whoa, there! See here! Wha—hi! Geewhitaker!"

"What's the matter?" sang out the druggist.

"This machine. Come here. Come here, I say."

"Why don't you let go of the handles?" asked the druggist, who was in the critical part of a prescription and couldn't leave.

"Can't."

"Yes, you can."

"Push in the rehostat."

"Push in the wall. Push in your eye teeth. Drop that stuff. I'll settle. Drop it. Ease up your horses. Oh-h, oh-h!"

Appreciating the situation the druggist dropped his work and ran to the rescue, and when he got there the strong man was doubled up like an umbrella and was doing more contortions to a minute than the "boneless wonder."

As the druggist pulled out the carbons and released his prey the man dropped the handles, and as he sank into a chair and rubbed his hands on his coat tail he mingled with a long-drawn, jubilant, soothing restful "There."

And then he went out.—Lewiston Journal.

A BRILLIANT SCHEME

How a Writer Set to Work to Make His Fortune.

"That's a good story," said the newspaper man's friend as he finished reading the tale. "You can sell that."

"Well, I don't know about that," said the newspaper man doubtfully. "It has the merit of brevity, of course, but the papers are not running much to that style of story now."

"I see 'em every day."

"That may be, too; but it's no sign that this will be accepted."

"I'll bet you a dollar it will be."

"Take you!" shouted the newspaper man so suddenly that it made his friend start.

The friend reached down in his pocket and pulled out a silver dollar, and as he put it up he said:

"Look here, old man, what's the game?"

"Playing a sure thing," was the reply. "I'll get three or four dollars for that if I sell it and one dollar if I don't. I've got three bets on three different stories now, and if my friends only hold out I'll make an everlasting fortune with my pen."—Chicago Tribune.

A HELPING HAND.

A helping hand we all may give,
If but a pleasant word to say,
And something find each day we live
To help another on the way.

A helping hand may sow the seed
From which the fruits of goodness grow,
And to the right may gently lead
The erring from the path of woe.

A helping hand to all mankind,
Among the rich, the poor, and low,
In every state of life can find
An act of kindness to bestow.

A helping hand we all may need,
When darkest sorrows leave their trace,
Some one to comfort and to lead,
To give us strength and needed grace.

A helping hand where'er we go
A ray of sunshine may impart,
And but a deed of kindness show
A noble and a generous heart.

A helping hand is ever near
In passing through life's troubled tide;
When all the world seems cold and drear
It is a never-failing guide.
—Alice D. Abell, in Good Housekeeping.

MAKING A SHOW.

Young Men, Beware of Sailing Under False Colors.

My Uncle George was an old bachelor. Why he preferred the state of single blessedness he kept a secret, but at last he made me a confidant.

One evening, as we sat together in my uncle's comfortable mansion, I found him in a very communicative mood, and partaking rather freely of his choice old sherry, of which he kept a good supply, and to my astonishment he broached the subject which I had promised to bring up.

"My dear boy," said he, "I suppose you have often wondered why I remained an old bachelor?"

"Yes, uncle," said I, in an airy, offhand way which did not at all betray the depth of my curiosity. "I am sure you must have had ample opportunity to see the cream of society and make a suitable choice of a companion."

"Well," said he, "I will tell you, and the story may be a good subject for your dreams of future speculation.

"When I was a young man I was rather fond of making a good show in society. At times this was performed on a very limited capital. Shortly after I settled in New York I made the acquaintance of a beautiful and estimable young lady, Miss Clorinda Swan, and I lost no time in paving the way for a matrimonial alliance with her.

"One evening the subject of conversation between us ran upon operas, and the upshot of it was that I invited Clorinda to go to the Academy of Music the next evening. As I have said, my means were then rather limited, and now I had just enough left to pay for the tickets, but no surplus for carplus for carriage, supper and etceteras. With these I determined to dispense, as I thought my fair Clorinda was too sensible to notice the loss.

"Fortune favored me at the start; the evening was fine and the ground dry, so at the appointed time I made my appearance, dressed in the best I could afford, and waited patiently for Clorinda. She soon put all my fears on the carriage question to flight by assuring me that she preferred walking.

"We chatted gayly on the way to the academy, and were in due time for performance, which was the opera of 'Martha,' with Mme. Parepa-Rosa in the leading role. Of the performance I need not speak. The opera was all that we could desire, and was rendered most admirably.

"When the performance was over we descended the stairs amid the gay throng, and soon reached the sidewalk. But, oh, horror of horrors! it was raining! What was I to do? To get a carriage, without having a cent to pay for it, made my blood run cold. A happy thought occurred to me in a moment, and in a nervous whisper I asked Clorinda if she had rubbers on. To my dismay she answered:

"'No; my boots are very light, too, and I could not think of walking. We must get a carriage.'

"Of course there was nothing left for me but to face the music, and I hailed one of the many drivers who were anxious to get passengers. I assisted my fair Clorinda to a seat, and in a few moments we were whirling along through the rain. Hardly had we gone two blocks when Clorinda said she was hungry, and asked me to stop and get supper. My feelings can easier be imagined than described as I thought of my empty pockets, and tried to reason her out of eating so late at night. All my arguments were fruitless, however, for my dear Clorinda was not to be thwarted.

"Thinking that fortune might befriend me by some means then a mystery to me, I ordered the driver to stop at the nearest restaurant. We entered the saloon and took seats at a table in the center of the room. I determined to eat as little as possible, but Clorinda was not by any means so delicate, and quietly took the liberty of ordering what she wanted. In vain I looked around to see if by chance the saloon contained an acquaintance, but to my dismay not a familiar face was to be seen.

"As you may imagine, I was not in a hurry to leave the table, but my companion began to show strong signs of restless anxiety to get home, so I thought I'd better start and have it over as soon as possible.

"I had formed many plans of how I was to pacify the cashier at the desk, but the wretch had more human nature in him than I imagined.

"While walking down the saloon I turned to Clorinda and suggested that she had better go out and get into the carriage while I was settling the bill and buying some cigars, which I wanted to take with me. To this she made no objection, as luck would have it.

"I walked on till I came in front of the smiling individual who was waiting for payment, and with as bold an air of innocence as I could assume I told him I had forgotten my pocketbook in the hurry of getting ready for the theater, but I would call next day and settle the bill.

"'Too thin a story to pass here, sir,' he ejaculated. 'We do a strictly cash business.'

"'I don't want to be bullied about such a trifle,' I continued, but the man had completely changed into a hog by this time, and coming out from his place behind the desk, he looked wicked enough to choke me then and there.

"'I will call a policeman and have you arrested,' he said, in a menacing tone, loud enough to be heard by all the people in the saloon.

"My blood boiled at the insulting manner of the man, and I lost all control over my actions.

"'Get out of my way and let me pass, you red-headed scoundrel!' I said as I made a dash for the door.

"A general scuffle ensued, and I believe I was giving him a few well-aimed blows, when, to my horror, a policeman rushed in and collared me as roughly as if I had been a madman.

"'What's this all about?' he demanded of the clerk, who was blind with rage.

"'Arrest that man and take him to the station-house, and I will go down and make a charge against him.'

"'But let me explain,' I cried, in a loud tone.

"'Explanations at the station-house,' said the officer, as he dragged me into the street, where a crowd of idlers had already gathered to see the fun.

"As I reached the sidewalk I saw the carriage drive off at a rapid rate. I learned afterward that Clorinda became alarmed for her own safety, and promised the driver a liberal reward if he would drive to her father's house. This made matters worse, for it looked as if she was an accomplice of mine, and fled for fear of arrest.

"Imagine the state of my feelings as I was marshaled through the streets, with five hundred urchins yelling all around me! When we reached the police station the usual preliminaries were gone through. The restaurant keeper appeared, and made a charge against me of 'swindling and deliberate assault without provocation.

"I told my story, but of course it went for nothing, as the policeman gave his evidence in affirmative of the charges. Of course I was walked off to a cell to pass the night in thinking over my troubles.

"In the morning, after being escorted before a police justice, I was tried and fined ten dollars. I telegraphed to a friend downtown, who soon came to my assistance and paid the fine. I went home to my boarding house, and, as luck would have it, the people in the house were ignorant of my adventures during the night. I suppose they thought I had been on a spree, but they said nothing, and I did not enlighten them.

"That evening I made up my mind to call upon my dear Clorinda and her parents, for the purpose of explaining my conduct. All through the day I had been framing excuses, which were, for the most part, lies and equivocations. When I reached the door my heart beat so strongly that I felt my courage giving way, and I stood on the stoop for several minutes before I could summon sufficient courage to ring the bell.

"When the girl came to the door I asked if Miss Swan was at home. She said 'yes,' and politely asked me to 'take a seat in the parlor.'

"In a few moments the servant reappeared, bearing a card with the compliments of her mistress. I glanced at the card, and on it was written, in a clear, delicate hand:

"'Have you got rubbers on? Have you the money to pay for your supper? If not I will lend you the necessary amount. C. S.'

"I made a dash for the door, and was soon in the street, fearing lest the father should appear and kick me out of the house.

"And now, my dear boy, do you wonder that I am still a bachelor! My advice to you is—beware of sailing under false colors."—D. J. Finlay, in N. Y. Weekly.

COTTAGE NAMES.

The Curious Nomenclature That Prevails at the Noted Maine Resort.

The cottage nomenclature of Bar Harbor, says a letter from that place, is interesting, and all sorts of odd, fantastic, appropriate and inappropriate names are given the summer homes.

The name "cottage" itself is peculiarly inappropriate when applied to some of these great baronial castles erected at a cost of more than one hundred thousand dollars, built of stone or coated with pebbledash or stucco.

Some of the names are: "Brierbound," "Meadowbridge," "Abendruh," "Marigold," "Edgemen," "Marevista," "Birch Point," "Devilstone," "Fernirest," "Yellow House," "Mikaana," "Reef Point," "Aloha," "Chatwold," "Aramaya," "Steepways," "Brierfield," "Bagatelle," "Greystone," "Villa Mary," "Guy's Cliff," "The Sea Urchins," "Buena Vista," "Clovercroft," "Mainstay," "The Moosinys," "Beaudesert," "Burnmouth," "The Barnacles," "Baymeath," "Witch-Clyffe," "Sonogee," "Fun Hill," "Homewood," "Devon," "Highbrook," "Stanwood," "Nasturtium," "Massly Hall," "Bany-Bryn," "Wyandotte," "Teviot," "Tanglewood," "Kebo," "Primrose," "The Eyrie," "The Crags," "Shingle," "Toppingwold," "Ingleside," "Thirlstone," "Oldfarm," "Beachcroft," "Glengordon," "Aldersea," "Chantier," "Pemetic Lodge," "The Tides," "Saltair," "Far Niente," "The Buoy," "The Ledge," "Crow's Nest," "Redwood," "Ledge Hollow," "Rockburne," "Dutch Cottage," and many others.—Chicago Times.

How He Did It.

"Darling," he murmured, "do you remember the night I left you six years ago, vowing that I would not look you in the face again until I counted myself worthy? To-night, my queen, I am a rich man. Tell me again that you do indeed love me." "I do," she answered, as she lay back in his strong arms and sighed as she thought of the long, weary years she had waited for the Metropolitan museum of art to open on Sunday. "But tell me, dear, how you made your fortune."

"That is easily done," he replied, gayly. "After I left the house that night I hastily entered a cab, but had not driven a block when the driver fell off the box in an apoplectic fit."

"And then?" she questioned, anxiously.

"And then," he went on, with an exultant ring in his voice, "I took his place."—Life.

Which Is Correct?

Of course Detroit can successfully claim some of the very sweetest and prettiest and most natural and brightest girls that ever drew the breath of life, but all of them are not quite up to that standard.

"Mamma," said one of these not-quite-ups, "is it proper to say that a horse is bow-legged in his fore-limbs, or bow-limbed in his fore-legs?"

And the good mother looked up from her work of sewing a reinforcement on the seat of Johnnie's pants and never said a word, but, oh, that look.—Detroit Free Press.

—"Is that horse docile?" he asked the auctioneer. "Docile? Why, he's docile than a rabbit, agiler than a cat and as gentle as a lamb. A hull menagerie goes with this animal. Do I hear you bid, sir?"—N. Y. Recorder.

FARM AND GARDEN.

A BEAUTIFUL PLANT.

Triosteum, or Fever Root, Where and How It Grows.

The name of this interesting plant is derived from two Greek words meaning three bones. (The drupe contains three bony seeds.)

Two species only are found in the United States—T. augustifolium, a rarer and more southern form, and T. perfoliatum which is widely distributed, and, though seldom abundant, is still not rare. The plant is herbaceous, growing from three to four feet high without branches. The leaves are large, perfoliate, and as well as the stems are clothed with soft somewhat sticky or clammy hairs. Flowers, dusky purple, growing in clusters of five or more closely around the stem at the basis of the leaves; these are followed by orange-colored, three-seeded drupes crowned by the persistent calyx segments. These drupes are said to be used sometimes as a substitute for coffee. The large root is much esteemed in medicine, its properties being cathartic or in large doses emetic. It is often used in place of ipecacuanha.

TRIOSTEUM, OR FEVER ROOT.

In June, its season of bloom, the coarse, dark herbage and curious, suspicious looking, dusky or brownish purple flowers can scarcely fail to draw attention even from the least observant. Its original habit is given as "rocky woods," but through the agency probably of birds it has extended its domains to hedges and roadsides where it rarely forms patches of small extent—more commonly growing singly or in groups of three or four.

The order to which this plant belongs — the caprifoliaceæ — includes about 220 species, 47 of which are North American. Among its relatives of note we might name the honeysuckles, snowberry, elder, cranberry, snowball and black haw. With few exceptions this is an order of shrubs many of them being of rare beauty but few, if any, destitute of that quality or deserving of the epithets "bush or weeds." — Prairie Farmer.

FARM AND GARDEN.

DESTROY all webs in trees and do so while the caterpillars are small, as it will then be a much easier job.

THIN out your early beets by using the large ones for the table, or, if necessary, thin them out and throw the surplus beets and leaves to the pigs.

THE dairyman who knows how to handle his milk and butter during the warm season will know how to save expenses, avoid loss and add to his profits.

FERTILIZER at the stem of a plant is not as valuable as if mingled in the soil around it, a foot away or more, according to the size of the growing plant above ground. For trees it should extend even further than the largest branches.

ALL stimulants should be applied with care. Begonias are particularly sensitive to them, and they should be used but seldom on geraniums, but to roses, fuchsias, carnations, heliotropes and others they may be given with more safety.

IF the droppings from the cows in a small pasture become very noticeable it will pay to have the heaps scattered over the ground. If left, a major part of the fertility sinks directly into the soil and gets down below the roots of the grass.

THE cost of keeping a cow has been shown to be about 10 cents per day, or $36 per year. Any variation from this is probably offset by the difference in value of products. If a cow will not pay this per year she is worse than no cow.

IN order to lessen the number of insects next season make it a point to rake up all the fallen fruits, as they will make excellent food for the pigs if cooked. It is in the fallen apples, peaches and pears that many of the insects are bred.

A FARMER should first find out whether or not his cow is capable of producing a profit, before beginning to feed her on scientific principles. There are thousands of cows that could not produce a cent's worth of profit on the best feed on earth.

Stomach Bots in Hogs.

The principal of the schools at Port Republic, N. J., sent Insect Life this report: "About a month ago Mr. Fielder, of the town, butchered two hogs for his own supply of meat. They were apparently healthy and all well. In sticking one of them he noticed the blood was unusually dark colored, and the hog had unusual tenacity of life. When the intestines were removed the stomach was found to be infested with a 'bot worm, just as horses are.' The stomach also had some dry substance in it resembling half-chewed corn stalk. The worms had not yet eaten through the coatings of the stomach, although some were nearly through." Dr. Riley replies that this case is interesting because, if the information is correct, it will be the only case, so far as he knows, in which the true stomach bot has been found in the hog. Hitherto the bots have been found only in the horse, the ass and the rhinoceros. As none of the maggots was saved, it is impossible to tell just what they were.

THE CHEAPEST MANURE.

Clover in Rotation Leaves Land Richer Than It Was Before.

We are asked: "What is a clover rotation?" It is a rotation of crops in which clover occupies the land for one or two years. The crops in use to form the rotation are corn, potatoes, oats, rye, wheat, barley, roots and sometimes others. A common rotation in the east is corn or potatoes on sod, oats the next year, rye or wheat sowed in the fall and seeded to clover on this. The clover remains one or two years and is then plowed under and the land planted to corn and potatoes again. A quicker rotation is to seed in the spring with oats. Potatoes or roots may follow corn for a year, then the land may be seeded with oats. The clover seed is sown directly after the oats and brushed in or rolled. Thick seeding should generally be practiced.

In the south, where a protection is needed on the ground in winter, oats may be sown in the fall, plowed under in the spring and the land planted to corn or cotton. The cow pea here takes the place of clover at the north, but unlike it, will grow on poor soils. The peas are sown in the spring in drills and may be harvested for a fodder crop in the summer, or be turned under as a green manure when well up, or even allowed to rot on the land. In the west the rotation is shorter and is generally corn, followed by spring wheat, or oats, and then winter wheat and seeded to clover. In sections where wheat is not grown the seeding is done with oats. It is a bad practice to follow corn with corn or wheat with wheat, for year after year. This will soon run out the best land, and clover should come in at least once in every five years.

The great value of clover in a rotation is that it leaves the land richer and in better mechanical condition than it was before. This is from the fact that the clover roots penetrate very deeply into the subsoil and bring much fertility to the surface. A great amount of the stalks and stems are always left on the field and these, with the roots, greatly enrich the soil when they decay. It is a generally accepted fact that clover and other plants of the same family have the power to use the nitrogen of the air. Assimilating the nitrogen of the air and bringing up fertility from below where other plants feed, are the two ways in which clover enriches the soil.—N. E. Homestead.

MEASURING LAND.

A Device That Is Very Light, a Rapid Worker and Accurate.

Take three strips of batten two inches wide, half an inch thick and six feet long, and nail them together, as shown in the accompanying engraving. After fastening them together, saw off the ends so that the air line distance from a to b, from b to c, and from c to a shall be exactly five and a half feet. A man can stand erect in using this, and roll it over at a walking gait, each revolution measuring one rod. In commencing place b at the starting point, letting c be in the direction you are to measure, and a pointing upward. A colored tag should mark a to remind you to count one each time it comes pointing upward. The advantage of this shape over that of a common triangle is that it permits straddling over slight objects or elevations, and thus does not measure the circuitous distance over them, a fault of all wheel measures. This measure is very light, a rapid worker, quite accurate and requires no stooping on the part of the operator.—American Agriculturist.

HOMEMADE ROLLER.

Bill Arp Combines Philosophy with Practical Farming.

Any farmer can make one. Make in two sections, each three feet long and as near three inches in diameter as you can get. Poplar is the best timber. Bore through with a two-inch augur—that is, bore half way from each end, and if a man has a good eye he can hit the hole. If he misses it a little the iron spindle will burn its way through. Let the spindle be only one and a half inches in diameter and project four inches. Put a washer between the rollers. Build a frame round and let the end of the spindle support it. Bolt the corners of the frame together. Bolt two upright standards at each end for a plank seat to rest upon and fasten seat securely to the cross pieces. Then bolt and brace a good tongue to the front of the frame and use your wagon doubletree. Then get aboard and pop your whip and ride. It is splendid riding. Carl does all my rolling and Jessie rides with him sometimes. A roller beats any harrow in the world for pulverizing. In fact I have never seen a harrow that would pulverize much. This spring my land broke up very cloddy, but I planted corn and covered it with the clods and then rolled it, and it was smooth as a parlor floor and every hill came up. I sowed my turnip seed Saturday and rolled them in and they came up before breakfast Monday morning. Roll your wheat, roll your clover seed, roll everything you can. As Byron says: "Roll on."—Bill Arp, in Southern Farm.

The Kind of Cow to Buy.

Beware of the cow or heifer with a masculine head, as well as the cow suspiciously fat. The latter is probably fat because she is a shy breeder and has a calf only once in awhile. Buy the cow with the motherly look. We cannot describe it in words, but every man who has his eyes open knows the expression of maternity or motherliness. She may be thin in flesh, not half so good-looking as others, but it is simply because she has been duplicating herself regularly, and thus fulfilling her mission. If she has the form and the breeding and good, lusty calves to her credit, buy her. Don't buy the long-legged, thin-chested, consumptive-looking animal under any circumstances, no matter what the breeding.—Iowa Homestead.

A SHED on the south side of the poultry house will be found quite an advantage during the winter, especially if protected from the northwest winds. It will afford the fowls an opportunity to air themselves on days when it would otherwise be impossible.

What folly it would be to cut grass with a pair of scissors! Yet people do equally silly things every day. Modern progress has grown up from the hooked sickle to the swinging scythe and thence to the lawn mower. So don't use scissors!

But do you use SAPOLIO? If you don't you are as much behind the age as if you cut grass with a dinner knife. Once there were no soaps. Then one soap served all purposes. DELANO DIARY.

—Delano Fair Day on Saturday, September 12.

—School Monday morning. Miss Wilkinson having notified the board of her intention not to come a new teacher is wanted. Several have applied.

—During the storm, on Friday night, last, Charles Stein had a grain stack struck by lightning, and had it not been for the heavy rain would, likely, have met with a serious conflagration. As it was with the help of neighbors he succeeded in saving all but 50 or 60 bushels of wheat.

—Mr. and Mrs. E. Bowen, gave a progressive euchre party at their residence on Tuesday evening. Twenty people were present, M. A. O'Hair and Mrs. A. W. Wittman, took first prizes while Scientist Probst with Philosopher's luck captured the booby offering, Mrs. C. G. Roosen sharing honors with him.

—Warren Merriman and his son Joe started Monday for Osceola Mills, Wis, to enjoy among other things the benefit of the medicinal springs there. Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Marshall joined them at Delano Tuesday journeying to the same place. They are fully equipped for an overland journey. —Howard Lake Herald.

—Hi Dyer was triumphantly exhibiting on Tuesday, last, a Tomato of the tree variety, weighing 1 and ½ pounds. He paid 22 cents for 18 seeds all of which came up. He gave away several of the plants, but has 10 left from which he expects to pick 3 or 4 bushels af the luscious fruit. Should Mr. D. place a few of his Tomatoes on exhibition at the Wright County Fair we think he would stand a chance of gathering in a premium for his pains.

—Hoisington Bros., threshing outfit passed through town on Tuesday evening. The huge engine as it ran along hauling the separator seemed like some big animal harnessed up for man's use. Just before coming in to town they threshed for William Stanley and report his wheat as having averaged 38 bushels to the acre and that from 1 and ½ acres of oats he got 170 bushels. Mr. Stanley had to bind his grain by hand on account of being so heavy as to be badly lodged. But he got a good crop just the same.

—On Tuesday afternoon John Steffes was loading lumber onto his wagon near the depot,with Horace Mann to hold the horses. The freight train came along and frightened the team, which began to run, the boy droped the lines and started in another direction leaving Mr. S. to ride alone, which he did at a lively gait until near Young's Hotel when John after an unusual exhibition of his agility succeeded in reaching the front end of the load and his persuasive eloquence began to have effect on the team which came to a halt the whole outfit reminding one forcibly of a comic picture in an almanac. No bones broke.

"We never know the need of water Till the well runs dry."

was forcibly brought to mind to many a weary traveler whose jaded horses stood patiently waiting for a drink while their driver pumped until he grew red in the face, but never a drink. This state of affairs continued over Sunday, Monday, Tuesday, and a part of Wednesday when A. L. Mealy came to quench the thirst of his roadster, was about to give up in dispair and seek another watering place when his eye chanced to fall on Timothy Gleeson, Esq., whom he accosted as follows: "Hi, come here! Your a pump man and know something about pumps, fix this one." whereupon Mr. G. taking in the situation, at a glance, proceeded to adjust the pipes and in about two minutes Mr. Mealey's horse was doing what nobody else's horse had for four days. Getting a drink at the town pump. And when the crowd dispersed each smole a smile "when shall we three meet again?"

—We understand that our former fellow townsman W. H. Frazee, now of the county seat, swapped horses recently, with the Rev. Dr. at Rockford, becoming owner of the steed that took so prominent a part in distributing pills and spreading the gospel a few days ago at that place. For a few days the horse behaved splendidly and W. H. began to think that he had made a good bargain when all at once he was brought to a realization of the fact that perhaps the old doctor was about as good an equestrian as himself, by the new colt discovering a cow getting up and jingling her bell in a pasture near the road and giving a sudden jump throwing his new owner out of the buggy and leaving him to behold the speed of his trading stock and to cogitate on what manner of horse he had got any way, and as to how he would travel the five miles or so to reach home. After going from the Hathaway farm to Peter Marshes the noble animal allowed a lady to capture him when the left behind came up, borrowed a buggy and drove home keeping a lookout for bells. Possibly should his owner be so thoughtless as to drive out on Sunday and the church bell should chance to ring the good people would be surprised to see W. H. coming to meeting at a rapid pace.

—The Ladies' Aid Society hold their 5 o'clock tea at the home of Mrs. C. F. Green this afternoon.

—Baron Von Kruger says "ven an agent he comes mit a new scheme around he sometimes gets left. A Dutchman i'no geese anyway." The occasion of this outburst of wisdom from Mr K. was, so Gus says, the advent in our town of an itinerant cigar vendor who let on that he was going to rent a house and settle here therefore he must be patronized and his cigars purchased in perferance to foreign manufactures, but that on finding no customers he concluded to move on.

County Cullings.

MONTICELLO, Minn., Aug. 30,—Monticello experienced a very serious fire this morning, which broke out at 2 o'clock, totally consuming the works of the Monticello starch factory and the two-story residence of E. B. McCord, president of the Citizens' bank. The loss of the factory company amounted to $14,000. insured for $5,000. as follows: Etna, Hartford, $2,000; Michigan; $1,000. Phoenix, Hartford, $2, 000. E. B. McCord's loss $3,500 insured for nearly $1,500. It is probable that the factory will be rebuilt at once, as half of it is owned by Frank Nickerson, of this place, and the other half by R. L. Hall, of Anoka. The factory made a market for 100,000 bushels of potatoes, the grinding of which would have commenced to-morrow.

The Reason Why.

One reason why it is difficult to drive out the saloon business is that it is the only parlor and club-room thousands of poor men have. It is always ready to receive them. It is lighted and warmed and usually furnished with chairs. The floor is not covered with a fine carpet which the poor man would be in mortal dread of soiling. Men who have no comforts at home are not attracted by luxurious furniture such as is found in our best churches. Finery repels then, but rude accommodations attract them. Thousands of young men shut up in cramped quarters at boarding houses have been drawn into saloons to spend their evening hours where they can meet their companions even when as yet they had formed no bad habits and had no thought of becoming habitual drinkers. The devil's snares are planned with consummate skill and adjusted to the conditions of human nature with ingenuity worthy of a better cause. —New York Christian Advocate in Ram's Horn.

CLEVER MR. CARLISLE.

He Is Getting Statistics That Will Be Valuable.

BOSTON, Aug. 30.—For several days Carlisle and Aldrichs, with Secretary Durfee, of the sub-committe, of the senate finance committe, have been hearing testimony at the Hotel Vendome from leading manufacturers in this vicinity regarding the cost of producing the various commodities with which they are identified The shoe industry of Massachusetts has occupied a good share of their attention, as has also the manufacture of woolens. It is their intention to take up every article of general consumption thoroughly analyze its course from the shop or field to the consumer. Said Senator Carlisle yesterday:

"There appears to be a belief that we are in some way attempting to gather material simply to show what effect the McKiuley bill has had upon values and wages since it went into operation.

Now this is entirely erroneous. Our work comprehends the whole range of tariff legislation, both in this and foreign countries, and we go as far back in our research as practicable, gathering all the facts that manufacture, transportation, wages, etc., comprehend, and applying them in the final determination in a way that shall show to us what influence they have had in increasing the value of necessary commodities. We have had before us many eminent economists and have obtained an enormous mass of statistical matter that will have its proper place in our final report."

"With regard to wages, we have an agent at work gathering statistics, and he is making a satisfactory degree of progress. Nothing that has been published or presented to congress bearing upon this subject is of any practica value as it is lacking in the very information that it purports to give. When our labors are finished we will be prepared to give to the country a mass of data unequaled in value in the consideration of economic questions."

In reply to a question, Mr. Carlisle stated that it has been found that the discrepancy between the manufacturer's price and that paid by the consumer is abnormally large in the matter of boots and shoes. The committee will remain in Boston a few days longer, and will then continue its work in other industrial centers.—Globe.

WHAT A BOY CAN DO.

These are some of the things that a boy can do:
He can whistle so loud that the air turns blue,
He can make all sounds of beast and bird,
And a thousand noises never heard.

He can crow or cackle, or he can cluck
As well as a rooster, hen or duck;
He can bark like a dog, he can low like a cow,
And a cat itself can't beat his "me-ow."

He has sounds that are ruffed, striped, and plain:
He can thunder by as a railway train,
Stop at the stations a breath, and then
Apply the steam and be off again.

He has all his powers in such command,
He can turn right into a full brass band
With all of the instruments ever played,
As he makes of himself a street parade.

You can tell that a boy is very ill
If he's wide awake and keeping still;
But earth would be—God bless the mite!—
A dull old place if there were no boys.

Australian Ballot.

BOSTON, Sept. 1.—Judge Lathrop, of the supreme court, has sent down a decision in an important point of law applicable to the Australian ballot act. In the case before the court an effort was made by citizens of Revere to oust a member of the board of selectmen, their most important point being an allegation that several persons voted for the candidate who had no right to vote. The defendant's counsel contended that under the Australian ballot act, it could not be objected after an election that persons voted illegally where it did not appear that the votes of such persons were challenged in the manner provided for by the act. Judge Lathrop sustained the defendant,s demurrer, holding that where votes were not challenged their legality after-wards be a subject of inquiry.—Globe.

Constitution and Resolutions of the Wright Country Teacher's Association.

RESOLUTIONS.

FIRST. That realizing the advantages of co-operation and the exchange of ideas and methods of teaching among the members of our profession we would request the Superintendent to arrange at an early date for an organization of teachers to be known as the Wright County Teacher's Association.

SECOND. That as one of the means of furthering the cause of education we do recommend the early adoption by the schools of Wright county of a uniform system of free text books.

THIRD. That we believe it a duty devolvent upon us as teachers to conduct ourselves in our every day life in such a manner that we will set a proper example for emulation before our pupils.

FOURTH. That we deplore the fact that in many districts of our county, parents and school-trustees are strangers to the school-room and believing that it is an aid to education to have the earnest co-operation of the parents of our pupils and the trustees of our school districts, we would earnestly request the parents and trustees to visit our schools and co-operate with us in raising the schools of Wright county to a higher standard.

FIFTH. That we believe that the work of teaching primary pupils is one of the most difficult tasks entrusted to our profession and one that requires special talent and we therefore favor raising the standard of wages paid our primary teachers.

SIXTH. That as one of the means of inculcating patriotism and love of country in the minds of the youth of our country we will favor and work to secure the raising of our country's flag over every school-house in Wright county.

SEVENTH. That in as much as our state has made liberal provision for the establishment of school libraries in each and every district of the state we feel it a duty devolvent upon us as teachers to use our utmost endeavor to secure a library for each school district.

EIGHTH. That we extend our thanks to Professors McCleary and Pendergast for the aid they have given us, to Mrs. Beede for her instruction in music, to Superintendent Lindley for his labors in our behalf and to the people of Monticello for their many courtesies and the hearty welcome we have received at their hands.

Signed by Committee,
AARON REINMUTH,
HATTIE J. MEALEY,
CARRIE J. GALLOW,
JOHN G. LOVE,
NELLIE I. BARKER,
F. B. LAMSON.

CORRESPONDENCE

WATERTOWN WAYS.

Next Monday is our monthly Fairday.

Mrs. Wm. Bleedorn has been spending a week or two visiting friends in the cities.

W. F. Japs spent a couple of days in the cities the fore part of this week.

The band boys went to Waconia again last Sunday and played for the citizens of that village who were holding a picnic. The services of the Watertown band seem to be in quite a demand at present. Next Sunday they go to Delano for a frienply visit with the band of that place.

Rev. J. R. Davies and wife went to Minneapolis on Tuesday of this week and returned as far as Delano the same day.

If you want a nice hanging lamp you will find some very nice ones at H. A. Halgren's drug store. Call and see them.

Those who have attended the State Fair and Exposition from Watertown as far as we know are Frank Speckie and George Barth, Hon. C. G. Halgren, Mrs. Albert Japs and children, and Miss Bertha Japs, Thomas Campbell, Mr. Pat Gavan, Mr. and Mrs. Walter St John and their daughter Amy, and Miss Emma Kohler.

F. A. Barth has just completed and will move into a very nice and neat residence above his store which adds greatly to the appearance of his store and improves the looks of the street a great deal. Mr. Nels Lundquist and Mr. J. M. Hultquist were his carpenters and Geo. A. Kohler his decorator Geo. is a fine painter and never leaves a job without leaving a good recommendation for himself in the work he has done.

The Ladie's Aid Society will hold their sale and give a dinner and supper in the new City Hall on Monday next the proceeds to go towards Rev. J. R. Davies' salary in part and the balance towards the debt of the church. Come everybody and enjoy themselves.

Michael Davis of the town of Franklin who has been sick for the past four or five years died on Saturday last and was buried from the Catholic of this place on Monday, the Rev. Father Cawley conducting the funeral services.

LORETTO.

We are now enjoying fine weather.

Among those who visited Minneapolis the past week were Mrs. Jubert, Miss Gover, Mr. Hoenstein, and Jos Klars.

The Atlantic Elevator Company have opened the grain house at this place. H. C. Parslow, buyer.

Chas. Shaar has been tearing down the shed, built against Jno. Shaar's barn, and is hauling the lumber to his farm.

There will be a dance in Burg's Hall, Loretto, next Saturday night, Sept. 12. Mr. B. is bound to make it a success.

The "Kaiser" of Medina Township celebrated his seventieth birth day, last Sunday. He "set em up" to all his friends and Generals and felt happy when he left this place.

A. J. Cruikshank had a lively time in Loretto, Sunday. Two black eyes told the tale Monday morning.

Will Guptil drove down this way last Sunday to see one of the Corcoran ladies, who is always WILLing to take a ride.

The corn in low places is damaged a little by frost.

Mr. P. Lange is building an addition to his house. The young folks had a dance there Sunday night.

It is said Adam Tautges went through one of John Burg's windows one day last week and that John Thelan was the propelling force.

Hunters are quite plenty in this vicinity this fall.

[Too late for last week.]

Joe Haumont came to Loretto on business, Wednesday.

Dr. C. B. Ames seems to have given up going to Chicago. He spent Wednesday, here.

Jno. Smith had a two year old heifer killed by the afternoon freight, one day last week.

The Moses boys have their house shingled. F. Dorman and E. Pettit did the work.

John Shaar, our barber, was home Sunday attending to business.

Ben Willcutt visited his best girl here last Sunday.

Jno. Fick nearly had a runaway last Monday. The leather on the neck yoke broke and the pole dropped, scaring the ponies, and they attempted to get away. Fortunately no damage done.

John Attendorf is becoming quite an artist. He took Emiel Koch's picture through a lamp chimney a few days ago.

P. Becker, M. Jacobs, J. Koch, and M. Becker took Tuesday's train for Minneapolis.

Mrs. K. R. Oefling and sister spent Monday in Minneapolis.

Miss Laura Dorman spent Saturday and Sunday with friends in Rockford.

Not very many people have attended the Expo. yet from this vicinity.

Mr. Koch, of Loretto, and Mr. Sausser, of Rockford, make regular trips through this vicinity, supplying the people with fresh meat.

ST. MICHAELS.

Our church, when completed will be as fine a building of its kind as can be found in a rural community. The brick layers had to stop last week for want of lime. One car load of slate for roofing arrived last week from Pennsylvania.

A trick was played here last Wednesday night on a young blacksmith from St. Walburg, Hennepin county, about eiget miles below St. Michaels. He wanted to hire some help for his work and started from home after nine o'clock in the evening. In St. Michael's he tied his horse, a hired one, to a hitching post in front of M. Nelles' meat market and went to A. Duerr's to see if he could get him to come and work for him By eleven o'clock he came back and his horse was gone. Nelles said a little while ago, when he went to bed the horse was there yet. The blacksmith went home, per pedes apostatorum. A little while after a village councilman came up the road with horse and buggy, and the butcher, who had been called out by the blacksmith, told him whose horse it was and asked him to leave the horse there, but councilman refused saying he would take the horse to pound master. Owner of horse came up next morning and redeemed him by paying 75 cents, (50cts for councilman and 25cts for poundmaster.) It looks to me as if the affair was made up between councilman and others, they having been at a saloon near by, to mulct blacksmith. Can't call it a boy's trick because money was charged.

MORAL, When at St. Michaels, stable your horse: or if tied to a hitching post, watch him close, else you may be called upon to contribute your mite towards paying beer for somebody.

INDEPENDENCE.

INDEPEMDENCE, MINN., Sept. 8, 1891.

EDITOR BUFFALO GAZETTE.—As I date and write off the head lines of this communication am reminded that fall is here the sadest of the year. Can see already in the deep shades of the forest in many places the tall maple that lifts its head far above the surrounding forest is nipped by frost and the brown among the green gives the woods a look of solemnity and makes one wish for the spring time of youth again. The days of half a century has swept by like the weaver's shuttle, and yet in our imagination life has just begun. How short and few are the days of man. He comes upon the stage of action and in early life starts to hew out for himself a home or fortune as the case may be and never gives up the race until he is crowned with success or disappointment. The young live in the future the old in the past, and when we take our exit out of this world we leave all behind. Wealth, pleasure, sorrow, poverty, and all the ghostly imaginations that have haunted us all through life is sunk into oblivion and the dark night of eternity. Man in his calm and sober thoughts realizes then how frail he is and knows he is but dust.

Many years ago this country, the United States of America, was cursed with human slavery, men, women and ministers of the gospel talked and wrote upon it, kept it before the people in way of agitation and now it is a thing of the past. Yes there were four million slaves set free, which no dought was right, but the republican party, their liberators as they style themselves, left them to the mercy of their enemies without any protection whatever but in a short time put them in the ballot box without experience or knowledge how to vote and unwise legislating for the last 25 years has brought about a state of affairs that demands our attention as much or more than human slavery ever did.

The party now in power is being broken up into different factions; many of them are dissatisfied with the way things have been conducted and will not follow their leaders longer. Many of them have steped out of the republican ranks and are demanding their rights regardless of party affiliation. Many of the leaders of the republican party say the dissatisfied class of their party are none but old fogies, soreheads, etc., but if they content themselves with this idea only will find that in '92 somebody else will have the loaves and fishes, for the masses are getting awake to their own interests. The farmer and laboring class are finding out the republican party do not put in practice what they preach, home protection. It is the manufacturer the capitalist and trust combine that gets protection and not the producer. It is but a few years since we got rid of that cursed thing human slavery, which bound a race of men and women with fetters and chains giving their captors a right over them as chattel and mortgage and represented to them property by millions. Now, in heaven's name let us not bring a worse condition of things upon this generation than those blacks were called to endure for more than a century, by enslaving the many of this country to make a few rich lords. Gold is a thing dug from the bowels of the earth, put into the refiners fire, separated from the dross and comes out a shining thing that fools admire.

Now, it is an undeniable fact to the man of ordinary intelligence that the money of this country is getting into the hands of a few men, and that they are usurping the authority over the Congress of the United States, over the different State Legislatures and, also, over the masses of the people to have things just their own way. But, the poor, as well as the rich, have rights that our law makers are bound to respect or should, at least. The poor should receive more attention from our legislators than the rich for the man of no capital. But the American people are a people that love to make money and, therefore, do not have much concienious scruples how they get it, many of them. And, as I write my pen trembles upon this tablet page when I think what the condition of things will be in the future if we do not have a change and that soon, But, Mr. Editor, my time is up and I must close for fear this will find a lodging place in one corner of your waste basket. Some may think I slop over in this but I do not like to look upon poverty in its wretched condition, and in this country there is enough and plenty for all if the big fish did not eat up the little fellows all the time.

JOHN H. MCGARY.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4, 1891.

If a business man was known to have outstanding paper, payable on demand, amounting to $27,000,000 and only $18,579,565 of available cash on hand to meet that paper, would the commercial world consider him solvent? Not much, well that is precisely the present condition of the United States Treasury. There are more than 27,000,000 of the four-and-a-half percent bonds which wer not presented for extension and which now simply stand for notes payable on demand, and there is, leaving out the fractional silver coin and other funds that cannot legally be paid out, only $18,579,565 on hand to pay them with. Secretary Foster is said to have a scheme by which he expects to bulldoze certain of the larger national banks into buying all of these bonds and presenting them for extension and it is for that purpose that he has announced and indefinite extension of the time within which they may be extended at 2 per cent. But it is by no means certain that he can succeed and already since Wednesday on which day the interest ceased. Nearly $8,000,000 worth of the bonds have been presented for redemption and the most of them came from National banks. That made a hole in the available funds and besides these bonds there are big pension payments to be made this month. On paper Secretary Foster figures out a cash balance of more than $60,000,000, but he knows, as well as every other business man familiar with the affairs of the treasury, that the amount mentioned about represents every dollar which he can legally pay out.

Candidates for the vacancy on the board of Interstate Commerce Commissioners, made by the death of Hon. W. L. Bragg, of Alabama are becoming extremely plentiful around town and Secretary Noble under whose province it is, is a much sought man.

Col. L. L. Polk, the president of the National Farmer's Alliance, who is now here, is being somewhat harshly criticized by both friends and foes among Southerners for the light and airy manner in wich he disposes of the many personal charges made against him by the Raleigh News& Observer, and of the report that he contemplated challenging the author of the charges to fight a duel. This is the way he speaks of it: "If any one wants to fight a duel with me I have not beeninformed of it. The thing is a lot of nonsense. Col. Polk may think it a lot of "nonsense" to be called a poltroon and coward" but that isn't the way others regard it, and according to the Southern idea it is he that should want to fight a duel with the man who is so openly abusing him instead of waiting to ascertain whether any one wants to fight a duel with him. Men opposed to the code under any circumstances say that Col. Polk should have his assailant arrested for criminal libel but the enemies of Col. Polk say that he dare not take that course because if he did the charges against him would be proven in court. Thus the matter stands but there can be but little doubt that it is injuring Col. Polk's standing, and many are predicting that it will result in his being deposed fron the Alliance Presidency.

THEY are now trying to show that Christopher Columbus was a Frenchman, or at least was born in Corsica under French government.

IN the 6,000,000 letters that reached the dead-letter office last year there was money amounting to $28,642 and checks and notes of the value of $1,471,871.

GREAT guns that require one thousand pounds of powder and carry a ball twelve miles are something of a terror, but they will do a small amount of fighting.

REV. E. A. BUCK, of Fall River, Mass., has signed his name to 1,016 marriage certificates. He boasts that no knot he ever made has been untied save by death.

ABOUT 8,000 stars are visible to the naked eye, being those up to the sixth magnitude. The latest calculations of the astronomers put the entire number of stars at 14,000,000.

THE same day that Mrs. ex-President Polk died a letter was received at the white house, of which she was mistress so many years ago, directed to her, "care of the white house."

IN the year 1819 there were born in this country James Russell Lowell, Charles A. Dana, Walt Whitman, Dr. Holland and Julia Ward Howe. That is the birth year of Queen Victoria also.

A MAN fishing at Jersey, Eng., was caught by the rising tide, and a boat had to be put out to rescue him. The next day the magistrate sentenced him to eight days' hard labor "for the trouble he had caused."

TWO REMARKABLE old ladies are Mrs. Hannah Eustis and Miss Sarah Barr, of Wakefield, Mass. They are twin sisters, born in 1800, and are still bright and in active health. So great is their resemblance in figure, voice and manner that one is frequently mistaken for the other.

A GEORGIA man, in selecting the ten greatest men in history, has found nine of them as follows: Moses, St. Paul, Julius Cæsar, Martin Luther, William the Silent, Shakespeare, Cromwell, Peter the Great and Napoleon. Gentlemen who are candidates for the last place on the list will please send in their names early and avoid the rush.

THE New York Journal of Commerce says it is safe to declare that the problem of how to get rich engrosses the attention of one-third of our population, while the question of how to keep out of the poorhouse engrosses the attention of the other two-thirds. A liberal share of both classes are engaged in the study of how to keep out of jail.

A PROFESSOR of the Paris academy of sciences has been making experiments which have resulted in convincing him that the rabbit is of all living things the most capable of withstanding a very low temperature. Inclosed all night in a block of ice, a rabbit was found next day getting on very comfortably and evidently not aware of anything very peculiar in his circumstances.

AN experiment made at Montreal of completing a cable circuit to make a continuous line of eight thousand miles shows that electricity travels that distance in one and five hundredths seconds, whereas nerve force, which is calculated to travel only at the rate of a mile a minute, would have taken nearly a week to make the journey. These are the calculations made in defense of electrical execution.

THERE is nickel in the slot in Idaho to an abounding degree. Near Hope, in that state, a vein of the metal has been discovered which is seven feet wide and the ore assays very rich. Nickel is worth seventy cents per pound and has never been found before in large quantities in this country, and the fact that the navy department has adopted nickel steel for armor makes the discovery one of great importance.

"INJUN JO," the original of one of the characters in Mark Twain's "Tom Sawyer," still lives in Hannibal, near where the scenes in the book are laid. He is now a tough old man of 75, and hauls trunks from the depot on a red express wagon drawn by a white horse. He has accumulated a modest fortune, owning twelve small dwelling-houses, but his clothes grow shabbier and more ragged every year. He has always been displeased with the notoriety Twain gave him, and considers himself insulted when the subject is mentioned.

ADVICES from Rome bring official intelligence that the provincial debts of Italy amount to $2,983,500,000, or $103 for each inhabitant, while the national debt is nearly $4,000,000,000. In all, therefore, the obligations of Italy foot up about $7,000,000,000. In the meantime emigration continues and largely increases. This vast debt has been incurred by bankrupt Italy in part by the large sums paid to official sinecures, but mostly by the enormous amount of money wasted in keeping up an army and navy on a scale comporting with those of the other members of the Dreibund.

THE English matron objects to the modern fashion of advertising infant foods by means of photographs of lightly-clad babies which have been reared upon them, because, forsooth, in future years when these infant giris, whose identity is established by the publication of their names beneath the portrait, become modest maidens, it will be embarrassing to have the young man of the future possess these portraits of the misses in—shirts. Of course, the baby boys of to-day are assiduously collecting and preserving the portraits for future reference in case of meeting their originals.

IN accordance with the decision of the universal postal convention at Vienna, the post office department will issue a double postal card for international use. It consists of two parts, one for the original message and the other for the reply. The cost of the card is four cents and it can be sent to any country in the postal union, now including the Australian colonies. Having adopted the double foreign card, we see no reason why the government should not adopt the improvement for the domestic service. This would be more convenient than the "inclosed stamp for reply."

Commissioners Enjoined.

FARGO, N. D., Sept. 8.—The Great Northern Railroad company had papers issued from the United States circuit court late last night restraining the board of railroad commissioners and wheat inspectors from in any way interfering with trains on that road. The first paper was a bill in equity, which, among other things, recites that much of its freight from Montana consists of perishable goods; that the wheat crop of North Dakota will be about 50,000,000 bushels, or from 90,000 to 100,000 carloads, and Minnesota's nearly as great. It is stated that the time for inspection is too small, and there is no chance to properly inspect at night, and great delay should the inspection law be enforced. Discrimination against the Great Northern is also claimed in favor of the Chicago & Northwestern, which has a line running to Oakes, the "Soo" to Valley City, and the Milwaukee to Ellendale. The commissioners' orders are claimed to be contrary to the interstate law. A restraining order and order to show cause were also issued, returnable Sept. 10, when Judge Caldwell will be present to sit with Judge Thomas on the case. The Northern Pacific Railroad company has secured similar papers and had them served, so that no further inspection will be attempted until after that date.

NEAR Arcadia, La., a burly negro dragged a young lady into the woods and tied her to a tree, keeping her there two days when she was found by a searching party. The negro was captured and fearfully tortured, being skinned alive and literally cut to pieces.

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS

Was Down on Bulls and Bears.

An insane man who announced himself as the Messiah come down from Heaven thought he had a mission to destroy grain speculation at Duluth. He gained access to the board and was talking with Superintendent Ripley of that company about work. As Mr. Ripley's back was turned later he heard the lunatic say his time had come, and turned just in time to grasp the revolver the man had drawn. After a short struggle he succeeded in overpowering and disarming him. The man said it was time for the board to be wiped out and he was the one to do it.

To Stop Lumber Piracy.

Log owners at Duluth will organize to put a stop to a species of piracy that has been practiced upon the lumbermen at the head of the lake. Several men make a business of picking up scattering logs along the shores of the river and bay and converting them into merchantable material. Sometimes these logs are made into cordwood, sometimes into paving blocks and frequently the river pirates simply saw a piece off each end of the log and then attempt to sell it to the very man who owned it in the first place.

Child Killed by a Binder.

Gracie, the 11-year-old daughter of John Tritten, who lives a few miles south of Rochester, was accidentally killed by a binder. Mr. Tritten was cutting grain, and had five horses on the binder, one of which Gracie was riding, when a dog ran through the field and frightened them. The horses started to run, throwing her under the reaper, the large wheel passing over her head, smashing it terribly and killing her instantly.

The First Train.

The first train was run the other day on the Itasca Lumber Company's logging road, which has just been completed for 20 miles in the direction of the international boundary, to where it will soon be extended. The line is now completed to Campton. This road will bring logs from the interior and dump them into the Mississippi, along which large landings have been constructed.

Lost Part of His Toes.

Attorney P. J. Russell and a party were out duck shooting near Crookston, and while Mr. Russell was lying on his back in the grass he attempted to change the shells in his gun. While letting down the hammers he pulled the wrong trigger and the charge of shot went through the toe of his left shoe, carrying a part of his first two toes with it.

Drowned Herself.

The wife of Maj. George W. Camp, one of the oldest settlers of Minneapolis, committed suicide by drowning herself at Minnetonka beach, Lake Minnetonka, where the Camp family has a summer cottage. She had been suffering from nervous prostration for a year, and her reason was unsettled. She was 63 years old.

Minnesota's Horses.

A census bulletin shows that there were 461,509 horses on hand in Minnesota on June 1, 1893; 9,315 mules and 196 asses. There were foaled in 1889 in Minnesota 57,260 horses, 380 mules and 58 asses. The number of horses sold in the state in 1899 was 30,682 and the number of mules 672.

The News Briefly Chronicled.

Jacob M. Mehl, a German farmer living in the town of Forest, was killed by a bull while he was watering his cattle.

The tug Rambler, Capt. Yocum, of Duluth, was burned to the water's edge in Canadian waters.

The new Mitchell & McClure mill at West Duluth has commenced its season's cut. It requires 30 per cent. less hands than other mills of like capacity.

Frank Hach, a brother of George H. Hach, of South St. Paul, was among those who lost their lives in the Park place explosion in New York city.

Frank Mitchel was accidentally killed by John Benson at Argyle. While Benson was drawing a gun toward him it went off, killing Mitchel.

Duluth's street railway passed out of a receiver's hands, local stockholders having secured a controlling interest. F. L. Wardwell, formerly of St. Paul, will be made general manager.

Faribault will have the free delivery system by October.

The Minneapolis board of education has reconsidered its action excluding married women from the corps of teachers.

The Trinity Episcopal church at Elk River was dedicated by Bishop Gilbert, a number of visiting clergymen from different parts of the state assisting.

Farm lands in Otter Tail county have advanced materially this year.

During a thunderstorm the barn of George Knowles, a farmer living 5 miles west of Glenwood, was struck by lightning and three horses out of four standing in the barn were killed.

August Closterman, aged 18, was accidentally shot and killed near St. Paul while hunting.

Lightning struck and set fire to the barn of W. Schupp, a farmer 2 miles north of Young America. The barn and many grain stacks near by were consumed by fire. Loss, about $1,500.

The government dam at Pokegama falls has finished passing the last of the upper Mississippi logs, consisting of the Bear river drive and all other logs above Grand Rapids, some 30,000,000.

A freight train was wrecked on the Eastern Minnesota railroad near Princeton and the cars took fire and Conductor Young, Collin Campbell and James Baker narrowly escaped being burned alive.

Detectives Howard and Jim Doyle think they have captured, in the persons of William Young and J. P. Riley, the men who have been burglarizing private residences during the summer in Minneapolis.

Tyndall had a $6,000 blaze, destroying the Nunting & Co. elevator with contents. The books of J. M. Burbeck, containing accounts with the farmers for twine sold, were also burned.

LOWER TARIFF ON GRAIN.

Germany to Make Further Concessions to This Country—A Modified Schedule on Grain and Provisions Produced in the United Stated to Be Issued in Berlin.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—Germany is going to follow its removal of the embargo on American pork by making tariff concessions on grains and provisions from the United States. The German government is not ready to admit this fact officially because the details have not been agreed on, but in the near future a proclamation may be looked for from Berlin giving a modified tariff schedule on this class of importations from the United States. The plan is to give this country the same concessions that are given Russia under the favored nation clause of its treaty with Germany. Russia is selected because of its recent order prohibiting the exportation of rye, which cut off an important source of Germany's food supply. The German legation has been making inquiries recently at Chicago and other grain centers as to what the United States could do in making good the deficiency. This country has been sending Germany 29,000,000 to 30,000,000 bushels; now it wants 50,000,000 bushels. Secretary Rusk has had a pet notion that if the Europeans understood fully the nutritious quality of the Indian corn or maize grown in the United States they would draw largely on it to make up for the frequent failure of their wheat crop. So the attention of the German government was turned to corn as well as to rye and wheat. All these matters were discussed in the negotiations for the removal of the pork embargo, and the suggestion that the kaiser's subjects would be pleased to get American grain on more favorable terms was well received, especially as a large element in the empire was clamoring for it. The outcome was the arrangement which is soon to be proclaimed at Berlin.

WAVES ROLLED WILDLY.

A Rare Sight Witnessed by Visitors at Asbury Park, N. J.—They Are Treated to a View of a Monster Waterspout 300 Feet in Height.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Sept. 7.—The visitors who journeyed to the beach Saturday to watch the unusually heavy sea were treated to a sight rarely witnessed near shore. About 9 o'clock the wind was blowing furiously from the northeast. Suddenly the sea, at a spot near the shore, was unusually agitated, and as the eyes of all were directed to the spot a huge waterspout formed and began moving seaward in a southeasterly direction. The volume of water was balloon-shaped and was fully 300 feet high. There was no vessel in its track, but Tyler Emmons, a fisherman, narrowly escaped being caught by the mountain of water. He saw it approaching and pulled his boat out of the way of the swirling column, which passed within 100 yards of him. The waterspout left in its wake a broad track of foaming water and the incoming breakers rolled mountain high for half an hour after the spout disappeared.

The bluff at Long Branch has been eaten away in many places and bulkheads badly scattered, especially in front of the Octagon hotel, by a high sea and heavy wind. At Sea Bright the Highland Beach railroad tracks are inundated. In this village streets are washed out, while in the lowlands near here the first floors of dwelling houses are flooded.

FELL FROM THE CLOUDS.

Fearful Plunge of a Plucky Female Aeronaut at Peoria, Ill.

PEORIA, Ill., Sept. 7.—Another aeronaut fell in Peoria lake Sunday. This time it was Mme. Kiefer, wife of the man who fell in the lake a week ago. Mme. Kiefer made the ascension under protest, as a strong wind was blowing over the lake. The plucky little woman sailed away, and when at the height of 5,000 feet cut her parachute loose and dropped. She had counted on reaching the Tazewell shore, but the parachute did not open soon enough and she fell into the lake. The immense crowd on the shore was horrified to see her sink with the big parachute settling over her. Anticipating a repetition of last Sunday's accident, boats were in waiting and the woman was fished out. She still clung to the trapeze bar, but was unconscious. She has not regained consciousness.

A WIDOWED QUEEN.

Prince Dominis, Husband of Liliuokalani, the Sovereign of the Hawaiian Islands, Dead.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 7.—Hon. John Dominis, prince consort of Hawaii, died August 3 from a sudden attack of pneumonia. He had been ill some time with gout, which turned into inflammatory rheumatism. Pneumonia subsequently set in. Queen Liliuokalani was much affected by the death of her husband. The remains were lying in state at the palace when the steamer Mariposa left, August 29, guarded by Capt. Howlein and forty men from the royal barracks. Prince Dominis was born in Schenectady, N. Y., May 10, 1832. His father was an Italian and his mother an American lady of Boston. He was taken to Hawaii when a child. He came to California in 1849 during the gold excitement and spent some time here. He was married to the present queen of Hawaii some years ago.

Holding Their Wheat.

PORTLAND, Ore., Sept. 7.—Hundreds of farmers in eastern Oregon and eastern Washington are holding their wheat under orders from the alliance until spring in hope of getting better prices. The highest price paid in the northwest for wheat this season was seventy-five cents per bushel. This was at Walla Walla three weeks ago. Since then prices have declined from five to eight cents per bushel. It is believed that values will go up before long. Oregon and Washington will have about 35,000,000 bushels for export this year, and the bulk of it will come to Portland for shipment.

Bad Failure at Pittsburgh.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Sept. 7.—James A. Chambers, glass manufacturer, made an assignment Saturday to Maj. W. G. McCandless as assignee. The assignment was precipitated by his partner, H. Sellers McKee (to whom Chambers was indebted in the sum of about $200,000, and for which he held collateral securities), refusing to join with the other creditors in granting Mr. Chambers an extension. Mr. Chambers' liabilities aggregate about $650,000, as far as heard from. It is possible that they will reach nearly $1,000,000.

A QUEER DUEL.

Two Gotham Clubmen Settle an Affair of Honor with a Game of Pool.

"You're a liar, sir!"

The cold, rather unpleasant voice of Frederick Rowelstone Varick echoed through the lounging-room of an aristocratic metropolitan club, and his words caused several men to jump to their feet in dismay. Such language as he had used was seldom heard in that resort of those who claimed to be American gentlemen. Previous to Varick's startling exclamation there had been various groups in the room, gossiping, smoking, drinking after-dinner liquors and indulging in that inspiring sociability that is so often found among clubmen when their families have left the city for the summer. The discordant words that are quoted above destroyed on the instant this feast of reason and flow of soul, and, as if under orders, every man present hastened toward the corner where Varick was seated. The man to whom the latter's accusation had been hurled was a handsome youth, whose face, as he gazed at Varick, was ghastly pale. His name was Norman Manderson. He was very popular in the club, and, as the crowd surrounded the small table across which the contestants glared at each other, it was evident to a close observer that he had more friends than his antagonist, a man his elder by some years. Suddenly Manderson arose. He was fully six feet in height, and the rage which inspired his soul made him seem even taller. Leaning forward he slapped Varick on the cheek.

An hour later the preliminaries of the duel had been arranged. It had leaked out that Manderson had spoken disrespectfully of a certain woman well known in New York society. Varick had resented this and had dubbed his young companion a liar. The respective friends of the two wranglers had decided that, in spite of law and custom, a duel was necessary to wipe out the insult given and returned. Now it happened that Manderson and Varick were the best pool players in the club. In the tournament of that year they had tied for first place, and their reputation as wielders of the cue was on a par. Their seconds had, therefore, decided that they should play three games of pool, and that the loser thereof should be under obligations to commit suicide. You can well imagine the excitement that prevailed among the onlookers as the duelists grasped their cues and prepared to fight with the ivory balls for the high stakes of life and death. The pool room that night presented a most striking spectacle. Therein were gathered the jeunesse dorce of the new world's metropolis. Pale with excitement, speechless with the enormity of the stake, they watched the game as its varying fortunes indicated first the death of one of the contestants, then the other. Varick won the throw, and Manderson broke the balls. A suppressed sigh of disappointment echoed through the room as he failed to score. Then the elder man, with a smile of exultation on his face, proceeded to pocket five balls. He missed an easily-accomplished ball on his sixth trial, and his opponent, cooler than his friends supposed he would be, succeeded in tieing his rival. From that time on the first game was nip and tuck, as the old saying is. Finally one ball remained upon the baize. He who pocketed the sphere would win the game. Manderson made a brilliant shot, but missed the reward by the smallest fraction of an inch. Varick, who found the object ball straight in front of a pocket, had no difficulty in winning the game. Manderson grew paler yet, but smiled as his friends throaged around him wringing his hands and urged him to keep up the fight to the end.

"Ready," cried the scorer, after he had placed the balls in their pyramidical form. The second game began with a coup by Varick that was without result. Then Manderson began a brilliant exhibition of skill that netted him seven balls and seemed to leave him a certain winner of the game. But he was not to have a walk-over. When Varick finally missed a shot only two balls remained upon the cloth.

"One hundred even that Varick wins," remarked a friend of the elder duelist, anxious to injure the nerves of Manderson.

"I take you," came in a chorus from the crowd, and just at that moment the handsome youth pocketed a ball by a brilliant stroke and the game was his.

Thus was it that the duel, so far as it had gone, had resulted in a tie. The third game opened amid breathless silence. Manderson's "break" was sensational and he pocketed two balls at one stroke. By most unwarrantable carelessness he missed an easy shot and retired. Varick, still wearing his quiet, self-confident smile, played brilliantly for a few moments and pocketed four balls.

"I wouldn't give a dollar for Manderson's life," whispered a youth, stroking his blonde mustache complacently.

"Bet you five dollars to ten dollars he wins," said an older man, who had been watching the play closely.

"Take you," answered the blonde, putting up his money in rather a supercilious way.

The game, upon which hung life and death, now stood two balls for Manderson and four for Varick. The former, who seemed to be out of form, again lost an opportunity to tie the game and resigned the table to his adversary after capturing only one ball and missing a shot that could have been made by a novice. The excitement had become oppressive. Not a sound was heard in the room save the tick of the ivories and the jingling of coins as the onlookers make the bets.

Varick pocketed three balls and retired after a brilliant bank shot that was so nearly successful as to increase the pallor on Manderson's face and shock the nerves of those who had bet on the younger man. Manderson had three balls in the rack; his opponent needed one to win. As though he had gained a victory over himself the youth approached the table, banked the only ball in sight, and went on from one grand coup to another until the pockets held all the balls his opponent had left.

"Manderson wins," cried the crowd, and for a time the interchange of money told how heavy the wagering had been.

Suddenly from a distant bed-room came the report of a pistol shot.

Kindly Done.

It was a very cold morning in the month of March, in the great city of Chicago, writes a youthful contributor. A little old man stood on the corner of Clark and Randolph streets selling newpapers. He was very thinly cald and kept trotting up and down, trying hard to keep warm. His voice was hoarse from cold, and passers-by could hardly hear him shout. Some rude boys jeered and laughed at him; but one, about thirteen years old, rather better dressed than the rest, after looking at him for a few moments walked up to him and said, "Shall I shout for you?" The old man thought the boy was making fun of him and told him to "be off," but the boy began to call out, "Morning News, Times or Herald," in a clear, shrill voice, which attracted so many customers that in a little while the old man had sold all his stock. He offered to divide the profits with his youthful partner, but the boy would take nothing, and went off with a smiling face.—Youth's Companion.

NO, MOTHER ISN'T HANDSOME.

No, mother isn't handsome—that is, in form and features—
Because she's stooped and wrinkled up and toothless and so gray;
She never was cut out to shine with dazzlin' band-box creatures,
Just gotten up, expressly, for a milliner's display.

O, no, she isn't handsome, just kind o' glancin' at her,
Because her cheeks are sunken, and she's angular and lean;
Her hands are brown and skinny, still to me those things don't matter,
I bow to her and love her as no subject can his queen.

Not handsome, but a beauty is in her soul a-beamin',
That shines through and illuminates her wrinkled, sun-browned face,
And from her very bein' a goodness seems a-streamin'
And foldin' round and brightnin' the quiet old home place.

With words of balm of Gilead a drippin' from their lips,
And whose herb tea the fev'rish head that's achin' and a swimmin',
Can ease without the doctor makin' his expensive trips.

A doin' all the housework for years, she hain't as nimble
As folks that never do a thing but play and read and rock;
But yet she does the cookin', uses scissors, thread and thimble,
And makes her needles jingle when she heels or toes a sock.

A person, just to see her, I s'pose would hardly take her
To be more than the av'rage run, but know her as I do,
I'll bet you when she leaves us, the one she serves will make her
The handsomest of angels and the leader of 'em, too.

JACK AND JILL.

[WRITTEN FOR THIS PAPER.]

EITHER by some farsighted maneuver of fate or else through some fault or fortune of their own, Jack Townsend and Jill Parker fell in love with each other; I am inclined to the latter idea.

They were introduced; they were both young, both heart free, both as attractive as the average, and their two names, Jack and Jill, flashed through their respective minds, coupled with the thought of a certain future possibility. Afterwards, exchanging loving confidences, each declared that they had fallen in love at first sight.

The natural consequence followed. They were married and then went to live in the city where Jack was a bookkeeper in a mercantile house. Jack had a room in a comfortable lodging house, and there he took Jill, not being able yet to provide a house for her. She had breakfast and luncheon in her room, going out somewhere for dinner with Jack in the evening, and was as happy a bride as ever found the task of loving, honoring and obeying an easy one. The title "Mrs. Townsend" had a remarkably sweet and uncommon sound to her ears, and partly unconsciously, and a good deal with a pleased consciousness of it, the state of matrimony imbued her with a great sense of dignity and importance which Jack laughed at, and loved her more for in the same breath.

In fact he did love her very much indeed. He was young and ardent, and to him Jill was the embodiment of everything that was sweet and womanly and lovable, and the fact that he had come to be the lawful owner and master of her was a source of wonder as well as delight to him.

And on her part Jill liked this being owned and mastered, more particularly as, with all his mastering, Jack petted and babied her to her heart's content, and let her have her own way in most things.

So for a few months Jill was profoundly happy, and from the heights to which she had attained felt a sort of divine pity for girls who had no husbands; at the end of that time she began to wonder if marriage wasn't a failure, and to feel a less divine, though more real and substantial pity for herself.

Jack was so different. He read newspapers now in the evening instead of holding her on his knee and talking to, and caressing her. And he had joined a lodge which Jill would have it was a club, and which kept him out one evening each week. And then he didn't always notice if she had on a new neck ribbon any more, or if her hair was arranged differently, and sometimes he even spoke to her just in a commonplace tone like he would to anybody. In fact Mrs. Jill had no end of grievances, and Jack often found her dissolved in tears, or at least, if not exactly in that liquid state, with red eyes and a suspiciously swollen nasal appendage.

"You don't love me any more," she sobbed to him one day. "You read newspapers and go to clubs and don't be kind to me, and I wish I wasn't marrried to you, and"—

"'Tis very unfortunate," interrupted Jack. He had rather a bad temper and a good deal of pride, and this speech of Jill roused both. But he repented the next minute.

"Try to be reasonable, Jill," he said. "I do love you as much as ever, and I am doing all I can for you, possibly. I joined that lodge—it is not a club, nothing like one—simply to make provision for you in case I should die before I have anything else to leave you. I am very busy, and the evening is the only time I have to read the papers; and then, Jill, you ought to know that the honeymoon can't last always, and that when two people have been married as long as we have they naturally become more quiet and undemonstrative in their affection. But I love you just as well, better if anything, and so won't you try to look at things in their right light, and not be tearful and complaining any more?"

"Ye-es," said Jill, but it was a very sad, sober sort of a yes, and long after Jack was asleep that night the poor little wife cried some really bitter tears into her pillow because she could never be a petted bride any more, but was just a plain, common, married woman like anyone else.

After awhile fresh trouble came. The house for which Jack worked failed, and he lost his position and was obliged to take a less remunerative one. He worked hard, coming home nights after their usual dinner hour, tired and discouraged; and, getting no help nor sympathy from Jill, grew moody and fretful, and the climax of it all was reached when he found their room empty one night with this note from Jill lying on the table:

"DEAR JACK:—I've thought and thought, and now I'm awfully sorry, but I think we made a terrible mistake in marrying each other. You can get a divorce if you want to (I have left you and people can get it for that, can't they?) and I want to be free like I used to. Then I was such a burden to you; when you don't have me to take care of, too, you needn't work so hard, and can have more pleasure. I have got a place to sew at the —— hotel, and there are some girls there, and I have taken my own name, and I just have to sew towels and napkins and things. But I love you yet. JILL."

Jack read the note through, smiled rather grimly, then crammed his hat down on his head and went out to his dinner; read the paper awhile moodily when he got back, blew out the light and went to bed. The next morning he told their landlady that Mrs. Townsend had gone to visit relatives in the country, and went out to his work miserable and heartsick, but determined to let Jill have her own way "as she always has in everything," he thought, bitterly.

Meanwhile a certain sewing machine was running rather wearily. It was so much nicer to lounge in bed with a box of chocolates and a novel, or just to close one's eyes and think about Jack. It was hard work sewing all day.

"JACK, I'VE COME BACK TO YOU."

But the girls in the linen room at the —— hotel were very kind to Jill, and made much of her, and, seeing she was delicate and not used to work, helped her with her hemming when the woman in charge was out of the room. So after a day or two Jill began to be contented, and almost forgot about Jack. Here at least she was appreciated, if only by sewing girls.

But on Saturday afternoon the machine ran harder than ever. Jack was always kind to her on Sundays. They went to some nice place and had ice cream, and Jill doted on ice cream; and sometimes they went out to the park and sailed on the lake and heard the music. Jack looked so handsome with his shiny silk hat and brown kid gloves, and she—Jill—always left one of her gloves off so people could see her wedding ring, and know that she belonged to Jack; but now there wasn't any wedding ring. (She had hid it in the very bottom of Jack's collar box when she left him), and he would go to the park alone, and she wouldn't be with him, and he would eat all the ice cream, and that sewing machine did go unconscionably hard!

Mr. Townsend came home from his work that night tired out and discouraged, and, opening the door of his room, faced Jill, who was holding out two eager, shaky hands to him, and saying in a choking kind of voice, trying hard to get it all out before the tears and sobs which were clamoring for audience should rise up in a body and silence her:

"Jack, I've come back to you, and please I want to be reasonable, and look at things in the right kind of light, and you can go to lodges and read newspapers; and you needn't be demonstrative any more. I was so tired—I wanted you—and—Jack!"

The tears had an undisputed right to the floor by this time, by reason of their overwhelming majority, but that portion of Jack's coat directly over his heart absorbed them.

VIRGINIA M. HAYWARD.

Just Like a Man.

"Well, madam," says the head of the house, who had apparently got out of bed on the wrong side, "what have you got for breakfast this morning? Boiled eggs, eh? Seems to me you never have anything but boiled eggs. Boiled Erebus! And what else, madam, may I ask?"

"Mutton chops, my dear," says the wife, meekly.

"Mutton chops!" echoes the husband, bursting into a peal of sardonic laughter. "Mutton chops! I could have guessed it. By the living jingo, madam, if I ever eat another meal inside of this house—" and jamming on his hat and slamming the door the aggrieved man bounds down the stairs and betakes himself to the restaurant.

"What'll you have, sir?" says the waiter, politely handing him the bill of fare.

"Ah!" says the guest, having glanced over it. "Let me see! Bring me two boiled eggs and a mutton chop."—Jury.

A Laborious Toilet.

OVERDONE CLEVERNESS.

An Uncomfortable State for a Person to Get Into.

There are some very clever people who are in a continual state of alarm lest they should not fully perceive the hidden springs of their neighbors' actions. They seem always afraid somebody is going to overreach them. They refuse to believe in frankness. In their eyes it covers deepest duplicity. What lies on the surface, they think, is for ordinary stupid people to accept.

"Ah," they nod, shrewdly, "we are not so silly as you would like us to be. We see further through the millstones than other folks. We perfectly understand that you are friendly because you hate us, and look pleased because you are secretly planning to get the better of us. We are not to be fooled by any such shallow pretences."

They are so earnestly engaged in digging deep under the actions of simple-minded people to discover their motives that they never find them, and are constantly blind to what directly lies before their eyes.

Now this may be because at heart they really are never quite confident of their own superiority, or because being conscious of insincerity themselves, they can not understand sincerity in anyone else. Either supposition is unflattering to these clever ones; and as they are often people of really clever parts, it seems a pity they should give themselves such needless anxiety about matters which lie in such plain sight they are not able to see them.

It probably takes a certain amount of sincerity in one's self to believe in the sincerity of other people. But it must be uncomfortable to be so shrewd that you are afraid some one will arise smarter than you are.—Saturday Evening Herald.

A CLOSE OBSERVER.

One Phenomenon Which a Friend Had no Difficulty in Explaining.

"Did you ever notice," said a man who has the reputation of being a close observer, "how the moving features of the street change?"

Some one remarked that moving features were necessarily undergoing a constant change.

"You don't understand me," replied the close observer. "I will explain. Some days I meet a certain class of cripples. They come along almost in a stream, and they bear a strange resemblance to one another. The next day not a cripple is to be seen—for it is hunchback season. All day the hunchbacks amble along. The next day it is something else. Some days the collectors of long-standing bills come out, and though they do not act by any agreement, they file into my office almost in a procession. I don't understand it."

"One part of it is easily enough understood," one of the company remarked. "You don't pay your debts."

"Well, well," said the close observer, "I hadn't thought of that, and, of course, I can't, without meditation, give you a direct opinion, but it strikes me that there is much in what you say."—Arkansaw Traveler.

DOMESTIC CONCERNS.

—Baked Tomatoes: Wash five or six smooth tomatoes, cut a small piece from the stem end and put a little salt, pepper and a piece of butter the size of a nutmeg in each. Place them in a dish, and bake in a moderate oven for almost an hour, and serve them hot.—Boston Herald.

—Tomato Sandwiches: Slice some ripe tomatoes and pour over them a very little vinegar and oil and sprinkle lightly with pepper. Prepare bread and butter for the sandwiches, and lay the tomato slices between the slices of bread. Thin slices of cucumbers may be added with advantage.—N. Y. World.

—Artificial coral may be made of four parts of yellow resin and one part vermilion, melted together. Twigs, cinders or stones dipped in this assume the appearance of coral and are applicable to grotto or fancy work as a substitute for that costly material. Or wrap wire with candlewick, twist into the shape of coral branches and dip into the resin.—Detroit Free Press.

—Fruit Cake: One cup of molasses, one cup of brown sugar, one cup of shortening, two eggs, two teaspoonfuls of soda, three cups of flour, two cups of dried apples (before soaking). Beat and stir in one egg, and add raisins and spices to suit. Soak the apples over night. In the morning put in molasses and sugar, boiling down until quite thick.—Detroit Free Press.

—Chocolate Cream Filling: Mix together (dry) a quarter of a cake of chocolate (grated), half of a level tablespoonful of sifted flour, three tablespoonfuls of granulated sugar, and a pinch of salt. Set one and a half teacupfuls of milk on to cook, and, when boiling briskly, stir in the mixed ingredients, allowing them a few moments to cook. When the chocolate is thoroughly melted, remove from the fire and add a teaspoonful of vanilla. It will thicken to a cream when cool. There will be sufficient for three layers.—Good Housekeeping.

—White Mountain Rolls: Four cups of flour, one cup of milk, one-quarter cup of butter, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, one-third cake of compressed yeast, half teaspoonful of salt, white of one egg, beaten stiff. Have the milk warm. Add the butter melted, warm but not hot, salt, sugar, yeast and the flour. Mix well; then the white of the egg, the last thoroughly mixed in with the hand. Let them rise over night. In the morning roll into shape, cut and roll over or make in any other form. Bake in a quick oven after they have stood one hour.—Boston Budget.

—Scotch Shortbred: Take three-quarters of a pound of fine flour, half a pound of butter, six ounces of sugar; cream the butter, and add the sugar and flour. When thoroughly mixed turn onto a floured board and roll out quarter of an inch thick, and into a large round or oval shape. Mark it prettily round the edge (I use a key), and lay it upon a baking sheet. Do not butter the paper, but fold it in four to prevent the bread from burning at the bottom. Little bits of candied peel, or candied drops, may be sprinkled over the top for festive occasions. The oven should be rather cool, the shortbread, when baked, a pale, delicate brown.—Detroit Free Press.

Pretty Summer Gowns.

A bright red China silk, at fifty cents, made with a full front and sides and a fan back, with a tiny row of black gimp heading the hem. Basque, having a pointed back and round front, with Medici collar and a girdle of black cord. High coat sleeves. Striped wash silks are picked up at the close of the season for fifty to sixty cents, that have been seventy-five to eighty-nine cents. One of blue and beige stripes is selected for a pretty home gown for the fall. The skirt has a blue velvet border, headed with a half-inch band of gilt galloon. The bodice has a yoke and corselet of velvet, edged with gilt; and the high sleeves have two rows on the wrists. Striped woolen goods are now picked up in short dress lengths for a skirt and sleeves; and a basque, of plain material, trimmed with silk gimp, worn. A lavender cashmere, trimmed with a flounce of lace on the bodice edge and wrists, and a narrow jet heading will make a dainty home gown for a blonde.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Hot Water for Wounds.

It is a fact not generally known, even to good nurses, that one of the greatest reliefs to the intense and agonizing pain from a wound is to place as nearly as possible to the wound (but being extremely careful not to touch it) a rubber bag, filled with water at the boiling point. Its effect is as quieting as an opiate, and it has no bad effects which an opiate always has. Care must be taken that the bag be new and strong, not too full, and that the top is screwed on tight. To scald the patient might be fatal, and certainly would be torture. Never use for such applications of very hot water anything except a rubber bottle, for glass and even stone bottles are not only liable to break but to become uncorked.—American Agriculturist.

Omelet With Tomatoes.

Break five eggs into a kitchen basin, and give them twelve vigorous beats with a spoon. Put into a frying-pan, butter the size of an egg, and when it begins to boil pour in the eggs. With a spoon draw up the whitened egg from the bottom, so that all the eggs may be equally cooked, or whitened to a soft creamy substance. Place in the center three or four whole tomatoes which have been boiled a few minutes previously and seasoned. Shake the omelet a little on one side and turn with a spoon half of one side over the other, allow it to remain a moment and toss it on a warm platter. When the omelet is turned of course the tomatoes will be quite enveloped. Serve with tomato-sauce poured around it.—Practical Cooking and Dinner Giving.

A Modish Jacket.

Navy blue and gilt continues to be a favorite combination. A modish jacket is of navy blue vicuna cloth, bound with silk braid of the same shade and ornamented with gilt buttons. The skirt of the jacket is cut in round tabs. The stomacher is of fine blue cloth closely wrought in the same way. The full shirred front is of navy blue silk. The hat worn with this jacket is particularly stylish. It shows the small crown and medium flaring brim which promises to be a favorite shape during the coming fall.—Chicago Post.

MARCH OF CIVILIZATION.

A large, strong man dressed in a uniform, and armed to the teeth, knocks at the door of a hut on the coast of Africa.

"Who are you, and what do you want?" asks a voice from the inside.

"In the name of civilization open your door, or I'll break it down for you and fill you full of lead."

"But what do you want here?"

"My name is Christian Civilization. Don't talk like a fool, you black brute. What do you suppose I want here but to civilize you, and make a reasonable human being out of you if it is possible."

"What are you going to do?"

"In the first place, you must dress yourself like a white man. It's a shame and a disgrace the way you go about. From now on you must wear underclothing, a pair of pants, vest, coat, plug hat and a pair of yellow gloves. I will furnish them to you at a reasonable price."

"What shall I do with them?"

"Wear them, of course. You didn't expect to eat them, did you? The first step of civilization is to wear proper clothes."

"But it is too hot to wear such garments. I'm not used to them. I'll perish from the heat. Do you want to murder me?"

"Well, if you die you will have the satisfaction of being a martyr to civilization."

"You are very kind."

"Don't mention it. What do you do for a living anyhow?"

"When I am hungry I eat a banana. I eat, drink or sleep just as I feel like it."

"What horrible barbarity! You must settle down to some occupation, my friend. If you don't I'll have to lock you up as a vagrant."

"If I've got to follow up some occupation, I think I'll start a coffee-house. I've got a good deal of coffee and sugar on hand."

"Oh, you have, have you? Why, you are not such a hopeless case as I thought you were. In the first place, you want to pay me fifty dollars."

"What for?"

"An occupation tax, you innocent heathen. Do you expect to get all the blessings of civilization for nothing?"

"But I haven't got any money."

"That makes no difference. I'll take it out in sugar and coffee. If you don't pay I'll put you in jail."

"What is a jail?"

"Jail is a progressive word. You must be prepared to make sacrifices for civilization, you know."

"What a great thing civilization is!"

"You can not possibly realize the benefits, but you will before I get through with you."

The unfortunate native took to the woods and has not been seen since.—From the German.

TAR AND FEATHERS.

Their Use in the Punishment of Public Offenders.

An ancient fable preserves an incident of a dame who, wishing to punish a cure, a provost and a forester for persecuting her with their dishonorable suits, made appointments with them to visit her, and then contrived that they should be stripped and thrown into a cask full of feathers, whence they were hunted by her husband, with all the dogs and inhabitants of the village at their heels. In England this penalty was introduced for a different offense in 1189, when Richard I., before setting out for the Holy Land, ordained, in order to preserve the discipline of his fleet, that whosoever should be convicted of theft should first have his head shaved; that boiling pitch should then be poured upon it, and a cushion of feathers shaken over it. He was afterward to be put on shore at the first place the ship touched at; though, after a baptism of boiling pitch, the poor wretch, I fancy, would have little life left in him. In modern times the practice has found favor with the populace as a means of readily executing justice on an offender whom the law, perhaps, shows no anxiety to reach.—Gentleman's Magazine.

"German Syrup"

J. C. Davis, Rector of St. James' Episcopal Church, Eufaula, Ala.: "My son has been badly afflicted with a fearful and threatening cough for several months, and after trying several prescriptions from physicians which failed to relieve him, he has been perfectly restored by the use of two bottles of Boschee's German Syrup. I can recommend it without hesitation." Chronic severe, deep-seated coughs like this are as severe tests as a remedy can be subjected to. It is for these long-standing cases that Boschee's German Syrup is made a specialty. Many others afflicted as this lad was, will do well to make a note of this.

—Union Services will be held at the Presbyterian Church at 7:30 P M on Sunday next. All are invited

—Thomas Rader and family moved on Tuesday, to Dassel. Mr. R's father, Washington Rader and family expect to occupy the house in about two weeeks.

—That follower of McKinley, C. W. Ingerson, was seen driving a fine hog to market, on Friday. Perhaps he has heard that the German's are again going to have American pork as a part of their menu.

—Hogs are in demand more than for a long time. Several car loads have been shipped from here, recently. The Germans have removed their restrictions thereby opening up a market for barrels of pork. And the gay and festive swine can now be among the pessengers for the Fatherland, while Minnesota farmers help pocket the proceeds.

—From the Eagle's article on the big Minneapolis Elevator's mode of doing business we infer that the Delano Elevator Co., of which the editor of the Eagle is a part has met with a loss of about $80. Mrs. Z. was not hurt but Mr. Z. was bruised about the shoulders and considerably shaken up. The horse did not get away and they were able to continue their journey home.

—C. W. Ingersen thinks his old reliable horse must have become insane as for the past fifteen years he has been the family carriage horse and a very gentle, well behaved animal and within a few weeks past he has developed into a first class kicker, to such an extent as to make his old driver prefer walking to town, or riding with one of the neighboring young ladies, who chances to come along just as the dashboard has been demolished and the shafts disabled, as on last Thursday evening Too much oats Mr. I, too much oats.

—Joker Joe has been industriously engaged this week, after his success with Squire Dorman at Greenwood, he seems to have grown more bold, and nearly succeeded in precipitating a direful calamity upon the head of the Eagle editor. But some of his companions tell that he met his match the other evening when he tried an old game of his, to borrow change from the bystanders and spend the money before their eyes and not pay back, upon a lady from Twincite, who in order to balance accounts succeeded in gaining possession of his watch and making him fork over the arrearage and treat the crowd to the tune of an additional $1. A dollar a joke is cheap sometimes.

—On Friday afternoon, Tony Matter, an old settler here went into his pasture to catch a horse and not returning his wife went in search of him, and found him suffering from a kick in the abdomen, by one of the horses. He was assisted to the house and medical aid summoned. After suffering for about twenty-four hours, he died. The funeral took place from the Catholic church, on Monday, and was one of the largest held here. Twenty-four old soldiers and about as many of the St. Anthony Benevolent Society were in line and paid their respects to their departed comrade by accompanying the remains to the Catholic cemetery. A long line of teams filled with relatives, friends and acquaintances were, also, a part of the procession. Mr. Matter leaves a wife, and an adopted son to mourn his sudden death, and who with his brothers Joseph and Philip have the sympathy of the entire community.

—Some of our neighbors haye been having considerable trouble about some chickens. R. M. Bohn had Squire Billings issue a warrant for Hiram Dyer, in whose chickencoop he claimed a white Plymouth Rock rooster and a black pullet belonging to him had been for a long time confined, and that on asking Mr. Dyer to release them he was met with abusive language and was glad to get out of Mr. D's shop, and that then he had the papers issued charging Mr. Dyer with stealing them. The case was tried yesterday before Squire Billings and a jury of twelve men, Mr. Bohn in the absence of the County Atterney who, in answer to a telegram had sent word that he would not be here conducted the prosecution while M. A. O'Hair had charge of the defense. The verdict of the jury was favorable to the defense. Some $36.00 costs were taxed up to the complaining witness, the jury and the prisoner was discharged.

—Mr. John Nicklin, of Winona who with his family visited his sister Mrs. C. Ball and family of this place the past week was a Gazette caller on Weduesday evening. Mr. N. is a straight out Republican but has some pronounced views of his own on the pension business. He informs us that he has investigated the matter and believes that over one third the millions appropriated for and charged up to pensions, never reaches the old veterans who fought their country's battles, but gets switched off into the hands of clerks and officials who for a few hours work get good salaries. He does not favor large pensions to individuals and their wives while others have but a few dollars where they are in actual need. He went to St. Paul on Thursday morning to be present at the re-union of the 1st Minnesota Battery, of which he informs us but 10 old veterans that went in at first are to be found alive now. He never tires of recounting the wonderful exoloits of his old battery and the value it was to the cause of the Union, on many occasions, as at Vicksburg, Kenesaw Mountain, and Chattanooga. The late William Fenkner, and one of the Eppel brothers were members of this battery.

EDITOR GAZETTE.—Seeing in the Delano EAGLE for yesterday that I have commenced a foolish action against Hiram Dyer, I shall try to correct the Eagle some, when it talks about tomfoolery. Although I lost the case at present, the chicken case is not altogether settled yet, and I think it altogether to hurry matters for you to express your opinion in the way as you do. Why don't you try to find out fact about a case before you go to publish as such important matter, or else wait until the case be decided, as it was, in the adjoining room of Simon Weldelee's saloon and then look up the law and reflect, if a decision of law in such a place is legal or not impeachable. Boldness is good enough at times, but I think the editor or sub-editor of the EAGLE would do a good deal better if he try to find out and report common news than trying to publish uncertainties and show spite work.

Respectfully,
R. M. BOHN.

Teacher's Examination.

The Fall Series of Teachers' Public Examinations for Wright County will be held as follows;

At Howard Lake, Monday, Sept. 14, 1891.
At Delano, Tuesday, Sept. 15th, 1891.
At Buffalo, Wednesday, Sept. 16, 1891.
At Monticello, Thursday, Sept. 17, 1891.

The examination will occur at each place in the school building, and open promptly at 8:30 a. m.

County Cullings.

Attorney at law, C. A. Pidgeon of Buffalo has two young pidgeons, twin boys.

Be sure to attend the Wright County Fair at Howard Lake this week and take along something to exhibit.

So long as Democles' sword hangs over the head of the editor-in-chief of the EAGLE, in shape of William Ziebarth's threat to sue him for libel again, we may expect to have a rest from the usual tirade against some of the prominent officials of our county in ancient times, when he himself was a public purfunctory and fed on the fees of a county office. We are apt to hear little about the "steals," and "wrong doings" of those days while the keen blade hangs so threateningly. If it is to improve the editorials of that paper perhaps it would be as well to let her hang. Let her hang, "King William," let her hang.

The EAGLE has again alluded to our name. She might as well keep quiet. The BUFFALO GAZETTE is one Delano institution she is not running. If she is so very anxious that a Delano paper change its name we will admit that in order to keep up the record it is about time, and since she has been so prompt with her suggestions we would suggest that as she is so used to changing politics, names and so on that perhaps as she is already known among several within the radius of her weekly flight it would not hurt her much to wear on her crown "The Buzzard." She needn't make this change for our convenience at all, but just to satisfy her motherly instincts and keep up the record.

Fair Notes.

EDITOR GAZETTE:—There is just one matter to which I should like to call the attention of the public this week in connection with our County Fair.

We are very desirous that our record of Old Settler's and Grand Army men shall be as complete as possible. For if our County Fair is a success, and the society out of debt as we believe it will be, these records if published in pamphlet form and prefaced by the addresses of Judge Rea and Col. Stevens would interest the whole county. The preservation of such a memorial in the archives of the Historical Society of St. Paul and other institutions of a similar kind will some day acquire an especial value when the late war has faded into the the remote past. And so we do not wish to lose a single name from the roll of honor, and remember that these records will be there for signature during the four days of the Fair.

There will be an unusually large number of fast horses partieipating in the races.

* * *

Acting on a suggestion of the EAGLE, the society will issue a diploma and probably a premium to the farmer who has the best yield of wheat both as to quality and quantity in Wright county, the yield based on an average per acre from not less than a ten acre field. A sample of the wheat to be on exhibition and the amount threshed, etc., to be signed by the measurer or the owner of the thresher. In order to avoid any dispute in regard to the size of the field, an independent estimate of the number of acres should be signed by one or two competent and disinterested men, perhaps by the threshers.

H. TANNER, Sec'y.

A Pointer For Parents.

There are a number of young girls here going to destruction at a pace that kills. They are not yet old enough to be young women, but they are old enough to be wayward, wilful, disobedient and entirely forgetful of duty due to parents and the community. Clandestine meetings, stolen buggy rides, street flirtations and all that sort of thing have but one end. The end is ruin. Right or wrong the crop of wild oats for a young woman is never condoned. If some parents would pay a little more attention to their daughters a great deal of trouble might be avoided but unless they do the result will be inevitable. Plain is it? Well, better brief words plainly spoken, if thereby one life be saved from wreck and one happy home guided around the abyss of everlasting sorrow.—Red Wing Advanced Sun.—Wright County Times.

School Supplies.

We would most respectfully call the attention of Teachers, Parents and Pupils to our stock of Examination Paper, Tablets, Composition books, Legal Cap, Note, Envelopes, Slates, Pens, Pencils, Etc., Latest Varieties.

ME AND UNCLE JERRY.

I am Cloud-compelling Dryenforth, a mighty able wight;
I can call the clouds together with a load of dynamite;
I can dally with the cyclone, I can monkey with the gale.
I can fertilize the prairie where another man must fail;
I can swell the gentle brooklet to a roaring mountain stream,
I tell you, Me and Jerry are a pretty brilliant team!

Old Graece-Roman Jupiter, with his nickel-plated bolt,
Must now betake himself westward and proclaim himself a dolt;
His prehistoric methods have been proved to be so tame,
That with Cloud-compelling Dyrenforth he is not in the game;
For it must now be acknowledged, when it comes to dynamite,
That Me and Uncle Jerry are entirely out of sight!

I can take a pound of rackarock and tie it to a kite,
And make a thunder shower on a clear and starry night;
I can cause a rainy season, I can juggle a sinmoon,
I'll soon begin to change the tides by toying with the moon;
I can make a heavy hailstorm in a quarter of a minute,
I tell you, Me and Jerry are the two lads that are in it!

The secret of my scheming, if you really want to know
(But don't let Uncle Jerry know 'twas I who told you so!)
Is this: I'm now in business with some umbrella firms
Who pay me for my rain storms the most liberal of terms.
And thus the only way for me to realize a gain
Is to blow up tons of rackarock and make the heavens rain!

INEQUALITY IN THE SENATE.

An Interesting Computation Showing It Is an Unrepresentative Body.

The Detroit Free Press is dissatisfied with the United States Senate. It says that it has been decreasing in popular favor and deteriorating in the character of its membership, and has become a body representative of nothing but inequality. The Free Press says:

The senate is not and cannot be representative of the people of the United States, for they do not control it. It is possible for less than one-fifth of the people of the United States to dominate the senate. The senate is known not to be responsive to the will of the people and is not responsible to them. Ten states of the Union, containing more than half the population of the United States (exclusive of the territories), have but twenty of the eighty-eight senators. Ten other states, containing in all less than one-thirtieth of the population of the United States, have twenty senators. This frightful inequality is demonstrated by the following tables, showing the largest and the smallest ten states of the Union:

	PEOPLE.		PEOPLE.
New York	5,997,853	Rhode Island	345,506

—The county comissioners and the supervisors of the towns of Franklin and Rockford met on Saturday and accepted the new iron bridge lately built across the north fork of Crow river at the site of the old Ruckoldt bridge. The approaches have been let on contract for $20, and are to be completed for travel by the end of this week. Iron bridges seem to have been growing cheap quite rapidly since the first ones in the town of Frankfort were constructed in the following ratio:

Year.	Length ft.	Cost.	Cost per linear ft.
1885.	345	$19500	$56.52
1887.	300	8000	26.66
1889.	150	4000	26.66
1891.	140	3080	22.00

The bridges built in 1885 were the two Frankfort bridges; in 1887 the Rockford bridge; in 1889 the Delano bridge; 1891 Ruckoldts bridge.

Too Much Wool.

The wool tariff is making trouble for the McKinleyites in Ohio. The only mitigating sop they can find is a claim that the number of sheep has increased about 6 per cent. the past year. Admitting this to be the fact, it is replied that the price has fallen in the same time over 13 per cent., so that the farmer is getting less for his crop. Then, while he gets less for his wool, he must pay more for his woolen clothing, as the tariff adds about 24 per cent. to the protection given the manufacturer of woolens. The task, then, to persuade the Ohio wool grower that he is benefitted by the new tariff becomes too hard for the most expert sophists. The farmer gets less for his wool, and either pays more for his clothing or is compelled to use stuff made of shoddy and cotton. This is but one of the tough passages met in the McKinley system. —St. Paul Globe.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, Sept. 16, 1891.

The administration has through Secretary Tracy and Attorney General Miller, won a diplomatic victory, with which Secretary Blaine will doubtless be very glad that he had nothing to do. They have not only prevented the new Chilian government from demanding damages for the seizure of the steamer Itata, which was chased in the open seas on the strength of their opinions and against Mr. Blaine's advice, but they have prevailed upon the representatives of that government, whom they mercilessly snubbed a few weeks ago, to pay the expenses of the long and foolish trip of the cruiser Charleston, in return for having the case against the Itata of violating our neutrality laws, which able lawyers have said was no case at all, nolle prossed in the courts. This worthy pair of diplomats are said to be proud of this victory, but it is one for which they should really be ashamed. They have simply taken advantage of the desire of a young and weak government to obtain the friendship of an older and stronger government to compel the acceptance of their proposition. Mr. Blaine, with all his faults, would hardly have been guilty of such a trick as that.

Representative Mills has gone to Ohio where he makes his first speech next week. Representative McMillin and Bynum have gone to Chicago, where they are to meet the rest of the missionary party, which is to leave that city next week on its tour to the Pacific coast.

Mr. Harrison will have a republican as well as a democrat to appoint to the interstate commerce commission, as bad health has compelled Judge Cortey to resign.

Representative Catchings, of Mississippi, thinks the circular recently issued calling on the colored laborers of the South to increase their demand for picking this year's cotton crop, is the work of republican mischief makers, whose object is to make trouble between the planters and the laborers. He says the price proposed is excessive and unreasonable, being equal to about one-sixth of the value of the cotton. "The threat of a strike," said Mr. Catchings, "among the farm hands is not a matter to be lightly considered. Cotton is a perishable crop and when it is ripe for picking, the picking must be done promptly or there is a heavy loss."

Secretary Fostor loses no opportunity to boast of their being plenty of money in the treasury to meet all demands, but he doesn't tell how shrewdly he has played his cards to prevent a deficit. Every accounting officer of the treasury was some weeks ago given to understand that the more they delayed accounts which involved the payment of money, the better they would stand with the secretary, and the result is that very little money, aside from pensions and the redemption of the four-and-a-half per cent bonds, is being paid out. Appropriations for public buildings are being held up on every possible excuse in order to let a little money accumulate in the treasury for show purposes. The claim agents are wild over the situation, for they cannot get settlement on claims that have been passed as correct, on account of some quibble which has been raised by some treasury official acting of course under orders from the secretary. It ought not to be difficult for Mr. Foster to accumulate a considerable surplus if the policy of paying out nothing is to continue.

There is one democratic official connected with this administration who has been trying without success ever since the 4th of March, 1889, to retire from office. His name is Moore, and he is third assistant secretary of state, and a remarkably well posted man on international law. He was appointed by Mr. Cleveland, and as soon as Mr. Blaine took charge of the department he handed him his resignation, but it was returned to him with the request that he hold it until it was asked for. It never was asked for, but it was tendered him a short time ago, and this time it must be accepted because Mr. Moore has accepted the professorship of international law in Columbia College.

Speaking of the state department, the acting secretary, Mr. Wharton, is very, very mad at Mr. Harrison, because he has, whenever he has desired to transact any business with the department since Mr. Blaine went away, done so through Secretary Tracy, thus ignoring the acting secretary entirely.

Gen. John C. Black, ex-commissioner of pensions, is in Washington this week, in attendance upon the meetings of the board of managers of the National Home for disabled volunteer soldiers, which are being held at the war department.

Democrats here regard Fassett as an easy man to defeat for the governorship of New York. It will be sufficient for the people to know that he is Tom Platt's man.

Educational.

Among American institutions none exceed in usefulness in the line of keeping up a love of country, and of a free country the public school. Go where you will and among other institutions of civilization, of progress the public school is sure to stand prominent. It is the one great bulwark of American progress. There the youth of our land are given the lessons in the rudiments of an education that they carry with them and continue to add to so long as they live. Each individual is taught to depend upon his own resources and in connection with his associates to master the difficult examples given them, that when they enter the larger school of life and from experience become more familiar with things around them, they learn that no one of them knows, or can know, all but that one does and always will excel in one line while another is better qualified and adapted to some other line, and it becomes necessary to depend upon their neighbors for help that in order to accomplish an object the family, the society or community must be united and act as a whole. Should our country be threatened by invasion, we must rise as one man and act on the defensive, or if occasion requires the offensive, and crush our foes. So in educational matters. If our teachers would deal ignorance and superstition a deadly blow they must unite, and in solid phalanx as one body hurl their strength against the old battlements, keeping up the siege until the last point is carried.

The organization of the Wright County Teacher's Association is a step and a much needed step in the right direction. Let every friend of education aid in making it a power for good.

Below we give the constitution as adopted at the institute at Monticello lately, also the resolutions passed, and the committees appointed to aid in the organization of the society. Much depends upon the vim and determination of the committees in discharging the duties of their offices. We hope to see the Wright County Teachers' Association in the near future one to compare with the best in the state:

RESOLUTIONS.

FIRST. That realizing the advantages of co-operation and the exchange of ideas and methods of teaching among the members of our profession we would request the Superintendent to arrange at an early date for an organization of teachers to be known as the Wright County Teacher's Association.

SECOND. That as one of the means of furthering the cause of education we do recommend the early adoption by the schools of Wright county of a uniform system of free text books.

THIRD. That we believe it a duty devolvent upon us as teachers to conduct ourselves in our every day life in such a manner that we will set a proper example for emulation before our pupils.

FOURTH. That we deplore the fact that in many districts of our county, parents and school-trustees are strangers to the school-room and believing that it is an aid to education to have the earnest co-operation of the parents of our pupils and the trustees of our school districts, we would earnestly request the parents and trustees to visit our schools and co-oporate with us in raising the schools of Wright county to a higher standard.

FIFTH. That we believe that the work of teaching primary pupils is one of the most difficult tasks entrusted to our profession and one that requires special talent and we therefore favor raising the standard of wages paid our primary teachers.

SIXTH. That as one of the means of inculcating patriotism and love of country in the minds of the youth of our country we will favor and work to secure the raising of our country's flag over every school-house in Wright county.

SEVENTH. That in-as-much as our state has made liberal provision for the establishment of school libraries in each and every district of the state we feel it a duty devolvent upon us as teachers to use our utmost endeavor to secure a library for each school district.

EIGHTH. That we extend our thanks to Professors McCleary and Pendergast for the aid they have given us, to Mrs. Beede for her instruction in music, to Superintendent Lindsley for his labors in our behalf and to the people of Monticello for their many courtesies and the hearty welcome we have received at their hands. Signed by Committee, INDEPENDENCE, Minn., Sept. 16.

EDITOR BUFFALO GAZETTE.—Mr. Editor: At this writing my stock of news is rather low and what I have on hand is not worth over fifty cents on the dollar. It is only bankrupt stock. Expect to have on hand some good democratic news about the first of next November—will be from Ohio and have the Campbell stamp on it; think it will go off well in this western market.

We hear of some one getting into the water melon patches around here.

Many of our farmers are looking for water way down in the bowels of the earth. Pretty soon China will be looking into that business and we will have to pay a heavy duty for the water crossing the line.

Farmers are busy cutting corn, digging potatoes, plowing and threshing. The wheat is turning out from twenty to thirty bushels per acre. Oats go about fifty bushels to the acre.

WATERTOWN WAYS.

Joe Warta, of St. Paul, visited with his family in Watertown over Sunday.

Miss Bertha Bleedorn, of Mankato, is spending a week or two visiting with her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Bleedom, of this place.

Mrs. O. W. Jones and children went to Minneapolis last Thursday to spend a few days visiting with relatives. Mr. Jones spent Saturday and Sunday there also, and took in the sights of the Exposition, etc.

Miss Roma Peters, teacher in the primary department of our school, who has been spending her summer vacation with her parents in Illinois, returned last Thursday, and will occupy the same position this year.

Miss Sweeny, of Minneapolis, is being entertained this week by Mr. and Mrs. Pat. Gavan.

Mr. C. G. Halgren received notice through the press that his pension had been allowed.

Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Billings, of Delano, were in our village on Monday. Mr. Billings sold off the articles at the Ladies' Aid Society sale.

Miss Hesse, daughter of Wm. Hesse, of this place, died on Thursday last of consumption. She had been ailing since last fall and gradually grew worse until the time of her death last Thursday. The funeral took place from the Swedish Lutheran church on Saturday afternoon, the Rev. Maass conducting the services.

MONTROSE CHIPS.

The weather still continues warm and dry favorable for the maturing of corn but unfavorable for fall plowing, as the soil is getting quite dry.

Messrs. Klatt, Sr., Gerdsen and Halgren were among those who represented Montrose at the Watertown monthly fair.

Messrs. Young, Rennix, and Ruppeliues went over to Buffalo last Wednesday afternoon to attend the Odd Fellows meeting. An Odd Fellows society will soon be estabilshed here in the near future.

C. S. Rennix and children have removed to and will reside with Mrs. Weekly who lives north of the R. R. track.

Dr. Brigham has moved into the house recently vacated by Mr. Rennix.

A church sociable will be held in this village on the evening of Sept. 22, 1891. Everybody is invited to attend and enjoy the evening in a pleasant way.

As was expected our correspondent for the Eagle failed to come forward with the much desired proof to his wild cat and fallacious assertions made by him in a previous issue of that paper, but instead seeks to avert the matter by trying to rest the burden of proof with the GAZETTE corresponnent who is not guilty of such nonsense, but simply called him down for it He has become so deeply interested in the temperance meetings of late that he does not even give the Good Templars of which he is a member any credit either for the great moral reform he speaks of, saying nothing about the churches, but attributes it all to the first mentioned society. Well, let us excuse him as it is the best he can do under so biased a mind. Name your converts Bro. Cor. and lets be convinced. He desires to know where we get our information as "we" (the GAZETTE correspondent) rarely attended either church or temperance meetings. Well, shall say that the incorrectness of this statement affords a sufficient criterion upon which to base our conclusion that all his assertions have about the same amount of truth in them and hence they must have had their origin in a somewhat congested brain. We will state for his information that all the Protestant churches are promoters of temperance and that it is one of the tenets of the same. You must know that the society under the name of Temperance Society of this place and the several church societies are separate and distinct societies and that our churches are under no obligations to harbor it. The readers of the GAZETTE can rest assured that for "truth and veracity" our Eagle correspondent "isn't in it" upon this matter at least.

ROCKFORD, Sept. 15, 1891.

Please copy the enclosed piece taken from the Messiah Herald—a strong argument against high license. God grant it may open the eyes of some to see the truth. We are going slow but sure onward and upward towards victory. Mrs. Newcomb, of Minneapolis, met with us August 25th, and had a mother's meeting in the afternoon, and one of her stirring lectures in the evening, which was well enjoyed by the goodly number present.

THE DEACON'S SERMON.

JAMES CLEMENT AMBROSE

A dear old deacon in my state was cursed with a high licence pulpit, but was so loyal to the church that he took as gospel all that fell from the desk. So when the pastor pushed high licence, he as superintendent of the Sunday School said "Teach it to the children; as the tree is bent the twigs should be inclined. So in his homely way he turned the sermons into language the children could understand, and made a talk for high license before the Sunday School.

"Dear girls and boys," began the deacon "you know it it is very naughty to drink beer or whisky. So, too, it's naughty to sell them without a license, or with a cheap license. But when the State orders high license, and the town makes every saloon keeper pay it five hundred dollars out of what he gets for making drunkards, it isn't naughty any longer to sell beer and whisky, but a real nice respectable business, like selling sugar or hymn books. And your blessed papas don't like to have a fifty-dollar saloon close by their store; but with a five-hundred-dollar one each side they know that all good people will like to visit their store. So when bad men get drunk and swear and fight and roll into the gutter before the five-hundred-dollar saloon, your high license papas know that's a blessing, and they must thank God every day that blessings fall thick about them.

"You see it all clear, don't you, children? If not, you must remember your eyes will grow bigger, like pa's, some day. Of course, too, your fine mamas never visit the wife of that fifty-dollar rum-seller, but quick as he grows so good and respectable that he pays his town five hundred dollars a year as its share of what he gets by making drunkards and drunkards' wives and children, and the old tax payers pat him on the back, why then, of course your fine mamas go right off and visit his wife, and find her just lovely, and ask her over to tea, don't they? You know an advance of four hundred and fifty dollars in license works a great change of heart and manners in the saloon keeper and all his family. When he pays fifty dollars he's a brute, but when he pays five hundred dollars he's a gentleman.

"You keep on seeing, don't you, children? Maybe, though, you can't see why, if it's awful wicked for a fifty-dollar license to fill a man's boots with snakes and his head with crazy, and turn his hands into double fists, and send him home to knock down his wife and kick his little boy and girl into the street—if this is dreadful wicked maybe you can't see why it is right and respectable for a five-hundred-dollar license to do the same thing. But it'll come clear to you when you grow up and read the Bible the way lots of men do now. Then you'll see that what's all wrong standing alone, is all right standing on five hundred dollars.

"Maybe, too, pet lambs, you don't quite see how, if it's all wrong to drink liquors at any license, it's right as can be to sell them at any license, coaxing men to drink them. But wait till you get big and hear men talk who know a pious lot about high license. Then you'll see that the words in the Lord's Prayer—'Lead us not into temptation,' don't mean anything now; the world's got smart. And when the license preachers get up a new version of the Testament, I suppose they'll leave out all that nonsense.

"One thing more, sweet ones. Don't forget what license is to poor towns. Why, quite often it builds a new jail—and fills it Isn't that real good of it? So, if any of you die drunkards, or drunkard's wives, it will be warm comfort to you to remember that by living drunk, or with a drunkard, you've paid to support your town and country almost one-tenth of what they've paid to kill you.

"Now, good-by, children; and if ever you want to be constable or go to congress and want the taxes collected in a tumbler, don't object to being damned, only charge high for it."

The children laughed and called the deacon crazy, their fathers got to thinking, and the pastor got into a passion, but was afterward converted and became a good man.

A SPEC of war larger than a man's hand looms up on the eastern horizon. The English have, reports say, placed a force on an island near the Dardanelles, where they can control the ship business of the Meditterranean with the outside world.

THE president of the national organization of Democratic clubs, Gen. Chauncy F. Black, of Pennsylvania, Representative W. B. Bynum of Indiana, and senator S. C. Pennsylvania doubtful, Indiana, New York and Iowa democratic—are not sure any more than other people who the presidential candidates will be. They are bound for the Pacific coast and will do work for their cause in several of the towns on their route of travel.

THE amount of coloring matter stored in coal is such that one pound of the mineral yields magenta sufficient to color 500 yards of flannel, aurine for 120 yards, vermilion for 2,560 yards, and alizarine for 255 yards of turkey-red cloth.

THIS is a season of dreadful tragedies. There are disasters of various sorts—buildings crumble, and death is in their ruins; ships sink, and railroad trains carry their passengers to destruction. Of course, these are but coincidences, yet sometimes these unfortunate occurrences come in groups as if there were some unknown law which regulates them.

RACERS such as the Teutonic charge from $20 to $40 more for a first-class passage to New York than other swift ships of the same line, but a good deal of the additional profit is absorbed by coal alone. WHAT an immense sum Queen Victoria might realize by the sale of her watches. The oldest watches in the world are in her possession. She has two beautiful little gold ones by Breguet that are supposed to be a hundred years old. They have silver dials and are of about the size of a two-shilling piece. One is a blind man's watch; the other is a repeater. Both go perfectly and are in constant use. Her majesty's favorite watch is a large plain gold one by Mudge.

THE apparent universal law that things never happen singly but in "waves" finds new support. A few days ago this old earth seemed to be submerged by a "crime wave." The sickening odor of blood could almost be smelled in the newspapers. Now we have a wave of railroad accidents, nearly all preventable and due to gross carelessness. What will be next? Perhaps the millennium, when people stop shooting each other and trains run no more into collision, but it's doubtful.

A CURIOUS bit of local history is embalmed in the name of one of the townships in New Castle county, Del. The name as now spelled is "Pencader," and it is that of the township in which lies the "Welsh Nort" settled about two hundred years ago by a Welsh colony, some of whose descendants still hold parts of the tract. In the midst of the Welsh Nort stands Iron hill, the only considerable eminence in Delaware, and Pencader is only a slight corruption of the Welsh Pen Cadr, which means the great hill or the hill fort. The early Welshmen named their township in its honor.

THE world's trade in 1889, according to good statistical authority, amounted to $15,885,000,000. Of this two-thirds is beyond the reach of American competition. The remainder is to be found in Asia, Africa, Australia and North America outside of the United States. One-fifth of this is in South America, Mexico and the West Indies. The commerce of this field may be largely possessed by the United States if we choose to engage in active competition for it. It lies at our very doors, inviting our enterprise, and it will be our own fault if we do not avail ourselves of the opportunity to appropriate it to ourselves.

THE grip of an ant's jaw is retained even after the body has been bitten off and nothing but the head remains. This knowledge is possessed by a certain tribe of Indians in Brazil, who put the ants to a very peculiar use. When an Indian gets a gash cut in his hand, instead of having his hand sewn together, as physicians do in this country, he procures five or six large black ants, and, holding their heads near the gash, they bring their jaws together in biting the flesh, and thus pull the two sides of the gash together. Then the Indian pinches off the bodies leaving the heads clinging to the flesh.

Gathering War Clouds.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 14.—A detachment of blue jackets and marines from a British ironclad, accompanied by a battery of light field pieces and several Gatling guns, was landed yesterday at Sigri, on the island of Mitylene, formerly occupying that place in the name of the queen of England.

There is a good harbor at Sigri, and it is supposed that the British naval officer at Mitylene intends to fortify the island and to make it a coaling station and rendezvous for the British Mediterranean fleets. Sigri is on the coast of Mitylene and is about sixty miles from the mouth of the Dardanelles.

The Wheat Law is Nil.

FARGO, N. D., Sept. 14.—Judge Caldwell, in the United States circuit court this morning, delivered an opinion in the wheat inspection cases, both judges concurring. The railroad commissioners and wheat inspectors are perpetually enjoined from interfering with the movement of wheat in transit. The injunction does not apply to the state courts. The court holds that the law is in conflict with the interstate and an interference with interstate commerce which alone can be governed by congress.

SERIOUS floods and storms are reported in various parts of Spain. Railway communication is interrupted at several points. MET WITH SUCCESS.

World's Fair Commissioners Do Good Work in Europe—A Deep Interest in the Big Show Aroused in Many Lands, and Magnificent Displays Promised.

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—The steamship Augusta Victoria, which arrived Saturday from Hamburg and Southampton, had among its passengers Sir Henry Wood and James Dredge, British royal commissioners to the world's fair; Herr Vermouth, privy counsel of the imperial commission of Germany to the world's fair; and Gen. Butterworth, Maj. Moses P. Handy, Judge William Lindsey, F. W. Peck, A. G. Bullock and J. W. Sprague, members of the commission to Europe of the World's Columbian exhibition. Gen. Butterworth and the other members of the committee were sent to Europe last June with instructions to see what exhibits foreign merchants would send to the big fair. They sailed June 9. During the three months they have traveled 17,000 miles, and have visited the governments of England, France, Switzerland, Germany, Holland, Belgium, Austria, Hungary, Sweden, Norway, Denmark and Russia. The furthermost point they reached was the Russian town of Nijni-Novgorod, near the Russian Asiatic frontier, where the celebrated annual fair is now being held. The results of the trip are most gratifying.

In England the people appeared to take a most lively interest in the success of the fair, and this English interest influenced all the continental countries in the same way. In London the members of the commission met Lord Salisbury, Minister Lincoln, Sir Richard Webster, the duke of Abercorn, Lord George Hamilton, Mr. Balfour and other members of the government. They were dined in the house of commons and in gazetting Sir Henry Wood and Mr. Dredge as royal commissioners the queen expressed a hope that the Chicago world's fair would be a success in every way. The lord mayor of London and his probable successor, Alderman Evans, who met the commissioners, both stated that they intended visiting the fair.

In France the commissioners met M. Ribot, minister of foreign affairs, and were entertained by him. They also met M. Berger, M. Proust, M. Guiot and M. Vavaette, who was delegated to represent his government. France has made special application for space at the fair, and intends to make an exhibit of pictures never before seen outside of France.

In Germany the commission was entertained by Chancellor von Caprivi, Vice Chancellor Boetticher and other members of the cabinet. The reception by the officials was most cordial, and assurances were given that the German exhibit would be second to none.

The king of Belgium entertained the commissioners; and accepted an invitation to be present at the opening of the fair.

In Austria and Hungary the same interest in the undertaking was shown by the business men and officials, and in Buda Pesth the commissioners found a society of business men already organized to collect and send exhibits to the fair.

At Frankfort the commission separated, Gen. Butterworth and Maj. Handy going through Austria, Hungary and Russia, while Messrs. Peck, Lindsey and Bullock went through Sweden, Norway and Denmark. In Russia the cities of Warsaw, St. Petersburg, Moscow and Nijni-Novgorod were visited. At present the crops, so far as the commissioners could see, are good, but beyond the present things look dark for the poorer classes. The Russian officials who met the commissioners were favorably disposed toward the fair and promised a good exhibit from the country of the czar.

Gen. Butterworth said that all the European countries except Italy would surely have a big representation at the fair. Italy does not take kindly to certain bills passed by the last congress, and will on that account do less officially than any other country.

The commissioners say that the governments they visited have been aroused to the importance and magnitude of the Columbian exposition, and all have taken active measures to send worthy representations. England has appropriated $155,000, although it did not appropriate one cent to the Paris exposition. Belgium has also made a national appropriation. The governments of France, Germany, Great Britain and Switzerland have asked for extra space. France, Russia and Belgium have appointed special commissioners, who would have accompanied the German and English commissioners had not other engagements prevented them. They are coming in the course of a few weeks. Several of the governments have asked the privilege of extra space for characteristic buildings.

Sir Henry T. Wood, secretary of the royal commission of Great Britain for the exposition, James Dredge, editor of Engineering, and Privy Councilor Wermuth, of the imperial commission of Germany, come to ascertain what space and location will be allowed their governments and to investigate the system of customs and transportation and the general facilities which will be offered exhibits. They will go direct to Washington to confer with their respective ministers and thence with the fair commissioners to Chicago, where they will spend several weeks in examining the site and plans of the exposition. They have instructions to report to their governments early in October.

Y. M. C. A. FIGURES.

Over Four Thousand Associations in the World, with 390,000 Members.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—The World's Young Men's Christian association has just completed its annual table of statistics. From this it appears that there are in Great Britain and Ireland 756 centers and 78,900 members. Germany has more associations than England and in the United States there are 1,305 centers, having a membership of 222,000. Taking the entire world the report estimates that there are over 4,400 Young Men's Christian associations in existence, with an aggregate membership of 390,000.

URGED TO WAIT.

Northwestern Farmers Again Advised to Hold Their Wheat for Higher Prices.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Sept. 14.—Alliance men of Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota have been conferring here for several days on the wheat situation and have issued 1,000,000 circular letters of advice and warning urging farmers to put their wheat in bins and wait for the price to go to $1.50 or $2. A comparison of notes showed that wheat was being poured into the elevators of Duluth and Minneapolis at the rate of from 600 to 2,000 cars a day, and that the price at Minneapolis had dropped in a fortnight from $1 to 90¼ cents. The conclusion was reached that if the mad rush to realize didn't stop the price was liable to drop away to 90 cents.

The letter states the new Wheat Growers' association and the alliance secretaries all over the country are unanimous that wheat is bound to sell as high as $1.50, and possibly $2 per bushel, and they are unanimous in this warning to the farmers not to sacrifice their wheat and give the speculators all the profit there is in it. The letter says that the crop is being greatly overestimated by the newspapers and grain dealers, and continues:

"We do not believe a majority of the farmers are foolish enough to cooperate with the speculators to depress prices further. There is no question but prices will take a turn upward in a few days. The shortage in Europe can now be figured with accuracy. About a week ago a congress of grain dealers from all parts of Europe met at Vienna, Austria, and computed figures about the crops in Europe. These figures are the highest which well-informed reputable men could furnish, for, if in a famine year like this they should give for the crop of any one country lower figures than circumstances justified, the government of that country would certainly remonstrate. It is surely the policy of Europeans not to exaggerate their disaster. It is entirely certain that Europeans will have to economize in bread to the extent of 678,000,000 bushels, and when the situation is aggravated by the partial failure of the potato crop, it is to be considered what prices they would pay for American wheat. The shortage in Europe being four times as large as the American surplus, there is no doubt that the price of wheat will reach the highest figure ever known before this year is up and will exceed it by far before the new crops come in.

"Wheat will soon be over $1.50, no matter how much farmers and speculators work together to keep prices down, and we would advise those who can comprehend the situation to hold their wheat for $1.50 and add for every month they keep it say five cents to the price. Hold your wheat. You cannot get left."

MANY BADLY HURT.

A Passenger Train Goes Over a High Embankment in Colorado—Twenty-Six Persons Injured, and Some May Die.

DENVER, Col., Sept. 14.—Passenger train No. 314, bound toward Denver on the Graymont division of the Union Pacific railway, was wrecked Sunday morning about 11 o'clock near Beaver Brook station and twenty-six passengers were injured, five of whom will probably die. The train was late and running rapidly and when rounding a sharp curve the express car left the track and rolled down a 15-foot embankment. It was followed by the mail and two passenger coaches, one of which turned over twice before reaching the bottom. The train was loaded with passengers, many of whom were knights of pythias who were returning from the knights of pythias state convention which was held at Aspen last week. When the news reached Golden, Col., a wrecking train was ordered out and was starting when Robert Pruin, an employe of the road, attempted to board the engine. In doing so his revolver fell from his hip pocket, the hammer striking a stone, and the weapon was discharged, the ball taking effect in the man's neck, making a wound which will result fatally. Those seriously injured in the wreck were left at Golden in the hands of physicians, while those not badly hurt were brought to this city and taken to their homes or the hospitals. It is not known exactly what caused the wreck, but as the track was a narrow gauge and the coaches very top-heavy it is thought that the train was running too rapidly for safety.

A passenger train on the Colorado Central railroad was wrecked at noon Sunday. Fifteen passengers were injured, but it is thought none fatally. It has been impossible to learn the particulars yet, as the telegraph office at that place has been closed.

CHILDREN CREMATED.

Locked in by Their Mother, They Set the House on Fire.

WICHITA, Kan., Sept. 14.—Word has been received here of the burning to death of four children on a farm in the southern part of Barton county. Mrs. William Klein, the mother of the children, locked them in the house while she went on an errand, and presently the attention of the father, who was some distance off, was attracted by smoke issuing from the house. He hastened home and found the building ablaze. By the time he had effected an entrance the interior was a mass of flames. He found one of the children, who died shortly after being rescued. The charred remains of the others were found in the debris. The eldest child was only 7 years.

The World's Population.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—Prof. Baron von Juraschek has published a new edition of his geographical statistical tables containing the latest estimate of the world's population. This he computes to be 1,554,000,000. The average density is about twelve to the square kilometer. Europe contains 358,000,000 and America 124,000,000.

Paying Off Kansas Mortgages.

TOPEKA, Kan., Sept. 14.—Complete mortgage statistics collected in fifty-four counties in eastern and central Kansas show that the farm-mortgaged indebtedness is being rapidly diminished. For the four months preceding September 1 26½ per cent. more mortgages were released than were recorded.

SAN SALVADOR, via Galveston, Sept. 14.—The earthquake of September 8 was experienced all over the country. The material losses are estimated at $500,000, although this seems a low figure.

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS

THE GAME LAWS.

A Synopsis Issued by Game Warden Frank L. Stetson.

Frank L. Stetson, the active game warden, issued a "synopsis of the game laws of Minnesota, as approved April 20, 1891."

The open seasons are as follows:

Woodcock, July 4 to November 1.

Pinnated grouse or prairie chickens and white breasted or sharp tailed grouse, September 1 to November 1.

Wild duck of any variety or wild geese or brant or any aquatic fowl whatever, August 20 to August 25.

Wilson or jack snipe or snipe of any variety, August 20 to April 25.

Elk, moose, deer and caribou, November 1 to December 1.

No moose or caribou shall be killed, sold or taken in the state for five years from 20th of April, 1891.

The use of hounds or dogs in hunting elk, moose, deer and caribou is strictly prohibited.

None of the game animals or birds of the state shall be killed or taken in any manner except by shooting them with a gun held to the shoulder, and the use of any trap, snare, swivel-gun or other contrivance or device whatever is prohibited, except the use of decoys in hunting ducks and geese.

PENALTIES.

Anyone convicted of killing out of season, or in any manner except as provided by law, any of the game animals or birds of the state of Minnesota, shall be fined not less than $10, or more than $100, for each and every animal or bird so killed and the cost of prosecution, or shall be confined in the county jail not less than ten days or more than sixty days, for each and every animal or bird so killed.

Twenty-five dollars' reward is offered by the board of game and fish commissioners of the state of Minnesota for information that will cause the conviction of anyone violating any of the provisions of this law.

Knights of Pythias.

Past grand commander, L. P. Hunt, Mankato; grand commander, Fred C. Wheaton, Minneapolis; grand vice commander, I. C. Henning, Stillwater; grand prelate, Albert Berg, Taylor's Falls; grand keeper of records and seals, Grier M. Orr, St. Paul; grand master of exchequer, A. C. Godfrey, Minneapolis; grand master at arms, F. E. Austin, Duluth; grand inner guard, William Percy, Brainerd; grand outer guard, I. G. Preston, Moorhead; grand lodge trustee, H. M. Martin, Minneapolis; supreme representative, F. S. McDonald, Minneapolis.

An Historic Gun.

The State Historical society has been presented with a rifle, an old "Harper's Ferry" rifle, as it is called, which has quite a history. The gun was taken from an Indian by Nick Kassel, of the Seventh Minnesota regiment, at the battle of Wood lake in September, 1862. Kassel was obliged to kill the Indian to get the gun, but that was incidental to the securing of the now historical weapon. Kassel sold it to Caleb Hosford, who donated it to the State Historical society.

Accident to a Lady Rider.

During the ladies' race at the state fair grounds in Minneapolis Miss Viola Poole's horse stumbled and threw her rider. Miss Lane was close behind, and her horse fell, throwing Miss Lane. The Poole girl was picked up unconscious and found to have a fractured collar bone. Miss Lane's injuries were considered to be fatal. Her right arm was broken in two places, her left arm in one, her jaw broken and she received serious internal injuries.

Raised Prices on Lumber.

The Mississippi Valley Lumbermen's association was organized at Minneapolis recently. The chief object of the association was to raise the price of lumber, and a report was unanimously adopted which recommended an advance of one dollar per thousand, the Minneapolis list to be used as a basis from that time forth.

A Sawmill Burned.

Jordan A. Mathews' sawmill at Franconia was destroyed by fire. Loss between $5,000 and $6,000; insurance, $5,000. The fire was caused probably by lightning. The lumber yards and $15,000 worth of lumber were saved. The mill had shut down owing to the scarcity of logs, but was about to resume operations.

Shot in the Street.

P. P. Scott and J. W. Seney, assisted by about fifty men, killed a bear weighing about 300 pounds at Thorson, a village in Pope county. This was something unusual, as it has been a good many years since such an animal has showed itself in that county, and especially on a crowded street of a village.

The News Briefly Chronicled.

The receipts and shipments of wheat in Minneapolis the past crop year beat all the records.

Joseph Leuvenmark, the celebrated diver, made a jump from the 60-foot tower at Keegan's lake in the presence of thousands, and landed safely.

The bank of East Grand Forks has been reorganized as the First national bank, with a capital stock of $50,000.

The other evening at West Minister church Miss May, daughter of ex-Senator Pierce, was married to Robert S. Ingles, of Crawfordsville, Ind.

The Third and Tenth regiments enjoyed pleasant reunions in Minneapolis.

A meeting of the bill-posters of the state was held at St. Paul and a state association organized. L. N. Scott, of St. Paul, was elected president.

Rufe Stephens, aged 20, was fatally shot while taking a gun from a wagon at Pipestone. The charge entered the left side of his face.

George Millis, a Chicago barber, was married to Miss Lois Owens, of East Prairie, aged 16. He attempted to elope with her. Neither threats nor entreaties, nor even the appearance of a policeman had any effect on the young bride, so the parents relented and the happy couple took the noon train for Chicago.

Miss Nina Stewart, of Northfield, has been appointed by the American Board of Missions (Congregational) to a position in the college at Kobe, Japan. She leaves in October.

An unknown insane man threw himself in front of a short line train at Hazelwood and was horribly mangled. He was apparently 30 years old, roughly dressed and barefooted.

The Knights of Pythias had a warm contest at Duluth as to whether they should retain the clause in their constitution debarring liquor men from their organization. The clause was sustained by a large majority vote.

CENTER OF POPULATION.

How It Shifts with Each Succeeding Enumeration.

The center of population in the United States was located by the recent census in southern Indiana. Its exact point, in Decatur county, a little west of south of Greensburg, and twenty miles east of Columbus, Ind., has been marked by the erection there of a pillar of limestone.

This is only the second time that one of these points, which have indicated in such a forcible manner the growth of our nation, has been marked by a monument. There is still to be seen, at a spot about forty miles to the northwest of Washington, D. C., a flat stone with the words "Centre of Population" cut on it, which was placed there in 1810.

Every observant person is aware that the center of population shifts with every new census, and that this movement has been from east to west, sometimes bending south and then again north, but always trending westward. One hundred years ago it was twenty-three miles east of Baltimore, and twenty years later it had moved to a point forty miles northwest by west from Washington.

In 1820 it was near Woodstock, Va., and in 1830 it was nineteen miles southwest of Moorefield (now in West Virginia). In 1840 it was near Clarksburg, Va., and ten years later it had nearly reached Parkersburg. In 1860 the center was twenty miles from Chillicothe, O., and in 1870 forty-eight miles east by north of Cincinnati, O. In 1880 the center had returned to the same latitude as in 1860, and in 1890 was located as above described.

The peculiarity of the movement is the adherence to the thirty-ninth parallel and the steady march westward at the average rate of five miles a year, or five hundred and five miles in a century. But the greatest curiosity expressed by the ordinary reader is to find out how this center of population is determined. The explanation is not by any means an easy one, and if the official explanation in mathematical language is given, it is quite incomprehensible.

Perhaps the answer is best arrived at by putting a suppositious case. If we take a plate of wood or metal, four inches square, and divide it into four equal parts by two lines, it is evident that the plate would exactly balance if stuck on a pivot at the point where the lines intersect. That is plain enough, and so also if the plate is circular or oblong; and it is also evident that the plate would balance, no matter how much weight was placed on it, so long as that weight was equally distributed over the surface. But suppose one quarter section has twice as much weight as any other section? Then, to balance the plate, the pivot must be advanced toward the excess of weight. Now, instead of a circle, square or oblong, suppose we have an irregular figure. It is seen at once that the problem becomes more difficult, although the principle remains the same. In practice you would experiment with your pivot until you found the center of gravity; but if you had a plate so large that you could not handle it you would be obliged to resort to mathematical computation.

This is what is done in finding the center of population. The surface area of the United States is conceived to be a smooth plate, and all the inhabitants, big and little, are imagined to be untits of equal weight. If this great plate could be suspended in the air, as you would a sheet of tin, there would be some point on which the plate would exactly balance on a pivot, and that point would be the center of population. To find this exact point is a mammoth mathematical task, and can only be found by long and patient calculation and the use of the highest branches of arithmetic. Even then, as the center of population is moving every day, the result can not be exactly correct, but it is sufficiently accurate for all practical purposes.

It is idle to conjecture where the center of population will be ten years ence, but it is probable that it will eventually rest somewhere in Kansas. But it may be another century before the states become so settled that the center of population shall remain stationary, or fluctuate only within inconsiderable limits.—Golden Days.

AN ANXIOUS PARENT.

His Worriment Was Both Peculiar and Intense.

A short, wiry man, with a very red nose and flecks of gray in his whiskers, walked through the corridor of the Palace hotel and halted at the counter to examine the register. After running over the list of arrivals he looked up at the clerk, whose classic features peamed with good nature, and asked:

"Are yon the clerk?"

"Do I look like a chambermaid or a laundress?" retorted the genial Fred.

"But are you the clerk?"

"No; I'm the colored porter."

"Now, look here; I didn't come here to have fun poked at me. I'm looking for a young man named Charles Clayton, that came here from Los Gatos yesterday."

"Do you know Mr. Clayton?"

"Reckon I ought to, for he's my son."

Stanton's face assumed a most serious expression as he replied: "Well, I am sorry to be the conveyor of ill tidings, but your son was struck by a cable-car last night and seriously injured. He is now lying at the city and county hospital in a most precarious condition."

"You don't tell me? Happened last night, eh?"

"Yes."

"Leave anything in his room?"

"No."

"Not even a small package?"

"No."

"Didn't leave anything in the office?"

"He did not."

The red nosed man's head was bowed down for a moment as if with grief, and when he looked up he said slowly and thoughtfully: "Run over by a cable-car, eh? Left no package? Just like him every time. When he left home I gave him two dollars to buy me a bottle of medicine, and I'll just bet he had the bottle in his pocket and that it was broken when the car struck him. I always told him that he was too careless," and he passed slowly out in the direction of Market street.—San Francisco Call.

IT IS FUNNY.

This world is very funny,
For no matter how much money
Man is earning he will spend it and be hard up all the time.
To his utmost he is straining,
To catch up without attaining,
Till it makes his life a burden when it should be bliss sublime.

He who earns a thousand merely
Thinks two thousand yearly
Would be just the very figure to make happiness complete;
But his income when it doubles
Only multiplies his troubles,
For his outgo then increasing makes his both ends hard to meet.

It is run in debt and borrow,
Flush to-day and broke to-morrow,
Financiering every which way to postpone the day of doom;
Spending money ere he makes it,
And then wondering what takes it,
Till he, giving up the riddle, looks for rest within the tomb.

Oh! this world is very funny
To the average man whose money
Doesn't quite pay for the dancing that he does before he should;
And he kills himself by trying
Just a little higher flying
Than is suited to his pocket and his own eternal good.

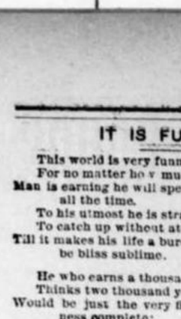
BEAT AT HIS OWN GAME.



T. AGEDORE is a young clubman who is nothing if not up to the times. He can talk to you intelligently on almost everything that the magazines or the papers talk to you about. Another characteristic of his is his civic pride. He thinks Chicago the greatest town on earth, and if you were to venture the suggestion that any corner of the earth had prettier girls than the windy city, he would not improbably cut your acquaintance instantly.

So he was immensely pleased the other day when he read that clever story about how a New York man sustained his town's reputation for fair women and won a bet at the same time. Of course you know the story: The New Yorker wagered with a Philadelphian that on a certain day they would meet so many first-class beauties on a certain number of blocks in the avenue. They did meet exactly the requisite number, and the New Yorker pocketed the money smilingly. He was a society man, you see, and he bribed these fair acquaintances of his, with unlimited candy and gloves, to help him win the bet.

St. Agedore read the story over again, and then slapped himself heartily on the knee. "By Jove," he said, vigorously, "here's a great chance for me to vindicate the reputation of the Chicago girl. Let me see—h'm, I suppose I'd better not bet just exactly the same way—that would be too much like this story. No, I'll bet on the size of their feet. A lot of those fellows at the club think because they happen to have been born in York state that they can grind out that chestnut about Chicago girls' feet every day or so. Wait, I'll make them tired of it!"

He then proceeded to lay his little plans. He knew there would be no difficulty about getting a man to bet with; so he first made sure that he would be betting on a certainty.

He called on a number of his fair friends on Prairie avenue, and explained his little plot to them in turn. That is to say, he explained it only in part. He could not bring himself to mention the fact that his bet was based on the smallness of the feet possessed by the fair ones whom he sought as his allies. He had too great a sense of delicacy to mention this detail. He merely told them the New York story and asked them to help him out in a similar way. Of course they were delighted, flattered, only too glad.

So with many sweet smiles and sweeter promises he made his pleasant round.

When he had assured the appearance on Prairie avenue at a certain hour on Sunday of enough tiny-footed maidens to give the impression that China was not in the same world with Chicago in this regard, he proceeded to the club.

It wasn't long before the conversation veered around to the topic ever foremost in the Chicagoan's mind, i. e., Chicago. "Yes," said one enthusiast, "we'll be able to show New York some big things in '93."

"We can do that now," said a sarcastic and unpatriotic member, "in feet."

Here was St. Agedore's chance. "Oh," said he, "it gives me a severe pain to hear you harp on that worn old string. I tell you what I'll do—just to prove what nonsense that idea about Chicago feet is—I'll bet you that I can walk five blocks with you on Prairie avenue, and that in every block we'll meet at least one girl whose feet will be indisputably Cinderella-like."

"I'll take your bet," said the other, quietly.

"Very well," went on St. Agedore, "suppose we get our friend Corbridge here to act as umpire and make the walk with us. Agreed. And—how will next Sunday afternoon at three suit you for time?"

"As well as any other."

"It doesn't matter much about what block we choose," said St. Agedore, with a fine assumption of carelessness. "Suppose we say from Eighteenth street to Twenty-third?"

The other nodded his head in approval, and smiled a very satisfied sort of smile.

So did our friend, St. Agedore. And as to who smiled best—why, we shall see that when it is quite clear who smiled last. Certain it is that he was observed quietly chuckling to himself at intervals until the stated Sunday arrived.

Three o'clock found the three friends duly assembled at Prairie avenue and Eighteenth street. St. Agedore was radiant in victorious confidence. The other man said very little. And the umpire looked awfully important. He had to decide an almost national question, you see, and he felt his significance deeply.

The momentous walk began.

Arm in arm the three strolled onwards. Half of the first block had been traversed when a door opened and a radiantly-attired damsel stepped down onto the trottoir. But—oh, horrors—as she came down the steps the size of her feet was distinctly and awfully visible. It was—but let us draw a large veil over the exact dimensions.

St. Agedore shuddered. His opponent smiled faintly, and Corbridge looked surprised.

The blocks were passed one by one. In nearly all of them the trio met with girls whose feet were imposing, but not pretty. But none of the fair ones who had promised to appear for St. Agedore's benefit fulfilled that promise.

Twenty-first, Twenty-second. St. Agedore's face grew pale. Ironically he thought to himself: "She cometh not, he said," as every step brought him nearer defeat.

Twenty-third street.

"You've lost, St. Agedore," said the umpire.

"Yes," he said, disconsolately. He was filled with anger at those who had disappointed him, and wonder at their reason for so doing. He was not long kept in suspense.

"DID YOU EVER SEE THIS ARTICLE BEFORE?"

"My dear fellow," said the winner, "you're not the only man in town who reads the papers. Did you ever see this article before?"

And he pulled out of his notebook the cutting which related the New York episode already mentioned.

St. Agedore only nodded slightly, and bit his lip, frowning.

"You see," went on the victor, "when you made that bet at the club you were so confident that I—well, I smelt a rat, as the phrase goes. More especially as I had read this article here. You know, I think, that my acquaintance on the avenue is fully as wide as yours. Well, I went promptly and bribed every one of them, except such as had indubitable Chicago feet (he smiled triumphantly as he shot this shaft), to stay indoors at the time appointed.

"I confess that in some cases I had to raise my bribe considerably over a previous one, but the persuasive power of more candy prevailed, and, after all, I am ahead a trifle on the bet."

And then St. Agedore repeated a large number of three-em dashes quietly to himself.

He has been waiting ever since for a chance to get gloriously even, but the chance hasn't come yet.

So, sad as it is to relate, the size of Chicago feet was not permitted a vindication on this occasion. Virtue was defeated, but—we shall see.

In the meanwhile, St. Agedore is putting in some valuable time in calling himself an idiot. When you come to think of it, it is rather idiotic to suppose oneself the only person who reads the papers nowadays.—J. Percival Pollard, in American Clubman.

He Could Spell.

Grandma had forgotten that it was two years since she had seen one small member of the family, and that the child had, in the meantime, done a great deal toward learning to spell.

"I can't take it!" stoutly asserted this little Frank, when his mother insisted on his swallowing a spoonful of medicine. "I can't! I can't!"

"Then I shall be obliged to punish you," said mamma, who had passed through more than one scene of the kind, and was beginning to tire of them.

Grandma did not like to interfere, but thought she could do so without showing her partisanship to the boy.

"My dear," said she to her daughter, "why not try h-o-n-e-y?"

"Yes," cried Frank, before his mother could answer, "I'd do most anything for honey!"

Grandma's ruse had not succeeded, but he got the honey.—Youth's Companion.

Sculptured by the Weather.

A curious example of the wear and tear to which the surface of the earth is subjected is shown in the stone-capped pinnacles which are found on South river, in the Wahsatch mountains. There are hundreds of these slender pillars, ranging in height from forty to four hundred feet, most of them crowned by large caps of stones. They are not works of human art, as might be imagined, but are the memorial monuments of the hill from which they have been cut by the action of air and water. Those pinnacles alone remain of many square miles of solid rock, which have been washed away to a depth of some four hundred feet. The greater hardness of the surface has caused it to resist corrosion more than the underlying rock, thus leaving huge caps of stone perched high in air on the points of their columns. One double column, capped by a single stone, forms a natural bridge, both unique and picturesque.

HOME HINTS AND HELPS.

—Regular dusting with a soft brush or cloth should keep bronze clean and a little sweet oil, gently rubbed, will remove the purple tinge that comes.—N. Y. World.

—Bells Cake: Break two eggs in a cup, add two tablespoons of sweet cream, fill the cup with sweet milk, add one cup of sugar, one and a half cups of flour, one teaspoonful of cream tartar and half a teaspoon of soda.—Farm and Home.

—"Aunt Sarah" gives an excellent receipe for cleaning silver. "Rub the silver with a piece of an old, soft napkin moistened with a little olive oil; then rub it well with calcined magnesia, using a brush when necessary, and afterward with a clear, soft chamois." N. Y. Tribune.

—To restore rancid butter to its original taste, beat up a quarter of a pound of good fresh lime in a pail of water. Let stand an hour, pour off the lime water carefully, and in this wash the butter thoroughly. Wash afterward with cold spring water and salt slightly.—Detroit Free Press.

—If you want your windows to be nice and bright, add a little ammonia to the water and wash thoroughly. Use no soap as it leaves the glass of a milky color. You can not obtain satisfactory results by wiping them off with a damp cloth—but they must be washed with plenty of water. Dry them with clean cotton cloths, and polish with a chamois or soft paper.

—One way of preventing delicate and sweet-scented flowers from flagging is to cut them with several leaves on the stem, and, when the flower head is placed in water, to allow only this head to remain above the water, while the leaves are entirely submerged; by this means the leaves seem to help support the flower, which will then last for three days in a fairly cool room.

—A Good Lemon Jelly: Soak one package of gelatine in half a pint of cold water for two hours or more. Pour on this one quart of boiling water, and add a pint of sugar. Set the bowl in a pan of boiling water and stir until the sugar and gelatine are dissolved; then add half a pint of lemon juice, and strain through a coarse napkin. Turn into molds and set away to harden.—Ladies' Home Journal.

—Warmed-over Potatoes: An excellent way to warm over potatoes is to put a lump of butter into a saucepan. As it melts add a tablespoonful of flour, stirring it so that it will not burn. Then pour in a cup of rich sweet milk (pure cream is preferable), and season with pepper and salt. Keep stirring with a spoon so that the ingredients will be well mixed, then put into this cold sliced potatoes. Let them boil up for a few minutes, then send to the table hot.—Detroit Free Press.

—Royal Pudding: Cover a box of gelatine with water and let it dissolve, then pour over it a pint and a half of boiling water, add a pound of sugar, and the juice of four oranges and three lemons, stir until the sugar is dissolved. Strain, and set in a cool place. Dip a large mold in ice water, cover the bottom and sides with canned cherries; cover with the liquid gelatine, let it harden, fill up the space with more gelatine, and set it to cool. Serve with vanilla cold sauce.—Housekeeper.

—Among new home luxuries are the shoulder pillows, which give comfort, combined with a bit of decoration, to a high, hard-backed chair. The pillows are made eight to ten inches wide and twelve to fifteen in length, according to the size of the chair on which they are to be used. The material may be printed silk, china silk, plush or velvet, embroidered or plain. Silkoline is one of the prettiest of inexpensive materials. These pillows are used in pairs by setting small, gilt rings in the edges and lacing them together with ribbons.—N. Y. World.

GEMS OF ART.

Parasol Handles Much Shorter Than Last Season.

The gaudiness, lightness and fluffiness which characterizes all the feminine modes this season is especially marked in parasols. Such charming effects as are seen in lace, chiffon and tulle in the most fetching colors, all puffed, ruffled and shirred.

Of the less elaborate which one might fancy more appropriately carried with a tailor-made gown, was noticed a stylish red silk shade, with Malacca stick and white ivory handle carved in the form of a lobster's claw, and was marked sixteen dollars.

The handles, remarkably shorter than those carried a season ago, are of natural wood or exquisitely carved, many of them being perfect gems of art.

A very pretty novelty seen at one of our fashionable stores the other day, and pronounced one of the most stylish of this season's productions, was purchased by a society belle for forty-five dollars.

It was one of those favorite models, a twenty-two inch frame, covered with maize chiffon, having a ruffle of pale lavender around the edge, set off by a band of mock jewels which were a perfect match to the ruffle. A handsome bow of lavender silk velvet ribbon was gracefully fastened on one side, and further added to the charming effect. The handle was of wood, beautifully carved.

Another exquisite shade was of changeable silk, shading red and green, particularly attractive on account of the handle, which was of pearl beautifully inlaid with gold, wrought in a very fine and artistic design and valued at forty dollars.

One of China silk, especially dainty and much admired, was of a delicate heliotrope in color, handsomely embroidered in the fleur de lis pattern, and trimmed with a ruffle of chiffon, with similar embroidery. The handle was of white ivory, also decorated with the fleur de lis. The price of this was thirty-five dollars.

A new shape introduced this season had every alternate rib shortened; the effect was such that one might suppose it had been out in a gale.

Very few of the high-class goods are now imported, American manufacture being considered equal if not superior to the foreign make.—Boston Globe.

What the World Turns On.

A well-known, eccentric old physician of this city was leaning across the fence that divides his yard from that of his next door neighbor, the other day, talking to a lady. After he had given expression to some of his oddities the lady laughingly remarked: "O, doctor, you're a crank." Drawing himself up pompously, the old doctor replied: "Yes, madam, but you must remember that the world turns on a crank."—Kansas City Times.

SCHOOL AND CHURCH.

—England is gradually approaching a system of elementary schools. The educational bill, which has passed the house of commons, is a long step in the direction of such a system.—N. Y. Independent.

—The membership of the Free church of Scotland is 340,000. The contributions last year amounted to about $3,-$3,200,000. The established church membership is about 558,000; the year's contributions about $2,100,000.

—Yale university will put $150,000 or $200,000 of its big bequest from the Fayerweather estate into a new building for the Sheffield scientific school. A feature will be the mechanical department, supplied with a 100-horse power engine.

—Rev. Dr. Carradine, of St. Louis, a few weeks ago preached a sermon against the wearing of jewelry, and as a result members of his congregation have placed jewels worth $1,000 on the collection plates to be melted into gold and applied for the benefit of the church.

—Miss Lilian V. Sampson, of Germantown, Pa., in the scientific department at Bryn Mawr college, has been nominated to the Bryn Mawr European fellowship for 1891-2. The college library has lately secured a valuable addition in the Semitic library of a French scholar recently deceased.

—The Zambesi Chief Lewanika has sent his eldest son Litia to Morija, in Basutoland, to receive Christian instruction. The chief has many excellent parts, and for some time has been on terms of friendship with M. Coillard, of the Paris Society of Missions, and Litia himself is a promising young man of Christian character.

—The Catholic missions in Bengal under the conduct of the Belgian Jesuits have been very successful. Commencing in 1881, the first year for which we have exact figures, we find the converts amounted to 16,149. In 1886 their numbers had increased to 20,000, and in 1888 these had advanced to 53,281. In 1881 baptisms numbered 378, in 1886 they had increased to 3,274, while in 1888 they had reached the total of 5,000.

—The bequest of $200,000 from the late Daniel B. Fayerweather to the Cooper Union art school for women has enabled that institution to double the number of pupils it can receive, making an increase from 350 to 700. The top floors of the institute are being enlarged to accommodate the new students. The library of the institute is less fortunate, and the trustees have made an appeal to the public for assistance.—Illustrated Christian Weekly.

—At the tenth international convention of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor, which met in Minneapolis recently, the general secretary, Mr. J. W. Baer, of Boston, presented a report containing many items of interest. According to this report there are now 16,274 societies regularly reported. One year ago the number was 11,013. These societies are not limited to the United States, 120 of them being in England, 829 in Canada, 82 in Australia, 30 in India, 12 in Turkey and 7 in China. Denominationally the societies are divived, 4,019 of them being connected with Presbyterian, 3,545 with Congregationalist, 2,381 with Baptist, 2,068 with Methodist churches. The total membership is 1,008,980, being an increase of 348,980 during the past year.—Philadelphia Evening Telegraph.

TWO SMALL FINANCIERS.

A Never Ending Flow of Lemonade on Tap and for Sale.

The East End acknowledges proprietory claim to a couple of small boys who are bound to become millionaires. The other day they went into partnership to sell lemonade. After spending ten cents for lemons and concoething a fluid that would make the circus product turn green with envy, they located on a corner and let out their musical voices:

"Here's yer fresh lemonade, only one cent a glass. It's made of pure lemons and pure water. Come, slack your thirst with the nectar of the tropics."

Every few moments they changed their song, but they had no difficulty in securing customers. Every time they sold a couple of glasses a little water was added to the "lemonade," and thus they had a never ending supply.

About an hour after they began operations the beverage was getting pretty warm, but an iceman came along, and while he carried a chunk of ice to the back door of an adjoining residence one of the boys negotiated with the wagon for a good-sized piece of ice. By the time the driver was back the boys had remodeled their tune.

"Here's your ice-cold lemonade. Walk up and squench your thirst. Only two cents a glass."

"Say, what did you raise the price fer? The ice didn't cost you nothing," said a prospective customer.

"What der ye take us fer, anyway," was the reply. "If you don't want to buy you don't need ter. We can dispose of the stock without you meddlin. D'ye think we no financiers?"—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Sorrows of Indian Mothers.

In talking of the girl wives of India Dr. Emma Brainerd Ryder says that the Indian mother, as she holds her little girl in her arms, is afraid lest its crying should disturb the unwilling father, his brothers, brothers, or the mother-in-law. She is afraid of all her surroundings, and this fear is imparted to the child. It is fear and suppression all the way from the dawn of existence to its extinction. When the child is five, six, seven or possibly ten years old and the day arrives for the little girl to be taken from her mother to be transplanted into the home of the husband, picture that mother as she sorrowfully gathers up her little wardrobe, perhaps one or two extra sarees and a few glass bangles of bright colors to please a child, makes them into a bundle, then sees her little girl carrie from her to a strange home, often to a life of scorn, of contempt, of abuse, perhaps to cruel death in a few short hours!—Chicago Tribune.

Not the Kind He Meant.

Some one was bragging to Jones of the amount of ancient and valuable bric-a-brac he had collected.

"You should have seen that spindle-legged table I picked up last week. It's four hundred years old if it's a day."

"Why, that isn't a patch to that Grecian bit of furniture in my study. Why, it's over two thousand years since it was made," replied Jones, not to be outdone.

"You're joking."

"Certainly not. Come over and see my multiplication table."—Judge.

The Sunshine of Smiles.

There is one kind of sunshine which it is needful to bring into every home, and that is the "sunshine of smiles." Next to the sunlight and warmth of heaven is that of a cheerful face. No one can long withstand its influence; no one can mistake it. A bright eye, an unclouded brow, a sunny smile, a loving word, all tell of the peace and joy that dwell within. One glance at such a face has lifted the mists and shadows from many a heavy heart and scattered the fog from many a burdened spirit. A bright, warm, cheerful face inside the home will drive away gloom and render it impossible for it to exist. The germs of disease, which may lurk at times in the most elegantly furnished room if kept dark, will vanish away before the bright and cheery sunlight. Open, therefore, the windows of your heart and let the sunshine in.—Quiver.

DELANO DIARY.

—See Conzet & Steward's new add this week.

—Splendid weather during county fair week.

—Don't fail to see the Bijou Theater Co., to-night.

—And. Hanseman and wife were visitors at the exposition this week.

—Prof. H. E. Crandall, Rockford's apiarist, was a GAZETTE caller Thursday.

—An inspector of insured property was making the rounds of the village on Monday.

—Aug. Berneck captured a fine brace of ducks on Monday. He says they were very toothsome.

—The Heinrich Brewing Co., lost a horse on Wednesday evening—the second since coming here.

—A fine mare 23 years old, belonging to Mrs. John Bain, died quietly in the barn on Monday night.

—Mrs. Charles Eppel and children have been taking in the sights at the Minneapolis exposition.

—Casper Janikula has laid a substantial sidewalk in front of his place of business on River street.

—If some of our correspondents would get their news in a day earlier we could do better by them.

—A number of our young people attended an invitation dance at Watertown on Wednesday evening.

—W. H. Stanley is the boss potato raiser. He had one on exhibition this week weighing three pounds.

—The Delano ball club plays the return game with the Watertown club at the latter place next Sunday.

—The Watertown and Delano bands rendered several fine selections from the band stand on Sunday afternoon.

—J. E. Brothers has moved with his family to Minneapolis, where he has rented rooms and expects to make his home.

—Threshing in this vicinity is getting pretty well finished up, and farmers are commencing to plow for next years crop.

—The Delano cornet band are furnishing music for the county fair to-day. They will be the guests of the Howard Lake band.

—A dancing party will be given at Hanover on Saturday evening. A number of young people from this village will attend.

—Lawrence Statko was hauling lumber this week for new buildings on his farm. Lawrence is one of our prosperous farmers.

—L. Deidrich took in the fair at Howard Lake on Wednesday. During his absence John Lohmiller took charge of his business.

—Fred. Adickes, who is doing considerable grain threshing in the vicinity, reports wheat going from twenty bushels up to thirty.

—Look out for the big announcement of Chas. Eppel next week. He proposes to give his customers extraordinary good bargains.

—Gustav Krieger has been speculating in old iron, and made a profitable investment in purchasing the old furnace at the school house.

—Several jockeys with their horses passed through the village on Monday on their way to Howard Lake to take part in the races at the fair.

—Dr. R. M. Walter, the veterinary surgeon, went to Watertown on Monday to doctor several sick horses. He reports no malarial troubles.

—Mrs. Wyendock who has been suffering for several months from a severe affliction is again able to be on her feet though not yet entirely recovered.

—Robt. Morris, our popular tonsorial artist, has friends who claim he is the best ball player in the county. It may be so, but that "third base" is no slouch.

—The teacher's examination held in the school house by the county superintendent on Tuesday, was attended by sixteen lady and one gentleman teachers.

—Corn is being cut and the poor farmer no longer comes forth in the morning shaking in his boots, or without them expecting to see the crop ruined by frost.

—Every farmer in the county should take the GAZETTE. It is a live paper, chuck full of good readable matter, and proposes to be better with each succeeding issue.

—E. F. Zeibarth was a GAZETTE caller on Tuesday. They say Ed. is so proud since he got his new brick machine that he is having springs put on his wheelbarrows.

—Notice the change in George P. Schaffer's advertisement. George is doing a rattling good business nowadays. Good goods, honest weight and fair dealing counts.

—We was glad to learn on visiting the school one day this week that considerable attention is being given to physiology and hygiene by at least one of the teachers, in accordance with the law.

—Call on William Kaspohl for "The Brave Five Hundred."

—Conductor Lee Cunningham is taking a two week's visit at Watertown.

—J. M. Walsh and Jno. Thayer, of the Bijou Theater Co., made our office a pleasant call.

—Elmer Coffin, of St. Peter, a nephew of ye editor, is learning the printing business in the GAZETTE office.

—An 8-year-old son of John Grafft, of Annandale, was kicked in the bowels by a horse on Wednesday.

—Max Nicolaus, of Sauk Centre, is working in the GAZETTE office for the present. Max is a first-class printer.

—The male members of the Bijou Theater Co., lent their aid in drawing the hook and ladder truck to the fire. Good for them

—Our millers desire us to inform the boys who come there to get pocket knives that a trap has been set for them—the boys.

—The Delano Model Roller Mills are rushing things this week. They have orders from Buffalo, Rockford, and Minneapolis to fill.

—E. Cleveland and Henry Baker, of Maple Plain, were visitors in our village this week. Mr. Baker came in with a load of rye, receiving 68cts per bushel.

—Rev. Mr. Eagle and wife came up this morning to visit Mr. Dahl before going to New York state where they expect to go soon. Mrs. Eagle's sister, Miss Annie Dahl, accompanied them.

—The ordinance of baptism was administered by Rev. Blackhurst last evening at the M. E. church, to Mary Allie Maxfield, Kittie May Johnson, Vinnie Chance, and Minerva Jane Mulford.

—On Monday morning a pheasant flew into town and lit on the roof of J. W. Lindsley's storehouse. Later in the day we learn that J. A. Brasie shot one in his yard. Who says game is not plenty about Delano.

John Siebel and John Kuchenmeister indulged in a foot race on Wednesday evening, with Aug. Begot as referee. Kuchmeister won easy, but it was fun to see Begot try to keep up in the race. He wasn't in it as referee.

—Sam Murphy, our popular drayman, reports a big rush of business in his line. Sam is one of the old Indian fighters and in early days was stationed at the fort at Sauk Centre. He might tell many a good Indian yarn.

—C. D. Fredericks, of Rockford, was a GAZETTE caller on Tuesday. Dan expects to occupy his fine new residence in a few days. He claims to have as fine a cellar as the county affords—just what every farmer should have.

—The Watertown ball club and a nine composed of young men of this village, played a match game on Sunday afternoon, resulting in a victory for the Delano boys. Only a few of the regular home nine played in the game.

—The Delano village council advertised for two week in two local papers for bids to put a new tin roof on the city hall, but on meeting found not a bid had been offered. McKinley tin seems to be too high for the Delano city hall roof.

—There was a meeting of the Methodists at their church on Monday evening, at which time arrangements were made and committees appointed to carry out the plans for having a conundrum supper on next Monday evening at the city hall.

—The GAZETTE has engaged the services of a practical printer and is now prepared to do job printing, such as envelopes, note heads, bill heads, posters, etc., at the shortest notice and at the lowest possible price. Bring your work along and get a neat job done.

—The drinking trough at the town pump should be securely fastened in some way to keep it from continually tumbling over. Only Monday a cow tipped it over and came near starting a runaway. Several parties have also received a foot bath while watering stock.

—The fire alarm was given at 10:30 to-day, and the hook and ladder company responded and with the citizens succeeded in confining the fire to the two barns of Nick Frank and David Briley. No water supply being in that part of town for the engine it was not brought out. It is not known how the fire started.

—Squire Billings and wife evidently believe in the adage "better be dead than be out of fashion," so on Monday while driving to the Watertown fair, and while near Riley Sturman's farm, turned horse, top buggy and all over by the roadside. As luck would have it everything was righted with injury to none, save quite a scare.

—The Bijou Theater Co., missed connection at Minneapolis and didn't arrive in time to play as advertised, but this evening and to-morrow night they will hold forth at the town hall in Delano. The troupe is composed of nine people, and will give an entertainment that will be first-class in every respect. You will miss a rare treat if you fail to see them.

—Dr. Brigham vs. Adam Mross, both of Waverly, was before Squire Billings here on Monday, M. A. O'Hair for plaintiff and W. E. Culkin, of Buffalo, for defendant. The case was a suit for balance due on a doctor bill for treatment to Mr. Mross' mother-in-law. The defendant took a change of venue and the case was sent to Justice J. H. Ferrell, of Woodland, to be tried next Saturday.

President D. R. Farnham, of Rockford, and Andrew Thompson, of Independence, were among those going to Howard on Tuesday to attend the county fair.

County Cullings.

T. F. O'Hair, late a canidate on the state Democratic ticket for clerk of court, was a passenger on the G. N. on Sunday to visit friends at Waverly. We have not heard Tom say but expect he would be willing to run again for that position.

Mr. W. E. Culkin, chairman of the Republican county committe, informs us that a grand Republican pow-wow is to be held at Buffalo, early in October with the Hon. C. K. Davis as orator of the occasion. We hope he will give our farmer friends who go to hear him some of his ideas on free binding twine, as he labored hard to bring about this much to be desired innovation in the tariff laws and but partially succeeded, getting a reduction on the article which the farmers have already noticed and about which the Republican papers have so much to say claiming the McKinley bill caused the reduction while Minnesota farmers know it was through Mr. Davis' efforts in the Senate that the tariff was reduced we would not be surprised if our protection bretheren, rather than yield one iota of the theory of protection by taking the tariff off of binding twine as Senator Davis advocated will do as they did with the Hon. Knute Nelson, leave him off from the programme at the next election, and put some straight laced protectionist up for his place in which case quite a number of prominent Republicans would be for the Alliance or Prohibition, maybe the Democratic nominee in preference.

Mr. John Grafft, of Annandale, has sold his farm to conductor Charles Matheu, of the Soo road. Mr. G., in company with his family, expects to visit his brother, I. H. and family, in the near future, and may conclude to take up his residence among us.

On Monday Mr. James M. Pratt, of Annandale, proprietor of the village, a single man aged about 55 years, went to the woods and returned to his home with some squirrels; towards evening he started out again, saying he had such good luck that he thought he would try again. On Tuesday morning Mr. Harris, who with his family occupied a portion of Mr. Pratt's residence, failing to find Mr. Pratt about the premises started out to search for him in the woods and soon found his prostrate form in the timber, inside the village limits, his 22-calibre Winchester was by his side containing an empty shell, and a bullet hole in the left temple told where the messenger of death had gained admission to a vital part.

PERSONALS.

Sylvester Cooper is carpentering at Howard Lake.

George Rupelius, of Rockford, was doing business in Delano on Tuesday.

T. F. O'Hair was among Sunday evening passengers bound for Waverly.

Mrs. C. W. Ingerson returned on Monday morning from a visit at Maple Plain.

Hon. C.G. Halgren, and family visited relatives in Delano on the first of the week.

I. H. Grafft, of Hamline, spent the first day of the week at home with his family.

Rev. Cawley, of Watertown took the train Sunday evening at this place, for Waverly.

Joseph VanEman left on Saturday for a visit with his brother, who was quite sick, in Pennsylvania.

Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher Ingerson, of Minnetrista, visited with John Cunningham and family on Sunday.

N. K. Coffin, who is superintending the construction of several buildings in Howard Lake Sundayed at home.

Mr. W. E. Culkin, the chairman of the Republican county committee was looking up things in Delano on Monday.

Miss M. E. Bennett, formerly a Delano teacher, was among those attending the teacher's examination on Tuesday.

E. E. Shrader shipped his baggage for the county fair on Tuesday. He represents our contemporary at that place.

The Watertown Cornet Band and the Watertown base ball club were among those spending Sunday in Delano.

Rev. John Doran, of Clearwater, was shaking hands with his numerous friends here on Tuesday evening and Wednesday.

Mrs. L. M. Rawson, of Litchfield, passed through Delano on Tuesday on her way home from a visit with old friends at Rockford.

Four of William Sturman's daughters have moved into the rooms over Maxfield's feed store and are attending the district school here.

Wright County Fair.

Wednesday was farmers' day. Quite a number of farmers from different parts of the county were present and with their wives and families took in the sights and had a good visit with each other. The officers seem to have done some hard work to make the fair a success, but when people persist in going there themselves without taking a display of their own (as the GAZETTE did along with others), they must not expect to see so big a fair as would be on the ground if every one contributed their mite toward making a good display. Yet quite a fine lot of horses were exhibited, and some good blooded stock, among others a half-sister to Axtel, who was sold for $105,000—more money than any other horse ever sold for.

Senator Hompe, of Otter Tail countr, was the orator of the day. He opened by saying that he would give an address of welcome, and was not going to talk of political subjects, but may touch on a few points. He congratulated the farmers on their good crops, and commiserates the friends across the water, but welcomes the good prices. Fairs used to be for sale, now for display of articles, to excite a spirit of emulation. Farmers of America are among our most progressive people—are a source of anxiety to politicians, are still supporting in idleness a great many; speculative boards of trade are reaping benefits of barvest. Like Solomon's saying of the lillies of the field, "they toil not, neither do they spin." The time will come when farmers will be the princes of the earth. The object of railroads seems to be to center trade in cities. We farmers ought to consider this. Human family suffers because cities are growing—do not like to take families to cities—natural for railroads to work for their own interests.—not here to prejudice any interests. It has become apparent that labor is not properly paid for. Many newspapers are not in sympathy with us; we ought to encourage those that are. Other professions, doctors, lawyers and others say wrong for farmers to organize, yet they all organize themselves. They tell us we should stay at home and raise more grain. When I was in the house and senate and any measure came up, I found delegates from these organizations came to lobby in their interests; still they say farmer's interests must go hap-hazzard.

(I realize you folks are having a hard time standing and listening to me.) This is the grandest nation; believe it should remain the asylum of the oppressed. Should see yeomanry of this country not oppressed. Capital should be looked after; $70,000,000 left to one individual too much. Million dollar fortunes are being built up at the expense of somebody; ought to cease. We are painfully cognizant of the fact that they are amassed largely by government privilege. When such things exist something is radically wrong. Some think time will come when the government will have to control railroads. The question seems to be coming to "whether the government shall control corporations or corporations control the government." A man is negligent who neglects the duties of his association. It is proper to have farmer associations; we ought to have more. We ought to be able to discuss the questions in which we are interested; should educate our children in them; no danger of carrying things to excess in this direction. We have it in our power to control all evils of which we complain. Let us think, educate ourselves; be a more independent and happy class; problems will be solved.

Snug little fortunes have been made at work for us, by Anna Page, Austin, Texas, and Jno. Bone, Toledo, Ohio. See out. Others are doing as well. Why not you? Some earn over $500.00 a month. You can do the work and live at home, wherever you are. Even beginners are easily earning from $5 to $10 a day. All ages. We show you how and start you. Can work in spare time or all the time. Big money for workers. Failure unknown among them. NEW and wonderful. Particulars free. H. Hallett & Co., Box 880 Portland, Maine

More Shoddy In It.

One phrase of McKinleyism is illustrated in the article of cotton hosiery. This has been mostly imported from Germany, as it has not been produced successfully in this country. The new tariff enlarged the old duty of 40 per cent. so that the present tariff tax on consumers is computed at about 55 per cent. This takes three or four million dollars from the consumers, and in addition to the increase of the tax it is found that a poor quality of goods is being introduced. The case is stated by a New York importer in this.

"We get the same stocking as before in appearance, but it is nothing but trash. Instead of the respectable two-thread yarns we were all so particular to get before, we now get a miserable single that has hardly strength enough to hold together while it is running through the looms."

This protection system is forcing the poor man into shoddy clothing, and even the cotton hosiery is to be miserable trash. No wonder the people stamp upon it as they discover its character.—St. Paul Globe.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, Sept. 19, 1891.

Secretary Foster, as shown by his latest move, is getting down to small change expedients in his efforts to get the money to meet the demands being made upon the treasury. Although he counts the fractional silver coin in the treasury as part of his available cash balance, nobody knows better than he that this money is not a legal tender, except in small sums, and he has had the United States treasurer prepare and send out a circular stating that banks and other financial institutions and also post offices will be furnished fractional silver in sums of $200 or more by express, free of charge, or by registered mail in sums or multiples of $50. This is a rather costly method of getting the eighteen or nineteen million dollars of fractional silver into circulation, but the money is of no use to the treasury now, except to swell on paper the total "available" cash on hand, and he probably realizes that something must be done, as already about half of the four and a half per cent. bonds have been presented for redemption, although it is but little more than two weeks since they became due.

Secretary Foster has promised the high commissioners of England and Germany that all tariff restrictions upon the importation of foreign goods intended for exhibition at the World's Fair shall be removed, either by a departmental ruling or by special acts of congress.

Ex-Representative Clements, of Georgia, is believed to have the inside track for appointment to the interstate commerce commission to succeed the late W. L. Bragg, of Alabama. Mr. Bragg made many personal friends in Washington while a member of the house sub-committee on appropriations for the District of Columbia.

Secretary Tracy has been trying to explain why it is that only old and worn out wooden vessels are in the Asiatic squadron which is supposed to take care of American interests in China. His explanation is just about as satisfactory as those made by other members of the cabinet about certain other queer things. Naval officers know why our new ironclads have been doing the seaside summer resorts while the old wooden vessels have made the United States the laughing stock of the naval officers of other powers which have first-class vessels in Chinese waters. It is because the officers on the new vessels all have a "pull," and they do not regard assignments to the Asiatic squadron as desirable.

Wright County Fair.

Our county fair was held last week at Howard Lake. The weather was fine, agricultural products this season are at their best, stock looks well, and people generally are quite contented and not hard to please. These coupled with the earnest efforts of the officers of the Agricultural Association could scarcely fail to bring about a good fair. The display of horses was excellent. Some fine cattle were on exhibition; the machinery and farm appliances were quite interesting features of the fair, while the farm products could not help but be fine. We learn through the kindness of the secretary, H. Tanner, Esq., that those entitled to premiums can have them by applying on or after next Monday, to the treasurer, Mr. McGrew, this being the earliest time allowed by the association for paying premiums.

Among those obtaining premiums for horses we notice the names of Dan Mast, Johnston Mealey, Nelson & Bergren, John Houchins, Austin Merriman, C. M. Buck, H. M. Dickey, Otto Ueker, L. Perra, D. McKenzie, John Mellon, F. B. Foltz, Jas. Bell, A. W. Hoar, Frank Foltz, John Ellis, Jerry Gardner, B. Anderson, Wm. Redman, M. M. Wooley, R. W. Holbrook, Jas. Dewees, John Pearson, Jas. Johnston and John O'Shea, whose 3-year-old Gambetta has for the third time taken first prize.

On Shetland ponies W. H. Hoar carried off all the prizes.

For cattle prizes were awarded C. H. Burwell, Henry Prigge, A. H. Woodruff, W. J. Schmming, Benj. Lee, J. Mealey, W. H. Hutchinson.

Prizes for sheep were awarded W. D. Thompson, A. W. Hoar, W. H. Hoar.

J. A. McVeety took the swine prizes.

In division C, Carl Luhman takes 6 prizes. Joseph Boswell for fence machine, Wm. Quinn, sewing machine: C. W. Taylor, carriage harness: F. M. Archer, fence machine.

Among others receiving prizes were: N. Folz, Rockford creamery, John Ellis, J. R. Armstrong.

Among the ladies the following were awarded prizes: Mesdames Curtis, H. F. Merriman, Plummer, Armstrong, Folz, Johnson, John Tracy, J. R. Armstrong, T. M. Woolley, and the Misses Mary Schimming and Ada Perra.

A. J. Rassett, Delano Eagle, Nathan Jones, E. M. Tousley, W. F. Smith, Aaron Reinmuth, Michael Folz, R. E. Wright, H. Merriman, Eli Shaver, J. Robinson, John Pugh, Henry Prigge, T. G. Holmes, T. B. Folz, R. E. Wright, John Robinson, John Pugh, and Miss B. Merriman and Mrs. Plummer also secured prizes.

Good Government.

ROCKFORD, Sept. 15 1861

To have lived when Rome was at her zenith, is all that a Roman could have desired. To live at the zenith of the United States, is quite all an American can ask. It is not the function of government to create perfect citizens, but it is the duty of citizens to promote perfect government. Owing to the general character of our government, we cannot expect it to become better than the people who compose it. Much shame is reflected on the citizens of any government who need a police to lead them by the saloon, who need a police to escort women and children through the duties of every day life. This is human depravity, born and bred in the filth of our great cities. It cannot be otherwise. Contaminated air, stale vegetables and fruits, and impure water cannot be conducive of good health or to the developement of mind or body.

The experimental qualities of this government are not detrimental to its future prosperity and while it is stable in principle, it is more or less in influenced by foreign immigration. Unless governed by selfish motives, all American born citizens should be loyal to the United States. The stars and stripes should ever be suggestive as thier guardian of Liberty. It is the land of their nativity, the hope of posterity, and dearer than all it is the resting place of our ancestry.

Poeple are not given to finding fault with good government, unless they are entirely ignorant of the functions of government. Our supreme judges our circuit judges, our district judges are little charged with misconduct.

In proportion as our courts are made up of the people at large, they are no better than the poeple who compose them. All parties ride upon the backs of political hobbies. Party delusion is party buncome. Then let us have more noble men and women engaged in perfecting the government, for the government can never be better than the poeple governed.

Every person who loathes after government money he has not honestly earned is a cancer in the government. Every person who haunts the candidate for boodle money, from the time of his nomination until his election, is another cancer in the government.

Every candidate who is a dispenser of boodle money (if elected) is a cancer tied to the government.

But thanks be to progress, in New York, every candidate has to file an affidavit of his expenses, and itemize his bills. The people want to know whether a candidate is elected by money or by the people. We expect to see reform come, in a measure, with the Australian system.

And, while Washington strongly admonished us against the dangers of excessive party spirit, that government then might become merely organized party, we have certainly been guilty of the crime many times. Washington's admonitions were to the people, as excessive party spirit may develope in any party.

The democratic party cannot look back with pride to the firing upon fort Sumpter, neither to the views (selfish they maintained upon state rights; they were guilty of excessive party) spirit. The republican party can look back to this time with more of a justification, but with no little regret.

Three millions of our bravest able bodied men were called into the field and after three years of service, discharged with the seeds of disease planted in their blood.

Posterity must suffer. Money cannot pay the ravages of war.

Let us remember Washington's admonition to beware of excessive party spirit, let us remember that government will not be better than the people of the government. That it is only indirectly a function of the government to make good people, but it is a duty of the people to make good government.

Let civics be thoroughly taught in our public schools: let parents and teacher unite in working for the highest development of the child; let them realize that they are co-workers in education.

Parents do not have confidence enough in our teachers, they are not well enough acquainted with each other. Teacher and parent have the same general welfare of the child at heart. Parents have a work to do in aiding teachers in school government.

As charity begins at home, so should good government. Good home management and good school district management have their influence for good on every child they teach.

For God and Home and Humanity.

EDITED BY MRS. E. A. STACY.

INTENSIFIED MY PATRIOTISM.

"What has the White Ribbon done for me?"

It has given me a better knowledge of hygenic law, making me wiser and more thoughtful in my physical culture. It has enlarged my intellectual vision by bringing me in contact with those persons, things and thoughts that are inspiring, elevating and educational. It has deepened my religious experience by compelling me to seek diligently for that strength by which we conquer, Christ in us.

Studying our law-makers, law-breakers and our laws and their non-enforcement, has intensified the sacredness of law and the enormity of its non-enforcement.

It has brought me into a closer relationship with sinning and suffering humanity, with the noble hearts that are beating bravely and heroically in this great struggle of the right against the wrong, and most of all with Him who said, "For whosoever shall do the will of my Father which is in heaven, the same is my brother, and sister and mother."

It has given me a greater love for humanity, and a greater desire to help save the fallen. Loving the white ribbon, or what it represents, as we do, we want others to love it also. It makes us more unselfish, and impels us to let everybody know the great truths we have learned regarding the effects of alcohol and narcotics upon the body, mind and soul.

Whatever elevates the indiyidual improves the home. It has furnished the home with choice literature, and brought to us many friends who are "waging this peaceful war" with us; and whose presence is a benediction.

It has brought also many a tempted and fallen one to us for help, and thus we have been enabled to take Christ more fully into our home, because we do these things "for the love of Christ and in his name.

It has intensified my patriotism on account of the dangers that threaten our country through the traffic and use of strong drink, and because of the knowledge that the white ribbon is helping to lift our nation nearer the eternal truths that evolve from the God of nations; and that the white ribbon army is the interposition that will keep our country from sinking into greater depths of degradation because of strong drink.

A lady was walking down one of the streets of the city of Manchester, when she was suddenly addressed by a little boy in these word: "Say, lady, where am I going to sleep to-night?" The look of surprise on the lady's face at being thus accosted was evidently noticed by the child, and he explained: "You have on that little white ribbon. That's why I come to you. I haven't any place to sleep to-night." Before the child lost sight of that white ribbon he did have a place to sleep.

Because of the white ribbon a beautiful Home, called appropriately the "Mercy Home" has been established in our State, which is doing untold good to scores of sinning and suffering women and girls.—MRS N. H. KNOX.

THE recent Papal decision, that a marriage ceremony by a Protestant clergyman is to be recognized as valid by the Catholic Church, is in accord with justice and common sense. A decision to the contrary would have opened a ready door for villainy to enter. All who believe in the honor and sanctity of the family relation will approve the judgment of Leo XIII.—N. Y. Press.

CORRESPONDENCE

ST. MICHAELS.

EDITOR GAZETTE.—Your worthy correspondent from this place in your last issue of the GAZETTE, informs the inhabitants of our village, that the free beer club, which was supposed to be out of existance is again at work and that if the same would be left unmolested, it would in its original way as of late prove to be detrimental to the pocket books of unwary visitors especially those arriving at night.

The correspondent had a new arrow but the propelling force was not strong enough to carry the same to its aim, and so he will have to reload and fire again.

It is generally believed by the public that the impounding of said horse was not such a crime as the correspondent of last week would like to show. So Mr. Cor. please consider each and every side of the story and if your judgement is of any standing, the contrary of which you show, then you must come to the concluslon that you are a "mile" off.

The council thought to be spared of this "free beer business" which was supposed to have been buried a year ago, but if Mr. Cor. likes to renew it they will give him the part of the hare, and act the part of the hedgehog themselves.

Moral.—If any one intends to stop much at St. Michaels get yourself mules, teach them the art for which they are generally known, and you will not have to go home per pedes "hold on that is latin something else goes with that" per pedes apostatorum There it is a little latin does come handy once in a while and come back and settle with the poundmaster.—A reader of the GAZETTE.

The republican pow wow will take place at Buffalo on October 10th.

MINNEAPOLIS had a $250,000 fire on Thursday evening. Eighteen firemen were injured, one it is feared, fatally. An elevator, 50,000 bushels of wheat, ten buildings more or less injured, seven freight cars and a quantity of wood burned. The fire originated at the corner of Third-st., and ninth avenue south.

Cramer's Meat Market.

A first-class meat market is a blessing in every well regulated town, and Frank Cramer is furnishing that blessing. Mr. Cramer understands his business well, and when purchasing stock for his market is sure to buy only that which will give satisfaction to his customers. His porterhouse, pork and beef steaks, his bacon, hams and sausages, are fresh and as good as can be found in the market. Of vegetables he keeps a variety. Remember he makes a specialty of supplying threshing crews. He will give particular attention to the village trade and invites customers to call and see him.

She has passed the speedy Hudson-river passenger steamer Mary Powell, crowded to her best though the latter was, and then the little $65,000 marvel went around the stern of the Powell and passed her again. The Vamoose made over twenty-six miles an hour to do it, and still didn't do all her engines were capable of.

QUEEN VICTORIA is said to have made use for years of a mechanical device to enable her to rise in her carriage and bow to her enthusiastic subjects. Very strong springs are arranged under the carriage seat, and when the procession moves she can, by simply pressing a button at her side, be elevated into the attitude of acknowledgment as often as the cheers of the lookers-on require. These might be called "mechanical bows," but the queen furnishes a very natural accompaniment of smiles.

EX-QUEEN ISABEL, of Spain, heard the other day that a Spaniard who had once tried to take her life was in Paris, dying of hunger. "Send him five hundred francs," said Isabel to her secretary. The unhappy man did not wish to kill me, but the party I represent. Be good, now, and do what I ask."

WHILE ancient maiden ladies, publicists and statesmen are evolving devices to prevent eligible male persons from continuing bachelors, they have overlooked the point that marriage is not a failure in promoting length of life. A magazine writer collates much data in support of the averment that "marriage is a life preserver," and insists that "if longevity is desirable, then it is better that we should marry than remain bachelors; for it appears that at every age, from twenty to eighty-five, the death rate of the benedicts is very much smaller than that of their unmarried brethren."

IT is reported that the cabs of Paris are to be fitted with slot machines, enabling the passenger who drops in ten centimes to obtain an insurance policy available for the time during which the the cab has been hired. If the passenger is killed his heirs get 5,000 francs; should he be absolutely incapacitated by accident, 1,500 francs; or if the injury is just sufficiently severe to keep the rider from work for a month he receives 500 francs. "There's millions in it" for the genius who will so modify this scheme that it will insure immunity from extortionate charges on the part of the cab driver.

WHAT an unconscious contrast is presented in the news dispatches; in one place chronicling the bountiful harvests of western America, which are fairly bursting granary doors, and in another telling, for example, how in the Russian province of Volga women and children wander exhausted about the market places, crying for food. But while with true Yankee susceptibility to distress wherever encountered Americans sympathize with stricken Europe they cannot forget their own good fortune, which will enable them not only to be prosperous beyond expectation, but also to be generous.

LATER.

Confessed Murder.

ST. PAUL, Sept. 23.—Mrs. J. M. Crite of the West side was yesterday arrested for murder, having voluntarily confessed to the crime of poisoning her husband.

On Sunday, Aug. 23, Eric Crite, a well known and fairly well-to-do Scandinavian residing at 397 Clinton avenue, died, and was quietly buried. The community paid no special attention to the circumstance, believing it to be merely the natural sad incident of human existence. Yesterday Mary Crite, widow of the deceased, startled the community by confessing that she murdered her husband by administering poison to him. She was at once arrested by Capt. Walsh, in charge of the Ducas street station, assisted by Detective Hurley, and locked up at the station.

EUROPE'S CROPS.

They Are Much Shorter Than at First Reported—Foreign Powers Alarmed at the Prospect of Famine—America's Surplus Can't Supply the Demand.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—An exhaustive study of the world's food supply in the forthcoming number of the American Agriculturist emphasizes facts of grave importance to both America and Europe. It declares that the half has not been told about the European shortage in breadstuffs, which not even a bountiful crop this year would have relieved.

Continental powers, especially Russia, suppress the facts so far as possible. In many Russian provinces the scarcity of food became pronounced as far back as February last. In the Konstantinovka district many families have not cooked a meal since Easter, but subsist on bread, soaked rye, grain, etc., bestowed in charity. The prohibition of rice exports is followed by a ukase forbidding the shipment of bran and other cereal cattle foods.

The astounding shortage of Russia's yield of rye, announced a month since by the ministry of finance, proves even greater than the most extravagant estimates, and effectually obliterates all possibility of Russia exporting any of her scant wheat crop. That eastern Germany is in practically the same plight admits of no doubt.

The European reserves that have heretofore eked out insufficient harvests are everywhere exhausted. The parade made by Russia of the existence of such stores in the Baltic provinces is done for effect to convey the impression that military stores are abundant. Such reserves are of small importance. Indeed, the danger of famine is destined to spare Europe the horrors of war for fully twelve months hence.

Accepting the largest estimates of production, both at home and abroad, and even assuming that the United States and Canada can export 225,000,000 bushels, there is a deficit in the world's food supply of at least 200,000,000 bushels of wheat and rye, with a possibility of the shortage being twice as great. Added to this is the almost total failure of the potato crop in Ireland and a serious curtailment in the yield of potatoes on the continent. Even with the utmost economy of distribution and an unheard of consumption of American maize, grave distress is before the masses of Europe.

Enormous exports of wheat and flour from the United States in August prove that Europe regards the situation as worse than it has yet been painted. Otherwise why should she buy in a single month, close upon the harvest, nearly half as much wheat as she took from the United States during the entire first eight months of the year following one of our largest wheat crops and a period of bedrock prices?

For the first time in years wheat, bran and middlings are being exported to Europe thus early in the season. These circumstances are accepted as the strongest possible reason for believing prices of wheat are at present unnaturally low. The paper quoted looks for an advance in all cereals as soon as Europe realizes the limited extent of the world's actual supply. Every bushel of high-grade wheat is to-day worth fully one dollar on the farm where it grew.

ODD FELLOWS MEET.

The Sovereign Grand Lodge Convenes in St. Louis—An Imposing Parade.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 22.—The first day of the twenty-second conclave of the Sovereign Grand Lodge Independent Order of Odd Fellows opened with a heavy mist enveloping the city. Soon, however, the mist cleared away. It is estimated that 50,500 odd fellows and their families are in the city, besides many other thousands who have come simply as spectators of the pageant. The streets presented a lively and animated spectacle. Everywhere and in all directions could be seen the golden-braided uniforms and the swaying of purple plumes of the cantons and the regalias of the lodges.

Along the route of the parade the streets were lined with spectators. Fully 10,000 odd fellows were in line.

Tributary to the conclave of the sovereign grand lodge at the masonic temple degrees were conferred on about 300 odd fellows by Deputy Grand Master W. F. Maring. Grand Sire Campbell declared the seventy-second annual gathering opened and Grand Chaplain J. W. Venable, of New York, invoked the Divine blessing. There was a wild cyclone of applause as Grand Sire Campbell arose to make his annual report. The number of odd fellows initiated last year, the report reads, was 68,000. The net increase in the United States and Canada during the last twelve months is 37,000. Total membership, 672,339. Revenue for 1890-91 is $7,244,227. The pecuniary benevolence distributed was $4,000,000. New grand lodges have been formed in Indian territory, Cuba and Japan. Mr. Underwood referred to the growing popularity of the degree of Rebekah, which now numbers 132,000 ladies.

At the exposition building on Fourteenth street in the evening were conducted the exercises of welcome, which consisted of cordial addresses by Gov. Francis on behalf of the state and Mayor Noonan on behalf of the city. Rev. J. B. Jewell, grand master and grand patriarch, responded on behalf of the order, and replies were also made by the deputy grand sire and others. The entertainment included the conferring of the decoration of chivalry by Lieut. Gen. John C. Underwood.

U., has issued a call for the second annual convention of the union to be held in Association hall, Brooklyn, N. Y., November 10 to 15, inclusive. Delegates to the convention from organized states are chosen upon the basis of one for each hundred paying members, and in unorganized states or territories 100 paying members or fraction over fifty are entitled to one delegate.

Ex-Senator Whitthorne Dead.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Sept. 22.—Ex-Senator W. C. Whitthorne, of the Seventh Tennessee district, died at his home in Columbus Monday, aged 66. He served six terms as congressman and was appointed to the United States senate as a democrat, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of H. E. Jackson. He took his seat April 26, 1886, and was elected when the legislature met to fill out the unexpired term, receiving the unanimous nomination of his party. His term as senator expired March 3, 1887. He had been previously elected to the house of representatives in the Fiftieth congress and was reelected to the Fifty-first congress.

LYNCHED BY A MOB.

DARLINGTON, Wis., Sept. 22.—Anton Siebolt, who Wednesday of last week murdered James Meehan near this city, was taken from the jail Monday by a mob and lynched. Friday evening of last week the friends of Meehan gathered in the city for the purpose of hanging Siebolt, but the sheriff hearing of their designs put the prisoner in a carriage and took him to the poorhouse, kept him there all night, and in the morning drove to Dunbarton, put the prisoner on a train, took him to Monroe and lodged him in jail. His examination was set for Monday, and, fearing no danger, the prisoner was returned to this city, arriving on the 11:10 a. m. train. During the morning hours friends of the murdered man, singly, in couples and small groups, entered the city, but remained scattered throughout the city, and did not attempt to meet at any rendezvous. When the train bearing the murderer rolled into the city, although there was a large crowd at the depot, there was no disturbance, and not a single threat was heard. After the prisoner had been lodged in jail a crowd began to collect there, but the uninitiated supposed they were drawn there by idle curiosity, and no attention was paid to them.

Sheriff Lindsay and his deputy, John Hamilton, were eating dinner in the dining-room and Siebolt in his cell had just finished his repast, when suddenly with a wild yell the crowd made a rush for the jail. Hamilton was immediately overpowered, but Sheriff Lindsay sprang upstairs and for a short time succeeded in holding the crowd at bay, but he was overpowered, tied, carried into a room and guarded. With a sledge the crowd then battered off the lock of the cell in which Siebolt was confined, threw a rope around his neck, and with a triumphant yell dragged him down the stairs into the street, and leading him to a tree threw the rope over a limb, drew him up, and held him there until he was dead. The avengers then quietly dispersed, and within thirty minutes all were out of the city on their way home. Siebolt's remains were cut down and turned over to the undertaker. In the evening at 5 o'clock his body was buried in the potter's field.

Last Wednesday Siebolt, who was a farm hand about 23 years of age, brutally murdered James Meehan, a young farmer. The two men had been drinking together in Darlington and were partially intoxicated when they started home. When about a mile from town an altercation arose. Siebolt threw Meehan from the wagon, tramped on his prostrate form, and finished his brutal crime by beating his victim's head to a jelly with a wagon wrench.

Public sentiment is all with the lynchers. Siebolt was a desperate character, who is credited with having contributed to the death of one brother and made a desperate assault upon another brother. His body was taken to the courthouse and a coroner's jury was at once impaneled, but as the sheriff, who is the principal witness, was exhausted by his struggles with the mob, the inquest was postponed until Wednesday. Most of the leaders of the mob are known, but no arrests have been made and it is improbable that any will be. There have been several murders in the county during the last few years and no adequate punishment has been meted out, which fact served to enrage the people and to nerve them to this lawless act.

A BUNDLE OF BILLS.

It Is Taken by Thieves from a London Bank—No Clew to the Robbers—The Amount Stolen Is About $750,000.

LONDON, Sept. 22. — The banking world of this city has just been startled by the announcement that an important bank robbery has taken place in the city. The institution that has suffered is the London and Westminster bank (limited), No. 41 Lathbury, E. C., an important establishment having over fifteen branch houses in this city. The money stolen, it would appear, consisted of a large parcel of bills remitted from the country banks to the London and We tminster bank. The thief or thieves must have cleverly watched for the proper opportunity to accomplish the robbery and to have gained access to an apartment near the main entrance to the bank. This apartment was easy of access from the street, and the parcel of bills is supposed to have been stolen while the bank officials were busily engaged in another apartment in going over the accounts of last week's settlement. Both Mr. William Astle, the town manager of the bank, and Mr. H. F. Billinghurst, the country manager, decline to make any statement for publication as to the actual loss incurred by the London and Westminster bank, but it is currently reported the amount stolen is not less than $750,000, and that it may amount to as much as $1,250,000. The bank officers, the city police authorities and the criminal investigation department of Scotland Yard are putting forth the utmost exertions in order to effect the capture of the thieves.

Five Lives Lost.

NEWBURG, N. Y., Sept. 22.—Andrew Potosnok, wife and babe, Slavs, and two Polish friends, brickyard employes, left Hampton, near this city, Monday morning in a rowboat. They rowed south to Low Point. When within a few hundred feet of Low Point dock the boat was upset through carelessness and every occupant was thrown out and drowned. The people did not make scarcely any fight for life. Men inshore saw the party upset and hastened to their rescue, but before they reached the overturned boat each of the party had gone down.

Seventeen Horses Suffocated.

CHICAGO, Sept. 22. — A two story frame building at 202 West Lake street burned Monday night. It was occupied by a coal and wood dealer. The basement was used as a stable and in it were twenty-two horses. Five were saved, the other seventeen being suffocated. The loss on building and horses is $25,000; fully insured.

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS

TRIED TO BOIL KEROSENE.

A Dreadful Accident Caused by a Minnesota Woman's Mistake.

A terrible accident occurred at the home of John Baumchen in Rush City, whose wife had just died. The body had been prepared for burial and placed in the parlor. Mrs. Potter, sister of Mrs. Baumchen, put a boiler on the stove containing what she supposed to be water, but which proved to be ten gallons of kerosene which had been emptied into the boiler from a leaking can. The oil soon began to boil and in ten minutes exploded, setting the house on fire in a dozen places. The flames soon enveloped the parlor and set on fire the corpse and the coffin, the lid of which had not been fastened. Frank and Philip Baumchen, sons of the dead woman, rushed through the flames and tried to secure the body but were driven back. John Baumchen, another son, rushed in, and grasping the remains ran through a sheet of fire, his clothes being burned from his body and his hands and face burned to a blister. He would die. Mr. Baumchen, Sr., and Miss Lizzie Stenger jumped from a second-story window, the latter being rendered unconscious by her bruises. The house was burned to the ground in twenty minutes.

New Railway Facilities.

The committe appointed at the recent mass meeting of citizens in Duluth to draft a scheme for terminal railway facilities for the benefit of all roads entering Duluth has reported. The report provides for the construction of a road from Fond du Lac to the Lester river and down to Minnesota point. Each railroad lessee must pay an annual rental of 3 per cent. of the net cost of the portion used, provided the annual income shall not exceed 10 per cent. of the cost of construction and equipment. Charges are to be no higher than in Douglas county, Wis., (West Superior) for the same service. It is proposed to expend $1,200,000 in the construction of the line.

Steamboat Owners Angry.

Mississippi steamboat men at St. Paul are very wroth because, as they allege, the river is being manipulated in the interests of lumbermen. No boats were running north of Davenport, Ia., and the trouble lies in the closing of the dams and the upper reaches of the river. When the log owners want to drive down a lot of logs the dams are opened and the logs floated. Then the dams are closed until another drive is ready. In this way the water is kept at so low a stage most of the time that boats are unable to run.

A Child Burned to Death.

A 6-year-old daughter of Jesse Harmer, living west of Faribault, while playing near an old burning building was burned to death. Her clothing caught fire and her mother attempted to rescue her child by tearing off as much clothing as she could, but of no avail, for the child died half an hour afterward. While Mrs. Harmer was trying to reach her child she herself was terribly burned. Should she live both her hands would have to be amputated.

Tremendous Yield of Oats.

J. S. Niles, a farmer residing 4 miles north of Hector, Renville county, threshed his oats and was considerably surprised at the result. He had eight acres, and threshed an average of 99½ bushels to the acre, a total of 796 bushels by measure. The oats weighed 43 pounds to the bushel, making a total yield by weight off the eight acres sown, 868 bushels, or 108 bushels to the acre.

Lost $2,000 Worth of Diamonds.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Mitchell, of Lexington, Ky., were guests of the Spalding hotel in Duluth, and when on her way to the Omaha depot, two blocks from the hotel, Mrs. Mitchell dropped from her dress pocket a purse containing $2,000 worth of diamonds, besides $100 in money. All efforts to find the diamonds had proved unavailing.

ANCIENT CORN JUICE.

Commodore Mason's Reminiscences of a Famous Old Whisky Cask.

"Speaking of whisky," said Commodore Mason, as he pushed back from his weather-beaten brow the Panama hat that forms a protection from vagrant flies, and meditatively stirred the brimming glass of ice, sugar, mint and a goodly proportion of old Bourbon, which combine to form the seductive "mash," "I have drunk in the last sixty years of my life liquor of every age, price and kind, from the wine of 'the twelve apostles,' at Bremen, valued at eight hundred dollars per drop, to that of Samshu, China, at twenty cash, equal to two cents per gallon. But in no land or clime have I found anything to approach some old corn whisky drawn from a cask in the spirit-room of the old ship of the line Columbus.

"When the Columbus was launched from the Washington navy yard in 1819 and fitted out for a cruise in the Mediterranean, as prohibition was unknown and her crew of one thousand men and officers were entitled to two gills of grog daily, it was necessary to provide several thousand gallons of corn juice for the expedition. The cask containing the liquor consisted of a number of two hundred-gallon barrels arranged in a riding-tier, and one old monarch of a cask holding three hundred gallons, which was stored away in the run under the magazine. As the provisions and liquors were replenished at every port where our government had a storehouse, and the three hundred-gallon cask was too inaccessible to be broached until the riding-tier was exhausted, the vessel returned to the United States with this cask still unopened. When the ship was put out of commission and provisions moved it was thought unnecessary to remove the large cask of whisky, as it was unwieldy, and the spirit room was secured, as well as a vigilant keeper on board to look out for its safety.

"In 1845 the Columbus sailed under Commodore Biddle on a cruise around the world, and while passing through the Straits of Pangoriang it was discovered to the dismay of all that the riding-tier casks were dry. After much labor the stores around the three-hundred-gallon cask were removed, and after twenty-six years of tossing around the whisky was released. When the whisky was purchased it cost about eighteen cents per gallon, but I have never taken into my mouth anything like that whisky when it was drawn. It poured like thin oil and was as smooth to the throat as glycerine. I was in charge of the spirit-room, and, though only eighteen, could and often did drink half a tumbler of it undiluted without being made tipsy. Here, boy, julep for two!"—Washington Post.

Wide Awake for October

Has a pleasure in store for all young lovers of English literature in the form of a narrative by Miss C. H. Garland called "The Maidens of the Lakes" (Dorothy Wordsworth, Edith Southey, and Sara Coleridge), lovely girls, to whom Wordsworth addressed his poem, "The Triad;" with portraits of the three girls, and other illustrations. "The Trouble Grandpa Nature had with the Horse," by L. J. Bates, "Bee-Hunting," by Rowland E. Robinson, and "A Joint Snake," by E. Olin, are three peculiarly interesting Natural History articles. "A Night with Russian Wolves," a blood-curdling true story by Lieut.-Col. Thorndike, "Jessie's Chickens," a home-life story by Hattie Tyng Griswold, "Edith's Guinea-Pig," a travel story by Esther George, and "Bronson Company (Limited)," another home-life story by J. H. Jamieson, are very entertaining. A Moqui folk-tale of "The Genesis of Earth and Moon," a Norse folk-tale of "Why the Sea is Salt," the "Margaret-Patty Letter," the "Drawing of the Child Figure" (Miss Rimmer's art-paper) are readable and instructive. Margaret Sydney's Peppers Serial is intensely interesting this month. "Men and Things" is full of good original anecdotes, and there are many readable poems and enjoyable pictures, puzzles and the Children's Letter-Box. $2.40 a year, 20 cents a number. D. Lothrop Company, Boston.

A woman who can see.

She's the woman who gets well. It's the woman who won't see and won't believe who has to suffer.

And it's needless. There's a medicine—a legitimate medicine—that's made to stop woman's suffering and cure woman's ailments. It's Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It's purely vegetable and perfectly harmless—a powerful general, as well as uterine, tonic and nervine, imparting vigor and strength to the whole system. For periodical pains, weak back, bearing-down sensations, nervous prostration, and all "female complaints," it's a positive remedy. It improves digestion, enriches the blood, dispels aches and pains, melancholy and nervousness, brings refreshing sleep, and restores health and strength.

No other medicine for women is guaranteed, as this is. If it fails to give satisfaction, in any case, the money paid for it is refunded. You pay only for the good you get. On these terms it's the cheapest.

But more than that, it's the best.

'TWAS the brightest day that ever anyone saw. My wedding-day. The 1st of June, 1772. I never shall forget the day or the date.

We were to be married in the little stone church, on the hill—Ralph Hollister and I—and they had dressed me in my wedding dress, and bade me look at myself and see how pretty I was. Well—but that is not for me to say. Only I did not feel as if I knew myself standing there all white, with a veil on my head and white roses in my hand. We couldn't get orange-blossoms, and we were all glad, I think. I know I was as happy as the angels are in Heaven.

You should have seen the picture from our door. One side the green woods, the other the green prairie—like a sea it looked with the wind sweeping its long grass gently up and down, as waves rise and fall, and just eighty little houses and then barns gathered together and the stone church on the hill and the schoolhouse below it. It was called Hope Settlement, and it was prosperous and others were coming out to us shortly, and in so small a place we were all friends, and everyone was bidden to the wedding, and everyone came. We walked to the church, and I walked beside Ralph, and the rest came after, arm in arm, with many a joke and many a laugh. The minister and his wife and five little girls in white muslin gowns were already at the church. So was the old man who kept it tidy, and a wagon full of men, passing by us to clear a place farther on, had stopped to see the wedding. Before we went in my father invited them all to come over and share the supper and the dance, and they thanked him kindly and said they would if their rough dress might be excused, for they had no holiday clothes with them; and so we went into the church; and then all were silent and reverential, and we two stood before our good Parson Tyler and promised to cleave unto one another, in good report or evil report, in sickness or in health, until death did us part; and the pastor kissed me upon my forehead, and my parents took me in their arms, and all the folks came about to greet me as a wife, and I was no longer Prudence Lee but Prudence Hollister; and away again along the footpath that cut a brown way through the green grass from the church to the settlement, every woman with her gown over her arm, every man with his gun over his shoulder.

No, I make no mistake. In 1772 men always took their guns to church with them on Sundays, and at any time when there was a meeting there or a wedding; for, look you, there was never any telling when the redskins would be upon a place.

They were always ready to kill and to make prisoners. They revenged on those who would gladly have been at peace with all the cruel treatment they had had from wicked pale faces; and once revenge fills the heart of a savage it goes with him to his grave. Yes, it goes down to his children, and rankles in the heart of his great-grandchildren. There is no forgiveness in a heathen soul.

But Hope Settlement had been spared so far. We had been very quiet and harmless, it is true, but that was no reason. We were out of the way of the worst tribes, and not in plain sight of the paths they mostly took; and we were not in terror, only prudent in keeping ourselves ready for defense; and once home the guns were all stacked outside the door and we had our feast. Simple enough, but we were healthy and happy and not used to great dainties. They drank my health in cider, and they wished me all the happiness the world could give and Heaven after it; and then the dance began.

We had a contra-dance, and I led it with Ralph. I stood there smiling, joyous, full of hope, without a fear in my mind, when suddenly from the crowd outside the door came a cry that froze the blood in my viens:

"The Indians! The Indians are upon us!"

I clung to Ralph. The world grew black before me. Then all was hurry and bustle. The young women, white with terror, gathered their children together; old women cried to God to help us; men flew to their weapons; and, oh, the scene that followed! But I will not try to describe it; I could not do it even now without losing my senses for the time, as I did then. I see the painted faces of the fiends; I see my mother's eyes and feel her gray hair dropping from her comb over my arms as I held her close.

"Your father!" she gasped. "They will kill your father!"

I dragged her down into the cellar below the house; many of the women and children crouched there. We heard the sounds of the firing, the shrieks of the red fiends, the cries and groans of the wounded. One moment I cried: "Ralph!" The next: "Father!" How long it lasted none of us could ever tell; but there was silence at last, and feet came over the floor and down the ladder to the cellar—my father, with his head bound in a handkerchief, but alive—able to walk.

"They had the worst of it! They had the worst of it this time!" he said, and fainted in our arms.

And there were other men who found their women folk and clasped them to their hearts, but my Ralph did not come to me. I knew he would not from the first. I knew my doom was written when that cry: "The Indians are upon us!" smote my ear.

Well, death had come to some, and some were missing, carried off to be killed more barbarously, to be tortured before they died. My Ralph was among these—my Ralph. But many Indians lay dead also, and they had been bravely withstood, and had the worst of it in numbers slain, as my father said. All the village was in grief, for we were like one great family, but each mourns his own. I mourned Ralph—my Ralph. There was no hope of mercy, as the day had gone. They had left too many braves upon the ground to spare their prisoners, and yet it seemed to me, day by day, hour by hour, for a long while, as though Ralph might return. Not a figure came along the prairie or over the brow of the hill but I fancied it was he, until at last despair seized upon me.

Oh, I leave it to those who have suffered as I did to know what I felt then. As for others to whom such grief has never come, they cannot understand. God grant they never may. And while our hearts break the years go on all the while, and the skies are blue, and the spring flowers bloom.

How many moons grew full and waned? How many dark nights through which I wept incessantly? How many harvests were gathered? How many times did young flowers spring up in the young grass, and the winter come with its snows and sleet-storms? Enough to make my elder sister's little daughter seventeen years of age—she was but ten on my wedding day—and to bring her to her own marriage eve.

There had been weddings, of course, but not in our own family, and I had been to none; but now I must go to Annie's. The settlement was larger; the safety greater. The men were never without their guns, but they had had no reason to use them for some time. Did they know how the memories trooped upon me all that time when they were making little Annie's wedding clothes and talking of her happiness? Just so they talked of mine seven years before—seven years before.

I had put on a black dress and a widow's cap when I gave up all hope that Ralph was living, and nothing else seemed right for me to wear. My heart within me was like a lump of lead, but I said nothing. Only, as I climbed the hill with the rest, I said to myself: "Ah! if they only came here, following me in my coffin, with my hands crossed upon my heart and that heart at rest, beating no more, aching no more—broken, not breaking, at last!" And ever in my ears I heard the words: "Ralph is dead! Your Ralph is dead!"

And could I be the same woman who climbed the hill with my hand in his, and my bride dress over my arm, and the white rose in my bosom? So happy! So happy! Oh, so happy! Could it be I—a thing with a lump of lead for a heart and no hope of happiness while she lived? And Annie went on before us on her bridegroom's arm, just as I went on that past day, and we followed her into the church. The minister's daughters were mostly grown, but there they were. There was their mother, not as much altered as they. There was the good parson himself, with the great scar across his cheek that he had worn since the day he married me. Outside were the graves of the men murdered on my wedding day, and of one woman also whom they found dead in her dead husband's arms.

It was only what I thought of every Sunday, after all, and the parson began his service, and the words were said that made those twain one, and we had gathered about the bride, when suddenly the shadow of an Indian in his blanket fell upon the wall behind the low pulpit, and every head turned. An Indian stood there, his blanket drawn across his face, but about him he wore the tokens of peace and friendly intention, and he made a kindly gesture with his hand and knelt as though in prayer, covering his face yet more with his blanket.

But redskins are treacherous. The men ran to the door, but saw nothing to alarm them. The bride's color had all gone. As for me, I expected every moment to hear the hideous war-whoop.

The men, each with his gun in his hand, encircled the kneeling Indian. He arose then, and his eyes looked into theirs.

"I am alone," he said. "No one comes with me; and I come in love, not in hate."

"You do not speak like an Indian," said my father.

"I have lived with white men; I have learned their speech," replied the Indian. "Have no fear. I swear there is no treachery."

"He speaks the truth," said my father.

He held out his hand. The Indian grasped it.

Yet he was an Indian, and we had no reason to do aught but hate his kind.

And now we were on our homeward way, and I lingered a little to shed a tear, and suddenly I saw the Indian at my side. His eyes only were visible under his blanket.

"You wear black clothes, squaw," he said. "Why do you not wear white and blue and pink like the others?"

"Because seven years ago the Indians killed my husband, and I am a widow," I said.

"But you are pretty!" the man said. "Some other man should have made you his wife."

"These are things not to be talked of," I said. "Ah, how do I know but you are one of his murderers!"

He shook his head.

"Did you see the Indian who killed him?" he asked.

I answered him rudely and fiercely.

"No—but you are all alike. They bore him away to torture by fire and poisoned arrows. Oh, my Ralph! my Ralph! Kill me, also, if you like, but do not talk to me! I loathe you all!"

But the Indian did not move.

"Indians do not always kill prisoners," he said. "I knew a white man once who was spared and lived with them for years. His name was like your husband's—Ralph. Oh, yes; they do not always kill."

A WHITE MAN STOOD BEFORE ME.

I was trembling now from head to foot.

"Ralph!" I cried. "Tell me where he is! Tell me where you saw him! Speak! Speak! Savage, have mercy for once! Is it he? I will go to him if it is through fire! Tell me!"

He shrugged his shoulders.

"You would not know him if you saw him," he answered.

"Has he so altered? Have they disfigured him? Ah, but I should know him and love him still!" I cried.

"No. You might meet him and never guess that you saw your husband," he answered, and turned away.

A little spring was close at hand, he bent over it. I sat down upon the grass. I could no longer stand. Was he drinking? No; he was washing his face, and suddenly he wheeled about and looked at me, and I saw no Indian but a white man. He threw away his head-band and feathers; his blanket lay upon the ground; a white man stood before me.

"Don't you know me now, Prue?" he cried; and I lay in his arms.

It was Ralph—my Ralph, and I know how the blessed spirits feel when they meet their lost and loved in Heaven.

Oh! how could I live through such sorrow to meet such joy! Has any other ever been so comforted?

What a day that was! What joy all seemed to feel! How good was God! How I loved Him and all my fellow-beings! I was gladder than the bride, and young again, though the tale he told of his captivity and his longing for home made me weep. Yet he was with me again.

Thank God we are together still, though twenty years have flown; and it is now the year of our Lord 1792. In those days when we have both passed away from earth they will tell our story in the town that has taken the place of our settlement; but I can never tell them why the Indians spared Ralph's life while the other prisoners were all killed, or why they were always good to him until the day of his escape, for that he never knew himself.—Mary Kyle Dallas, in N. Y. Ledger.

WAS A GOOD INDIAN.

A Denver Resident Tells How a Red Man's Gratitude Made Him Rich.

N. T. Walters, of Denver, is a silver-made millionaire who ten years ago was a dry-goods clerk in the city of New York and not worth a dollar. He takes great pleasure in telling how he got his start. His story is one of Indian gratitude—something accounted exceeding rare.

"When I decided to go west in search of my fortune in 1880, he said: "I struck out for Carson, Nev. From that point I started on a prospecting tour. I had been out about three days when I came upon a solitary Indian. He was going in the same direction that I was and he consented to act as my guide.

"One night I was suddenly awakened by the Indian. He was greatly alarmed, saying a rattlesnake had bitten him and he wanted some whisky. I had no whisky and the poor fellow was scared half to death. The snake had bitten him on the shoulder. He could not reach the wound to draw out the poison and he was afraid to ask me to do it. I took hold of the man's arm, however, sucked out the poison and put a chew of tobacco on the wound. Next morning the Indian was all right.

"Much has been said about the ungrateful Indian, but I never saw such gratitude. He wept and danced for joy. Then he told me where there was a rich gold-bearing vein. He took me to the place and between us we took out one hundred thousand dollars' worth of the metal and then sold the mine for sixty thousand dollars. That gave me the means to invest in silver mines—all of which turned out profitably. I have had a phenomenal run of luck and I lay it all at the Indian's door."—Chicago News.

HOME HINTS AND HELPS.

—Lime-water is good for chilblains. Use it both strong and hot. A saturated solution of alum in water, used hot, is also very efficacious.

—A piece of flannel or napkin folded lengthwise and dipped in hot water and wrung out, and then applied round the neck of the child that has the croup will sometimes bring relief in ten minutes.

—Canned Sardines make very nice sandwiches. Remove skin and bones and rub the fish fine. Mash the yolk of a hard-boiled egg, add a little melted butter and lemon juice, and mix to a paste with the fish, and then spread between thin slices of buttered bread.

—A pretty idea in house furnishing is to hang the pictures with ribbons of a color to harmonize with the decorative motif in the room. A youthful mistress of a pretty country home recently furnished has in her own particular apartments walls of pale rose color, upon which pictures in white and gold frames are hung with delicate blue ribbons.—N. Y. Sun.

—Pineapple Ice Cream: Slice two large pineapples in thin layers, scatter between the layers two pounds of powdered sugar, and let stand three hours. Then chop and cut fine and strain through a seive into three pints of cream, beat this gradually and freeze. It is improved by reserving a few pieces of pineapple until the cream is half frozen. Then cut into bits and add with a pint of whipped cream. Very delicate.—Detroit Free Press.

—Shrimp Salad: Line a glass dish with crisp lettuce leaves. Mix together one plate prepared shrimps (boiled and picked), two stalks of celery, pinch of salt. Place among the lettuce leaves. Over this pour a dressing made as follows: One gill of cider-vinegar, teaspoonful of mustard, pinch of sugar, yolk of one hard-boiled egg, well mashed. Bring to a boil, then cool. Cut white of egg into rings, place an olive in each, and arrange about the salid.—Ladies' Home Journal.

—French Pancakes: Six eggs, one pint of cream, one ounce of butter: beat the whites and yolks of the eggs separately; beat a pint of cream till it is stiff; then beat the eggs and cream together; put a little piece of butter into an omelet pan over quick fire; put into it a spoonful of the mixture, fry it very quickly; but it into a dish in the oven, rolling it as you take it from the pan, putting a little grated sugar between it; the pancake will rise in the oven; do not fry them till they are required, as they must be served very hot.—Boston Herald.

—Cheese straws are also made from puff paste. Roll out some paste until it is about as thin as a fifty-cent piece. Cut it into strips about four inches long by an inch and a half wide. Put a little rich English cheese down the center of half the strips, and lay the other half of the strips over them. Brush the straws with a little white of egg, put them in the oven, and bake them till the paste is thoroughly done. Serve the straws hot or cold, and garnish the plate containing them, if you desire, with a little green parsley.

—Blueberry Cake: For one sheet of cake use one generous pint of flour, half a pint of milk, one gill of sugar, one egg, two heaping teaspoonfuls of baking powder, half a pint of blueberries and two tablespoonfuls of butter. Mix the baking powder, sugar and salt with the flour and rub through a sieve; then work the butter through the flour. Beat the egg till light and add the milk to it. Add this to the dry ingredients and beat well. Now add the berries, stirring as little as possible. Spread the mixture in a well-buttered shallow baking pan, having it about an inch and a half thick. Bake in a moderately-quick oven for about twenty-five minutes, and serve hot.—Boston Budget.

DUST CLOAKS.

Handy Garments to be Worn When Traveling.

Dust cloaks for traveling in drawing-room cars are of shot silk, and are handsome enough for wearing in open carriages when driving in the afternoon, while more simple and useful garments are of the figured mohairs, or glossy alpacas with smooth dust-shedding surface. Blue silk shot with yellow in taffetas or in armure makes a pretty cloak, and others are of cool-looking gray with blue, or the dark gold and black, or brown with black. The silk cloaks are made full, and are shirred into shape by many gathered tucks around the neck, and cords or simple gathers at the waist line. The sleeves are of enormous size, with full frill at the wrists, or turned-back cuffs, and there is a deep frilled collar. Paris modiste use handsome white guipure laces on these cloaks as a yoke or else as bretelles, with deep collar and cuffs to match. A cloak of pale green wool, ribbed like corduroy, yet light in weight as crepon, is a very elegant garment when trimmed with white guipure lace. The neat brocaded mohair cloaks have stitched capes of three or four layers, or else ecru lace is used for their garniture. Square-meshed canvas in ecru, beige, or gray shades has woven drawn-work borders that serve as trimming when made up in dust cloaks. Few round full cloaks in peasant shape are now seen, though elderly ladies prefer them to closer-fitted cloaks. Pongees in dust-colors, gray, and ecru, and dark blue surah are used for these circulars, with shirred yoke, and rows of shirring at the waist line in the back. —Harper's Bazar.

Improvement of the Theater.

Some such error long disabled the theater from offering pleasures which might be enjoyed with self-respect. But it is interestingly noticeable that of late the theater has been somewhat better advised, and at the moment the news-stand has begun to topple on the edge of the pit the drama has been trying to climb out of it. The theater is still very coarse, very shameless, but we think it has really some impulses to purge and live cleanly, which ought to be encouraged by all who know its vast influence. As we have often said, it addresses the weaker intelligences and not the cultivated, except on rare occasions. But apparently the news-stand also addresses the weaker intelligences, and the acted fiction has been growing morally better while the printed fiction has been growing morally worse, till now there is much less to choose between them than there once was.—William Dean Howells, in Harper's Magazine.

"Twenty-Five Off."

A want of familiarity with business practices sometimes leads to amusing, and sometimes to embarrassing results; and occasionally to both. A woman who kept a small seaside hotel thought it would be profitable to bring the fact to the attention of the public. Accordingly she drafted a suitable advertisement, and carried it to the counting-room of a newspaper, where she inquired the expense of several insertions.

It was the custom of this paper, where advertisements were inserted more than four times, to deduct twenty-five per cent from the usual rates. The clerk read over what she had written, estimated the space it would require, and said: "It will come to twenty-six dollars; but as it is going in over four times, it will be twenty-five off."

"Oh!" she exclaimed. "Why, that's very reasonable;" and putting down a dollar she started for the door.

It was difficult to tell which was the more embarrassed, the landlady or the clerk, when he called her back and explained that "twenty-five" off" meant twenty-five per cent., and not twenty-five dollars.—Youth's Companion.

Artistic Advertising.

Undoubtedly the Ivory Soap people deserve credit for the best grade of illustrations now being used for advertising purposes. The series of full-page drawings which have been appearing on the last page of the Century represent some of the most capable book and magazine artists in the country. The series must have cost no small figure. As yet the "way up" artists do not sign the work they do for advertisers, but I apprehend that it will not be long ere we shall see in the advertising columns such names as George Wharton Edwards, E. W. Kemble, etc. Such men as these bring to their work, besides mere mechanical skill, a trained imagination and an artistic conception of things. These qualities, when used in connection with advertisements, command scarcely less interest than when used in the ordinary literary way. (Printer's Ink, August 19, 1891.

"German Syrup"

Croup. We have selected two or three lines from letters freshly received from parents who have given German Syrup to their children in the emergencies of Croup. You will credit these, because they come from good, substantial people, happy in finding what so many families lack—a medicine containing no evil drug, which mother can administer with confidence to the little ones in their most critical hours, safe and sure that it will carry them through.

ED. L. WILLITS, of Alma, Neb. I give it to my children when troubled with Croup and never saw any preparation act like it. It is simply miraculous.

MRS. JAS. W. KIRK, Daughters' College, Harrodsburg, Ky. I have depended upon it in attacks of Croup with my little daughter, and find it an invaluable remedy.

Fully one-half of our customers are mothers who use Boschee's German Syrup among their children. A medicine to be successful with the little folks must be a treatment for the sudden and terrible foes of childhood, whooping cough, croup, diphtheria and the dangerous inflammations of delicate throats and lungs. ®

IN 15 MINUTES.

I suffered severely with face neuralgia, but in 15 minutes after application of ST. JACOBS OIL was asleep; have not been troubled with it since.

No return since 1882. F. B. ADAMS, Perry, Mo.

"ALL RIGHT! ST. JACOBS OIL DID IT."

About seven years ago I had Bronchitis, which finally drifted into Consumption, so the doctors said, and they had about given me up. I was confined to my bed. One day my husband went for the doctor, but he was not in his office. The druggist sent me a bottle of Piso's Cure for Consumption. I took two doses of it, and was greatly relieved before the doctor came. He told me to continue its use as long as it helped me. I did so, and the result is, I am now sound and well—entirely cured of Consumption.—Mrs. P. E. BAKER, Harrisburg, Illinois, February 20, 1891.

I have had Catarrh for many years, but never found anything that did me any good until I concluded to try Piso's Remedy for Catarrh. After using it a few times I found great relief, and would not be without it now.—Miss BELLE WOODRUFF, Lawler, Iowa, July 21, 1891.

GEO. W. BOLTON, Local Agent.

DELANO DIARY.

—Charles Eppel threshed nearly 2,000 bushels of grain.

—Chas. Green and wife, and Mr. Gross were harvest festival visitors.

—Ephriam Ball nas gone to Beardsley for a couple of weeks, threshing.

--For Anisto and Omego photos go to Stadon's at Montrose. They are fine.

--Thomas Lanway and wife returned from the Flour city yesterday morning.

--Don't forget that Stadon will make photographs at Montrose until October 25th.

—Dar Welker has gone to Dakota to help thresh. A new son awaits his return.

—The M. E. harvest supper was a splendid affair and netted about $45, to apply on the minister's salary.

--I. C. Steward returned on Wednesday from a year's visit to the National Park. Irvin seemed unusually pleased to get back.

---Street Commissioner Jesse Brandon has promised to open the gutter on Third-st., between Railroad avenue and Bridge-st.

--Fred Barrows, Miss Parsons and Master Parsons helped to swell the Delano crowd at the Minneapolis jubilee on Wednesday

—Mrs. Roehl and Miss Kasheimer, harvest festival and exposition visitors, returned from Minneapolis on Wednesday evening.

---Mr. Joe Cramer, one of our staid and prosperous farmers, went to Minneapolis on Wednesday to participate in the festivities there.

—Stadon, the leading photographer west of the cities, will be locatad at Montrose until October 25th, for fine Aristo and Omego photos.

---J. B. Plattner, the gentlemanly clerk at Borsch's store, was among those who tripped the light fantastic at Hanover last Saturday evening.

--Henry Inwie, of Hanover, while on his way to the Minneapolis parade, handed us a great big dollar as an advance subscription to the GAZETTE.

—W. H. Frazee and son have leased the American House at Buffalo. Give them a call when you go to the county seat. See their notice in another column.

--Little Freddie Peters is quite an expert at pony riding. While at the harvest festival at Minneapolis on Wednesday he tried the ponies and rode like an old trooper.

Hi. Dyer is right in line as regards choice cut meats. George Dyer, his son, the dandy base ballist, is always there to wait upon customers in the most approved fashion.

—Some of our provident citizens have already received their coal for winter. Wood is not so plenty as in former years, but will not bring a better price on account of the substitution of coal.

—Frank Cramer and Dell Young were among those who attended the harvest parade. They missed connections with Jim Hill on Wednesday evening, and had to wait for the morning train. They report having a splendid time.

—While passing through Wyzata on Wednesday morning, Capt. West ordered the GAZETTE sent to his address. The Capt. is an intimate friend of Hi. Dyer, and probably wanted to keep posted on his doings, so he ordered the paper.

---Among the many Delanoites who attended the big parade at Minneapolis on Wednesday were Mrs. C. J. Buckley, the Misses Sherry, Swedeback, and Belt, and the Messrs. Dr. Schig, J. C. Hitz and son Carl, Geo. and John Sutton and Dr. Catlin.

—Mrs. S. S. Ball drove to the harvest festival. "Kit" liked it so well that she could not be found when it was time to come home. Whether she got out or some one stole her from the barn remains to be seen. "Kit" was Mrs. Ball's favorite riding pet and a better animal would be hard to find in the county.

—A party composed of Mrs. M. E. Chance, Mr. and Mrs. Brasie, Mrs. J. Lindsley, Mrs. Freeman, Master Ed. Freeman, Mrs. M. J. Mulford, Mrs. Cora Peters and Mrs. M. C. Staples were sight-seers at the harvest parade on Wednesday. They report the parade as something grand and worth going a long distance to see.

—A. Hanseman, commonly called "Duke," says Minneapolis is a great town for fairs and harvest parades, and should have the next Democratic national convention. "Duke" is one of the pushing kind and if he ever run for president the GAZETTE would see him through thick and thin.. President Hanseman, it sounds good.

—O. L. Billings, our village justice, invaded our sanctum on Tuesday, not to try a case at law, but to show the printers how to set type. For the benefit of our readers we print the letters he set:

"I Mu^st Aw^Ul =O^r Tqy^r Waa^se.

Mr. Billings may be a success as a justice of the peace, but as a type "slinger" he needs a little practice.

—John Brandser has moved to Waverly.

—Fred. Knoll will reside in the Irwin C. Stewart house.

—Ed Stewart will occupy J. E. Brothers residence for the winter

—Robt. Morris has purchased a new barber chair from George Kohler.

—Casper Enwiller has rented Mrs. Trott's farm and is doing his fall plowing.

—Rudolph Rosisenburger has moved into John Platner's house on the west side.

—John Ball occupies the rooms in the Peter's tenement house lately vacated.

—Chas. Weise has been suffering with rheumatism. He says it almost doubled him up.

—Nic. Schwirtz will move into the Darius Martin house which he has recently purchased.

—George A. Kohler, of Watertown, has gone to Chicago to complete his musical education.

—Fred J. Brandes has again taken up his residence inside the village limits, in Joe Cramer's old residence.

—Delano and Maple Lake play a match game of ball at the latter place next Sunday, weather permitting.

—M. F. Jennings keeps up the old line of stage coach to Watertown in fine shape. His son George assists.

Mrs. M. A. Staples, of Howard Lake, visited friends and attended the Harvest Festival held on Monday evening.

—The Bijou Theater Co., gave two entertainments in the village on Friday and Saturday of last week. The show was fair, but the attendance small.

—Jacob Henn, one of our oldest settlers, is a new subscriber to the GAZETTE. He wants it even if he has to go to war with France.

—G. A. Kohler, of Watertown, was in the village on Monday, having returned from the funeral of a cousin, Miss Anna Kohler, of Wacona, Carver county.

—J. E. Brothers, of Minneapolis, called in the other day and orderered the GAZETTE sent to his city address. Mr. Brothers proposes to be posted on Delano doings.

—The Delano ball club did not go to Watertown to play ball as intended. The Watertown pitcher was suddenly called away and that caused the game to be postponed indifinitely.

—Sam Coupland with four teams loaded with sawed tamarac logs passed through town on Monday. Sam says he is constructing a new residence on his farm near the Rader school house, in which the logs are to be used.

--Lewis Zahrendt, Albert Dressel and Geo. Sebrell, of Ministrista, were in the village on Tuesday on their way home from Howard Lake. They had their names added to our list of subscribers. Many thanks, gentlemen.

—Sam Murphy sold his mule to Al. Hitzman, who took it home about four miles from town. The mule seemed to like city life better and returned to his old quarters as soon as he was turned out—at his best rate of speed.

—The Howard Lake ball club has made a bluff to play the Delano boys for a purse of $50. Our boys are ready and willing, but first want to see the color of the Lake boy's coin. The game, if played, will probably be in this village.

—The GAZETTE furnished handsome ribbon badges to all the Delano people who attended the Harvest Festival. A hundred people and over went and Delano badges could be seen everywhere—in fact, our village was well advertised.

—The band gave its usual concert on Sunday evening. The boys are entertaining the residents of the village with good music and they should not be forgotten in a financial way when the time comes for a little pecuniary assistance.

--John Niesen and crew, from Pelican Lake, with their engine and thresher arrived in town on Sunday morning on their way to Beardsley to thresh. While coming through Rockford they haulted for a few minutes, and when ready to move on found their lantern, a new one, was missing from the engine. They say they will be much obliged to the party who has it if he will return it.

—Aug. Berneck believes in raising good stock. The reporter was invited to take a look through his commodious barn on River-st., and the animals that particularly struck our eyes were Norman Chief and General Sherman, two fine bred stallions. Talk about fine looking animals, they would take a prize anywhere. He also has six or seven other horses, good roadsters and drivers. The animals receive the entire attention of Mr. Berneck and Dr. Walters, the veterinary, and the gentlemen certainly understand their business.

—On Saturday, Justice J. H. Ferrell held court at his farm residence in Woodland The case of Dr. Brigham vs. Adam Mross, of Montrose, was brought before his honor on a change of venue. Attorneys O'Hair and Culkin, Doctors Brigham and Catlin, the defendant, his wife and mother-in-law, and constable John Pilgrim were present. The defendant chose to have a jury of six, and the constable thought it would require until six o'clock to get them together. So after those present had spent several hours in sampling the apples in the 'squire's fine orchard and partaken of a bountiful dinner prepared by Mrs. Ferrell and her able assistants, it was decided to have the jury summoned to meet at 10:30 a. m., on Saturday next at Montrose, when his honor would proceed further with the case.

---A. Winch and family are home from Brunton, Canada.

---The Soo line will have a new advertisement next week.

Mrs. Borsch and Miss Annie Borsch took in the great parade.

---Mrs. Fred Adicks Jr. made Delano a business visit yesterday.

---Dr. Scheig and wife are guests of mine host, Young, this week.

---Attorney O'Hair made the county seat a professional call on Wednesday.

—A stray dog was run over by an engine at the depot on Sunday morning

---Frank Coffin and wife of Minnetrista were shopping in Delano Thursday.

---D. D. Ames of Rockford came over to the metropolis on business yesterday.

---Baron VonKruger appeared with a new label this morning---this time a Doctor.

---Mr. Guptil, of Oakland, Cal., is visiting with his brother George at this place.

---John Catlin has returned from a couple of months visit with relatives at St. Peter.

---John Coffin came home last night from Hutchinson where he has been spending the summer.

--The dance at Hanover on Saturday evening was pronounced a success, both socially and financially.

--Dishes and other things left in the City Hall on Monday evening can be found at Mrs. Mulfords store.

---Mrs. H. M. Coffin, of St. Peter, came over Thursday evening. She is keeping house for her brother, Dr. Catlin.

---John Klich reports a scarcity of butter in the market, but he intends to have enough on hand to supply his customers.

---Wm. E. Lee, of Mille Lacs, Mrs. E. Tallman, Ic. Murphy and Dr. R. M. Walters are new additions to our subscription list.

—Charlie Wiese came home on Monday for a few hours visit. He is going to run the pumping station at Kirkhoven for a while.

—Hi Dyer came down town early Monday morning with another of those large tomatoes. This one goes one and five-eights pounds.

---There appears to be some trouble about supplying the school with free text books for the $60 voted at the recent school meeting.

John Slaight, one of Rockford's solid farmers was in town yesterday. John firmly believes that something should be done with the tariff.

---Leo. Eppel says he is troubled with sore feet. That's easily accounted for, Leo.: you know some shoes are too small and some feet too big.

---Mrs. Frank Scherer went to Minneapolis this morning for a few day's visit. In the meantime Frank feels lonsome keeping bachelor's hall.

---Ic. and Wm. Murphy were callers in town on Thursday. Ic. says he is a farmer and a farmer he will always be. He says his crop is fine this year.

---Warren Merriam we are pleased to nay has so far recovered his health as to be about on the streets again. He lately returned from Wisconsin.

Among donations to the Harvest Festival held in the city hall on Monday evening were cabbage heads weighing 14 lbs by Miss Julia Cunningham.

---Waverly has a sprinter who wants to run a hundred yard foot race with any one in the county for any money up to $100. Delano has several men who are not very slow.

---Jos. Haumont was a harvest Festival visitor. He says he had a splendid time and didn't forget to crack a joke either. Jos. is noted for getting off good ones on his friends.

—Joe Motzko and G. M. Fautsch, two of our rustling and prosperous farmers, are new subscribers to the GAZETTE. The gentlemen appreciate the value of a good newspaper.

---Wm. Quinn, of Waverly, returned home via. the G. N., last evening. He says the greatest thing he ever saw was the Minneapolis fire. He assisted in rescuing the injured firemen.

—Our band boys report having a splendid time at the county fair on Friday of last week. They were pleasantly entertained by the Howard Lakeites, and of course, carried away the banner for good music and fine appearance.

The Aid Society of the M. E. church wish to thank all who contributed to the success of the "harvest supper" on Monday evening last, and especially are we grateful to the members of the band who donated the music.

MISS IRENE CHEELEY,
Secretary.

Harvest Festival.

The Minneapolis Harvest Festival turned out to be one of the grandest affairs of the season. The city was beautifully decorated, streets being arched with grain, flour barrels, and like representatives of the Flour City. Grand stands were arranged at every available place along the line of march, and the streets were thronged for miles, until one wondered where more people would be found for a parade. The procession was gorgeous, exceeding anything of the kind ever seen in this part of the country. People came from far and near and were satisfied. It required about four hours for the grand panorama of living beings and works of art and skill, and products of the fields and forests to pass a given point.

Delano was well represented among the spectators and all were highly pleased. Minneapolis looked after her visiting guests right royally. To Martin Williams, of the Minneapolis Tribune force, is ascribed the honor of having made first mention of a Harvest Festival which started the ball rolling.

KING OSCAR objects to having Norway leave his kingdom and unite with Denmark or set up independently.

BALMACEDI and BOULANGER are among the latest accessions to the ranks of suicides. When a man is too big a coward to live longer he must be in terrible straits.

ROGER Q. MILLS is reported to have said in a recent speech in Ohio, that:

"Last year's importations," amounted to $480,000,000; the duty on the same amounted to $220,000,000, making a totel cost to Americans of $700,000,000, thus showing that the consumer paid this tax. He asserted that a high tariff made low wages and low tariff vice versa; that the tariff throttled agriculture and was sowing, the seed of monarchy. I look for the millennium when the ports of the United States are thrown open and her flags are seen in every foreign part."

SHOTS AT THE MAJOR.

Gov. Campbell Touches Up McKinley and Sherman.

YOUNGSTOWN, Ill., Sept. 30.—Gov. Campbell addressed a large audience at the opera house here to-night. The governor opened his speech by describing his progress through the Western Reserve, and announced that there had been enough large and enthusiastic meetings to cause this section to reverse the usual order of things and roll up a Democratic majority.

"This election," said the governor, "means more than the mere personality of the next governor. Major McKinley stands for all that is excessive and oppressive in the line of taxation. It is no use trying to hide the issue. It is no use in Mr. Sherman attempting to set up a false theory on the silver question; neither will it do for him to branch off and talk about wanting honest elections. We have arranged for that very thing in Ohio, and Mr. Sherman and his party will have them whether they like it or not. They—Maj. McKinley and John Sherman—made the issue. Now why do they not stand up and fight for it? I am here to say for the Democrats of Ohio that we are going to fight that bill. Why don't Maj. McKinley stand up for his own production and give blow for blow?" The governor then quoted Secretary Blaine on the tariff question and the McKinley bill and said;

"In 1867, when the tariff duties were not near so high as they are now, when we were trying to save the Union and did not care how much it was going to cost, John Sherman, in a public speech, pointed out the advantage of less restriction on the trade between nations. If we must put up with reciprocity don't confine reciprocity to the overtaxed and warlike nations to the south of us, but let us begin with Miss Canada, the fair, white, intelligent and attractive neighbor to the north of us."

The governor then took up the question of wages, and made a comparison of the wages paid in the high and low tariff countries of the globe. He asked if there was any member of his audience to name a single industry that had raised the wages on account of the McKinley bill, and quoted statistics to show that American labor was rapidly being degraded and humiliated by the importation of foreign labor. "The only Chinese wall that I would erect in this country would be a wall at Castle Garden to keep out imported workingmen that came over for the sole purpose of underbidding American labor."—GLOBE.

THE contract for sinking two ten inch artesion wells at the Hutchinson roller mill has been taken by S. Wanson of Minneapolis, one of the most extensive contractors on this kind of work in the northwest, having drilled wells at various places ranging in depth from 200 to 3100 feet. His ponderous steam drill was shipped in by rail Monday and is now pounding away and driving down the big iron pipes at the rate of about 16 feet per day. The foreman expects to strike the artesian vein to-morrow. By the way, if these wells prove successful in running the mill, and do not exhaust the water supply, what immense possibilities as a manufacturing center are opened up for Hutchinson. We will have a water power which in cheapness and convenience is unsurpassed in the country.

DEMOCRATS in Ohio and Iowa are warming up to business.

THE EVERGREEN STATE.

COUPEVILLE, WASH., Sept. 4th, 1891.

EDITOR BUFFALO GAZETTE.—I have no other way of letting my few friends of Minnesota know what we are about, but to write a personal letter to each or do as I promised send it through your valuable paper.

Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church has just adjourned. It met as was arranged, at Aberdeen, Chehalis county, Wash., Aug. 26th, with all, or nearly all, members present. Bishop Fitzgerald in the chair. We were blessed with the presents and kindly greeting of Dr. Hammond, Rev. Dr. Peck, of Missionary fame and Rev. Dr. Spencer of church extention fame; these great men, filled with love, and burning with holy zeal for the Master's work, addressed the conference and every one must have felt the Christ touch, so near did they bring the Jesus that we love. Dr. Peck is truly a godly man. Every word seemed to be ladened with the honey due of love and grace, while the Rev. Dr. Spencer sang like a lark dispelling every care and giving new life to every soul; he sang "Those beautiful, beautiful hands." leading the minds of many back to the dear old homestead and to the mother's side. I could only say God bless these dear old men for the work they are doing for the Master.

On Wednesday the good people of Aberdeen gave the conference quite a surprise by announcing through their pastor, T. W. Butler, (who is also a Minnesota boy,) that a boat had been chartered for a pleasure trip down the Columbia river, thence over to the Pacific coast. Consequently on Wednesday at eleven o'clock might have been seen a long line of ministers with the bishop and the representative men in the lead, wending their way towards the wharf, where the steamer Clan McDonald lay under full steam. On boarding the boat we found laying along her starboard side, a huge barge with an awning over her deck and patent folding chairs, which were very suggestive of comfort. At 12 M., the boat steamed out of the harbor and down the Columbia river, and if the eye of man ever rested upon a more beautiful variety of landscape your scribe has failed to see it. The river has many abrupt and reverso curvs. Now you are sweeping past a delightful shady nook, where a few trees furnish shade for the flocks of sheep and cattle that are feeding by the bank of a small but beautiful fresh water lake, just outside the river bank reminding one of the "still waters and green pastures," spoken of in the Book of books. The boat would suddenly plow around a sharp bend, and it would seem that you were in the tropics so dense would the forest become. One would become aware of the struggle of the first white settlers, in trying to open this wild and heavily timbered land. Now coming in sight of a small but thrifty town where just a few months ago the first woodman's ax was heard and looking you see a church, which is always among the first buildings of a new town. Men come from the east and bring their religion with them and with living faith in God, they erect places of worship and then apply for a preacher. Thus spreading christianity all over this Puget Sound country. It reminds me of what Tertulian, one of the Latin composers wrote to the governor of Rome. He said we are but of yesterday, and yet we have filled your towns, cities, senate and forum and added, we have left your temples only. We can count your armies and the christians will outnumber them. It is just so with this country. It is becoming the home of the free and the blest. Blest as we are with every comfort, we have only to look up and live.

Still we drop down the river under the pressure of a good head of steam until the meditation into which we had fallen, as we thought of the possibilities of this future garden of promise was broken with an invitation to partake of the good things the ladies had provided, which, was enjoyed by all, to its fullest extent. About 1, P. M., we reached the long wharf, called the wharf off Peterson's Point, whice is fully one and one-half miles in length, reaching from Peterson's bay out into the deep water of the Columbia river where boats could find water deep enough to land.

Arrived at this dock we found teams and vehicles enough to carry the ministers over to Cohasset Beach, on the Pacific coast, just below cape Flattery. This was truly a great treat for one who has never seen the great waves mount up on high and then chase each other far out on to the beach. At Cohasset we found an encampment of army vets, enjoying a reunion, in true army style, only having their wives and children with them. We were invited to eat army baked beans and found them truly among the best dishes for a hungry man, we have ever had the pleasure of eating. But while these old and brave soldiers had met to enjoy a re-union and talk over the victory they were privileged to participate in. They also, still live to enjoy the peace they helped to consumate. Yet, through all, the mystery is solved, when we see the empty sleeve, and the weary crutch. If one wants to know something of the hardships of these true men, just attend a re-union and every heart will be in the touch of sympathy and true love.

After enjoying four hours on the beach, in walking, bathing and riding, we were reminded that the time had expired and with a sigh of regret we started back to join the home bound steamer.

Nothing of any note took place on our way up the river, but the voices as they mingled together in Anthems of praises to God. In about one hour the boat turned her bow towards Aberdeen where the citizens stood on the wharf to receive and welcome the great Puget Sound Methodist Episcopal Conference. In the evening we had the pleasure of listening to the Rev. Ross Taylor, son of the great bishop and while he spoke of the needs of Africa, and the heroic work of his father and others every heart burned for that dark spot of earth. He told of the young missionary laying down his life at Sasstown, and of his desire to live to build a church at the above named place, when the Rev. John Denison stood up and said, "Brethren let us build a church at Sasstown, in honor of this brother who laid down his life for the work, and in less than 30 minutes they raised about $600. So the work moves on, not only on the Pacific coast, but in the everglades of Africa and in the jungles of India.

The Bishop read us out for Coupeville for the second year, and we are looking for the best year of our ministry.

When Conference adjourned and the ministers started for their appointments the citizens nearly all went down to see them off, and while yet the boat stood at dock, the preachers began singing, "Shall we gather at the river", the kind citizens who had so generously entertained us, joining with the song. This was a touching scene. These dear friends who had entertained the itinerants now came forward to bid them good bye, and say, "May God bless you in your work," and as the lines of the steamer were cast off those on shore and on board began singing "Sweet bye and bye," when as the boat reached mid stream a cloud of fog shut it from the sight of those on shore, but the voices of hosts and guests still mingled as they sang "We shall meet on that beautiful shore," beautifully typical of the time when one by one, we shall launch out upon the ocean of eternity, singing with those we leave behind "we shall meet."

A pleasant little episode occurred as the steamer Aberdeen was bringing the preachers and visitors to Montasano, Tuesday morning. Captain Taw was invited into the forward cabin, and Bishop FitzGerald, in behalf of the ministers, in a felicitous speach, presented him with a splendid antique oak table and office chair. The good Bishop's complimentary allusions to Captain Taw's, admirable qualities, as well as those of the handsome boat he commanded were cheered to the echo and the captain's natural modesty was too much for him. He could only say, "Thank you." as did General Grant in one of his most eloquent speaches. The beautiful table and chair now adorns the ladie's parlor on the steamer city of Aberdeen.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, Sept. 25, 1891.

Mr. Harrison has once more humbly bowed down to the will of a state boss and what made it all the more humiliating was that he had virtually snubbed the same boss in the early part of his administration, by ignoring all his suggestions in the making of important appointments, but that was before Mr. Harrison was attacked with the second term nightmare, which has made him truckle to men, such as Senator Quay, for whom he must natnrally feel the utmost contempt. The boss who has won the latest victory is Mr. M. H. DeYoung, of California who demanded a place in the cabinet for his friend, Mr. M. M. Estee, as the price of the California delegation to the Republican National Convention next year. His demand was granted and Mr. Estee was promised a place in the cabinet when the grand shake up which is to put Secretary Procter in the senate and Attorney-General Miller on the bench, takes place. It is believed that Mr. DeYoung also insisted upon naming the successor to the late Mr. Swift, who was appointed minister to Japan against the wishes of Mr. Estee and of boss DeYoung, but it is not certain that he succeeded.

Mr. Wanamaker summoned the District Superintendents of the Railway Mail Service to meet here this week in order that they might have a chance to answer the numerous complaints which have been made against the service and to devise some way of bettering the same, and he will not forget to give each of them confidential instructions before they leave for their stations concerning the part that the clerks in the Railway Mail Service are expected to take in electing or helping to elect Harrison delegates to the nominating convention.

The failure of the wealthy republican ex-representative, S. V. White, of New York, better known as "Deacon" White, has been much talked of here, where he was well-known as a Congressman and later as a lobbyist for Wall street interests. He was at the head of the lobby that defeated Ben. Butterworth's bill against dealing in options on agricultural products during the last days of the last session and as his failure was brought about by his attempting to corner the supply of September corn it will be seen that if the bill which he went to so much trouble, and spent so much money to defeat had become a law he would still be a millionaire. When he was in Congress he put a "stockticker" in the corridor of the House end of the Capitol building and for a few days he actually ran a branch of his New York brokers office in the Capitol building, but as soon as Senator Carlisle, who was then speaker of the House heard about it he had the whole business cleaned out in short order.

Senator Ransom, of North Carolina, looking as handsome as ever, dropped into Washington this week, and as he was just from home he was eagerly questioned about the reported rise of a third party in his State. "There is not", the Senator said, "and, in my judgement there will not be a third party in North Carolina. The great body of the Farmer's Alliance are true consistent and patriotic democrats, who will faithfully stand by their party. There are a few demagogues in the Alliance who would persuade the others to embrace a third party, or failing in that, will try to get control of the democratic party for their own purposes, but be this as it may the democratic party of North Carolina is solid and will remain so. This does not tally with the reports of the speeches made by Col. Polk of the National Farmer's Alliance, but that is so much the worse for Polk.

Secretary Foster is preparing to go to Ohio, where he proposes to take the stump for the republican ticket and to assist in the political juggling with which he is so familiar, and by which he hopes to pull McKinley and a republican legislature through in spite of the real sentiments of a majority of the Ohio voters. It is only under Civil service reform administrations that members of the Cabinet are allowed to leave their duties to go upon the stump in a state campaign.

The plums are dropping mighty slowly from the White House tree, and the impatience among those standing with uplifted faces and open mouths is getworse and worse, and those of them who have no votes to offer in exchange are beginning to see that they are not "in it".

The Blaine republicans are, many of them, beginning to suspect that they are being duped in the interest of Mr. Harrison, and that there is some truth in the rumor that as soon as Mr. Harrison is certain that he has secured a sufficient number of votes to make his defeat by any one outside of Mr. Blaine impossible, Mr. Blaine will make a formal statement prohibiting the use of his name and declaring in Mr. Harrison's favor. If he does there will be a big row in the party.

CORRESPONDENCE

ANNANDALE.

Elder Higgins held his usual morning service in the M. E. Church but in consequence of the rain held no evening service. Elder Ringer is expected to supply next Sabbath as Mr. H. is to be away to conference.

Wilbur W. Towle was arrested at Buffalo last Saturday on complaint of Sam Wells and wife for alleged embezzlement in disposing of some real estate for them. Examination was waived and bonds given for his appearance at the district court where he claims he can exculpate himself of wrong doing.

Thomas Stokes is doing the painting and Albert Davis, of Delano, the brick veneering on S. H. McGuire's new store.

Our village school commenced on Monday last with Prof. Dodd as principal and Miss Grace Allen in the primary department.

John H. Grafft, Esq., has bought the D. C. McCrorrey store and dwelling and is taking possession this week. The latter is moving into the rooms over the store of the Rosseau Bros.

Will Friend and his mother are moving into the new house which he has built in the past summer on Cherry avenue.

The village authorities have commenced grading Cherry avenue, using dynemite to remove some of the stumps.

Work has commenced for a building on the lot north of A. B. Matthews' tin shop; said to be for some parties in Minneapolis.

MONTROSE CHIPS.

The farmer, as well as others, rejoices over the recent fallen rain.

F. W. Ruppelius has been doing a land office business in the line of poultry this week.

O. L. Woodard, our enterprising blacksmith is always to be found at his post of duty and has proved himself an adept at his calling. He makes a specialty of horse shoeing, and has a display in a show case of some very fine horse shoes.

The Gilmer family which has been sojourning here for several days has gone to Buffalo to engage in the hotel business.

Eppler Bros. have gone to the vicinity of Morris, Minn. with their threshing outfit to continue in the fall threshing.

Mr. Geo. Ruppelius, of Hanover, Minn., has recently purchased the Bartz dwelling, now occupied by Dr. Brigham, and will ere long be a resident of our village.

F. E. Belden has purchased the wagon shop in connection with Mr. Woodard's blacksmith shop. He will enlarge the same, make it more convenient and tenable, and will then establish himself as the chief wheelwright of the shop and master of all ceremonies in connection therewith,

On Wednesday evening Oct. 7th there will be instituted in this village an Odd Fellows Lodge. The object of the fraternity is a worthy one, and we bespeak for them abundant success and prosperity in their noble efforts.

ST. MICHAELS.

Threshing will soon be finished around here. Yield is very variable. The best yield I heard of is 31 bus. to the acre and the poorest a little over 12. Oats from 35 to 50.

A few weeks ago the depot at St. Michaels station came pretty near going up in smoke. Some ill disposed person it seems had built a fire on top of two barrels of machine oil which were rolled up close together. The staves of the barrels were burnt half through and some fire had fallen between the barrels and burnt a hole into the floor. Kindling wood was lying around, and it is to be presumed that the person who built the fire became aware of the responsibility he incurred and quenched it.

Fred Hoeckelman the grain buyer of Cargill Bros. lately had an elevator put into the grain house to be operated by horse power, for loading cars, something he needed very much; Fred was rather overworked sometimes.

Lately a man living in Hennepin county found himself minus $81. which he had hidden in his bed. He went to Minneapolis, consulted a clairvoyant procured a book teaching that art and after he has learned the craft, it will be, woe to the thief.

Simon Schuler, our townsman living on the shore of the, now not raging Crow river, one morning last week found he had thirty odd boarders of the bovine species in his cornfield. He corraled them; found out that they belonged to one Charley Hoag and had forded the river to find green pastures in Wright Co., which they could not, a green pasture not being known about now-a-days. Schuler wants pay for damages done by said cattle but, if he can't settle privately with Hoag, he had better, I think, see to it that proceedings be had strictly according to law. Hoag is a 'cute one, living at present in Minneapolis but he has a man on his farm who is to tend to his live stock. SUBSCRIBER.

Fred Smith, our enterprising blacksmith is having a stone foundation built under his shop. John Altendorf is the mason.

Jos. Duport hauled his wheat to Loretto last week for 83 cents.

Nick Becker visited Minneapolis Saturday.

H. C. Parslow spent Friday and Saturday in Minneapolis. W. P. Kefe acting as agent during his absence.

Miss Sadie Dorman returned from Minneapolis, Monday.

Jos. Barabeau transacted business in the flour city Monday.

Jos. Lerch and Jacob Spurgeon took Tuesday's train for the city.

Pat Ryan, former section man at this station, stopped here on his way to Elk River. Pat is a strong Alliance man.

It appears the row in the Catholic Church at this place is not ended yet but came to blows a few days ago. This time an inoffensive citizen got the blow.

About fifteen people took the train to the Harvest Festival at Minneapolis. All report it a grand success.

A small stump was set on fire at Mr. P. O'Loughlin's last week. The wind blew the fire around and it caught in the stubble and was making its way to a straw stack when discovered. After considerable work Mr. O'Loughlin and his neighbors succeeded in getting the fire out. If it had got to the straw stack it would have burned his barn and other buildings.

INDEPENDENCE.

The rains we have been having of late did not come too soon, for it was getting very dry and dusty and it will help the farmer about plowing.

Corn cutting is over with the farmers next comes digging potatoes, plowing, hauling out dressing for the land, etc.

Mrs. George Hoisington returned from Wis., last Saturday accompanied by her niece who will visit here for a few weeks before returning home.

Earl Hoisington has got the best field of corn we have seen this season.

Mr. C. Haines, of Aitkin, Minn, is visiting in Independence.

Rev. J. N. Potter, of Rockford administered the ordinance of babtism last Sunday at Lake Sarah.

As your correspondent did not go to the harvest festival parade at Minneapolis, last week he took the Soo line last Saturday for the Exposition as it was the last day. They say the heel of a feast is better than the beginning of a row. I paid 25 cents (which I considered the biggest part of the transaction) for the privilege of looking around ioside, found a few skeletons and skulls of the cliff dwellers, some stuffed crocodiles mountain sheep goats, etc.

On last Saturday morning while Ole Stoteren who lived at Shaw's cressing on the Great Northern was out milking, a bull that was in the lot came at him, got him down and would have killed him only for his son Albert who came to his help. Dr. Shrader of Delano was called, but his injuries proved fatal and he died at 9 o'clock that night. Mr. Stoteren was a very quiet and inoffensive citizen, made no trouble in the community where he lived and was respected by all. The family has the sympathy of all the friends and neighbors.

J. McCutcheon, of Minneapolis was in Independence on business on Monday.

Your correspondent has been furnishing for several months statistical reports of crops to department of agriculture, Washington, D. C., and for my trouble I get from the office every month a report of condition and yield of crops all over the United States. Minnesota wheat averages 100 per cent and there are only three other states that come up to that; they are, Indiana, Illinois and Vermont. Minnesota corn averages 82 per cent; rye 98; Oats, 99; barley, 99; potatoes, 97, etc.

A LYONS anatomist has examined the skeletons of eighty-six monkeys—chimpanzees, gorillas and orang-outangs—and has found diseases of the bone to be as frequent as in man, and of a strikingly similar character.

BOSTON is the only city in the world which preserves an exact record of the proceedings of its common council. Every motion, argument and remark, no matter how unimportant, is stenographically taken down. The members are, therefore, very careful of their utterances.

THE late Bishop Caldwell, of India, had been in charge of the great Tinnevelly mission just half a century, having been appointed thereto three years after his first arrival in Madras. The mission now embraces 618 villages, 40,000 Christian adherents, and 46 clergy, chiefly natives.

A SOUTHERN genius is credited with the discovery that a very fine article of sugar can be made or distilled from the long-despised cotton seed. The product is claimed to be fifteen times the strength of an equal quantity of cane sugar and twenty times the strength of sugar made from beets.

THE youngest married couple in Connecticut, probably, dwell in the little country hamlet of Sterling, among the Windham county hills. They are Mr. and Mrs. C. Fenner. He is fourteen years and seven months old and she is fifteen years and four months. They have been married for several months.

OUR gold coins are alloyed with silver and copper, chiefly the latter. Copper alone is used to alloy our silver coins. In both silver and gold there are nine parts pure metal to one of alloy. Our nickel coins are three-fourths copper and one of nickel. The one cent is ninety-five per cent. copper and five of tin zinc.

CAPT. MARY MILLER, the woman who managed a steamboat on the Mississippi for seven years and then secured a government license as pilot, has applied for the place of lighthouse keeper on the gulf coast. She is an intelligent and rather prepossessing woman. Her husband is still an active navigator and running a steamboat in the gulf.

A GIGANTIC tunnel, which is estimated to cost $750,000 and require ten years to finish, is being constructed in the Leadville mining district for the purpose of draining the mines. It will be at least five miles long and will, when completed, leave to easy access millions of tons of good ore that cannot now be properly got at and probably never can be handled without the use of proper drainage.

A MAN in Augusta, Me., who is the proprietor of a hair tonic, is getting up some testimonials to spring upon the suffering public. One of his friends who loves a joke sent him this very sweeping indorsement, which may be printed on the outside of the book cover and may not: "Dear Sir—A few days ago I accidentally spilled some of your hair hatcher on the straw mattress at my lodgings, and when I returned home I found a hair mattress."

EDWARD B. GILES, of London, the editor of the West End Gazette, as the guest of the banquet given by the association of Master Tailors and Custom Cutters made some very sensible and telling remarks on that occasion. One was particularly pertinent. "Fashion should be based upon common sense and adapted to the climate of the country and the habits of its people. None but Americans should originate garments suitable for Americans." This fits Americans who return from abroad in the universal misfit suits.

A VERY formidable war vessel is about ready to fly Uncle Sam's colors. She is the monitor Miantonomoh, is 259½ feet long, and carries in two double turrets four ten-inch rifle guns, the most effective ship guns we have yet turned out. She is belted with twelve and one-half inches of steel and iron, and sits low in the water. She is intended for harbor defense, and will justify confidence in her ability to make a good fight against the strongest iron-clad that can be sent against her. She has two amiable sisters, the Puritan and Terror.

THE largest check ever drawn in this country was that given by Jay Gould to Thomas Allen for the Iron Mountain railroad. He paid $2,000,000 for it and handed Allen a check for that amount. Allen looked at the paper and said: "Isn't this a good deal of money for one man to have in one bank?" "I don't know," replied Gould. "Perhaps it is. Let me have the check." Allen then handed the check back to Gould and he handed it over to his office boy, saying: "Here, boy, take this check to the bank and have the cashier certify to it." And the boy went out and did it.

THE telephone does not often develop such an interesting romance as that which occurred in Chicago recently. It is owing to that instrument that Miss Wheeler has discovered a brother whom she had not seen for twenty-five years. In a telephone directory she chanced upon the name of W. W. Wheeler. Those were the initials of her long-lost brother. With a spring to the phone she "rang him up," and an hour later brother and sister were clasped in each other's arms. The telephone, as a rule, is a very matter-of-fact instrument, but it must be admitted that it brought about a decidedly romantic incident.

The News of the Week.

LATER.

S. Dakota Republican Convention.

ABERDEEN, S. D., Sept. 29.—The Republican congressional convention today was a short affair. There was no speech making over candidates, and an informal ballot taken without delay resulted; Jolley, 133; French, 108; Lucas, 86; Starr, 52; Kennedy, 49; Gardner, 45; Coad, 34; Preston, 12; Goodykoontz, 14; Melville, 3. The first formal ballot was a walkaway for Jolley, and after the first few counties voted all jumped for the band wagon. When Marshall county was reached it was seen that Jolley's nomination was assured, and a motion to make it unanimous went through with a whoop and hurrah. Col. John L. Jolley is the present state senator from the Clay county district.

Another Revolt in Guatemala.

CITY OF MEXICO, Sept. 29.—A revolution has been precipitated in the republic of Guatemala, which will unquestionably become general. A private dispatch to a prominent merchant in this city, who has business relations in the city of Guatemala, says that fully 500 lives were sacrificed in the three days' fighting in that city, and that the shooting is still going on. The dispatch also conveys the information that Barillas has declared himself dictator. The city is under martial law, and a reign of terror prevails, the inhabitants being afraid to leave their houses. In the revolt which has taken place at Quetgaltenango, the revolutionary leader is reported to be supported by over 1,000 men.

World's Fair Commissioners Dined.

CHICAGO, Sept. 29.—A royal foretaste of America's welcome to the world in 1893, was given to-night at the Palmer House. The recipients were the visiting government world's fair commissioners from various European nations, and the entertainment took the form of a banquet, the magnificence of which has seldom been rivaled in Chicago. Nearly 300 of the city's most eminent business and professional men were present.

Opened by a Volley of Musketry.

GUTHRIE, O. T., Sept. 29.—Many persons are reported killed and others as having received severe injuries at the opening of the government townsite of Chandler, in the Sac and Fox reservation at 12 o'clock yesterday. The result could easily have been foretold as there were three or four times as many people as there were lots.

THE EARTH IN A TREMBLE.

The Mississippi Valley Visited by Earthquake Shocks—Felt in Six States—No Serious Damage Results—People Badly Scared.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 28.—A decided shock of earthquake was felt in St. Louis at 10:50 Saturday night. It was particularly noticeable in the central portion of the city and in the north and west ends. On West Pine street it was noticed that the shock lasted two minutes. Its greatest force was reached during the first minute, after which it became less and less noticeable until it died out. It is said that the shock felt here was similar to that experienced on the night of the Charleston disaster. It seemed to move from south to north.

Buildings facing the north and south were visibly affected by the shock. Watchmen in several high buildings say they became alarmed and made all haste to reach the ground. At one newspaper office the compositors, who were on the fifth floor, left their cases and rushed panic-stricken down the stairways into the streets. Throughout the whole city the police report that the people rushed from their homes in great alarm. No serious damage has been reported as yet.

At East St. Louis the shock was distinctly felt. Many people were aroused from their slumbers and in a few moments the streets were filled with people. No damage has as yet been reported, but the whole city felt the quaking of the earth. At Gillespie, Ill., the shock was felt very distinctly. The wave was from the southeast to northwest. At Decatur, Ill., the vibration was from east to west and lasted several seconds. It shook doors and windows all over town and awoke people who had already retired. No damage resulted, but a great many people were badly frightened. At Greenville, Ill., the shock was so violent in its nature as to cause brick buildings to tremble. A large proportion of the inhabitants were aroused from their slumbers. The shock lasted fully a minute. At Xenia, Ill., brick houses swayed on their foundations, while frame dwellings rocked to and fro. Plaster was knocked from the ceilings and vases and pictures were thrown from the walls.

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—Saturday night's earthquake shock was felt in this city. While the shock was not severe, it was noticeable in different sections of the city. Other Illinois points where it was felt were Galesburg, Vandalia, Albion, Sullivan, Pittsfield, Hoopeston, Moweaqua, Mattoon, Paris, Nashville, Hillsboro, Shelbyville, Virginia and Warsaw.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 28.—Indianapolis was visited by a distinct shock of earthquake Saturday night. The phenomenon occurred about ten minutes before 11 o'clock. Reports as to its duration differ, but from the best information that can be gathered it lasted about eight seconds. In the Journal office building the shock was perceptible.

The operator at New Palestine, 15 miles out on the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton road, said that the shock there was of such force as to rattle windows and set chairs to rocking. The people were greatly frightened, but were reassured when it became evident that the disturbance was only temporary.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Sept. 28.—An earthquake shock that lasted about thirty seconds was felt here about 10:50 o'clock Saturday night. Buildings rocked, glassware and crockery were shaken from the shelves, and persons asleep were awakened by the rumbling noise. Unfortunately the seismiscope at the Rose Polytechnic institute, one of the two in this country, was not in readiness for this earthquake, and no measurement is obtainable. The people who felt the shock and were able to distinguish the direction say it was from the southwest to the northeast and lasted fully thirty seconds. Many persons were nauseated by the undulations.

VINCENNES, Ind., Sept. 28.—A very perceptible earthquake was felt here at 11 o'clock Saturday night and people in the hotels and saloons rushed into the streets much alarmed, and persons were aroused from their slumbers. Buildings vibrated and windows rattled and continued fully thirty seconds. The shake was felt at Evansville, Olney, Washington and various places in this neighborhood. The freight depot rocked to and fro so plainly that the men rushed from the building. No damage is reported.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept. 28.—Louisville had a good shaking Saturday night. A severe earthquake shock was felt at 10:53, and, although no serious damage was done, it caused considerable excitement all over the city. The bell in the city hall tower was rung by the vibrations of the building and the watchman in the tower thought his last hour had come. At the Galt house and other hotels the bells were rung; waterpitchers were overturned in the upper stories and guests came hurrying downstairs in a panic, it requiring much persuasion to induce the more timid to return to their quarters. Several drug stores suffered a slight loss from broken bottles and prematurely mixed drugs. In the residence part of the city the shock caused much alarm, the people rushing into the street.

KEOKUK, Ia., Sept. 28.—Three distinct shocks of earthquake were felt in this city about 11 o'clock Saturday night. The damage done in this city and the surrounding country was not serious, so far as learned.

Explosion of Dynamite.

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—With a concussion that broke the glass in windows for blocks and that lifted a street car from the tracks, 100 pounds of dynamite exploded Sunday afternoon. The accident occurred at Thirty-fifth and Iron streets, where work is in progress for the Thirty-fifth street tunnel. Though the explosion was so great as to damage buildings a considerable distance away, half a dozen men who were at work within a few feet of the dynamite at the time escaped uninjured. What caused the explosion is a mystery.

Barring Out Refugees.

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 28.—The government has received information that the destitute Russian Jews who have been pouring into the United States from Europe through Canada are to be returned to Canada, and in view of this the dominion authorities have been urged to the necessity of taking immediate steps to prevent these pauper immigrants landing in Canada. The minister of agriculture drew attention to the possibility of the government returning these destitute people to Europe if they are sent back to Canada by the United States.

CHECKED BY RAIN.

Showers Come to the Aid of the Fire Fighters in the Northwest—Flames Under Control—Their Awful Ravages in Emmons County, N. D., and Elsewhere.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Sept. 28.—Dispatches from Carleton, Milaca, Hinckley and Pine City state it has been raining at all those points for the last eighteen hours and that the forest fires are everywhere under control. There has never before been a fire of the magnitude of this one in this region. The whole country has been swept by the flames, and everything has been burned outside of the towns, except that a few lumber camps were, by great exertion, saved. Thousands of tons of hay have been cut on the lowlands about the lakes and this is all destroyed. For miles and miles on every side there is nothing but a blackened waste.

A dispatch from Williamsport, N. D., the county seat of Emmons county, says the property loss there has been somewhat exaggerated, but will reach $100,000. Three persons were burned to death in that county—Henry Tabor, living near Williamsport, and George W. and Clyde C. Johnson, farmers living near Beaver Creek. A report from the Holland settlement on the Missouri, north of Bismarck, says three farm hands were burned there. The loss at that point is about $50,000. Whole herds of cattle hemmed in by the awful conflagration were burned to death. The prairies are strewn with carcasses.

Hundreds of families are homeless and penniless, and in many instances they had to flee from their abodes with only the clothes on their backs. There is certain to be great suffering this winter unless assistance comes to them from outside sources. The fire which started this great conflagration was set by a thrashing machine.

TURTLE LAKE, Minn., Sept. 28.—Word has reached this village that the family of Mr. Nesse, a farmer living a short distance out of town, consisting of himself, his wife and several small children, were hemmed in by the flames and no doubt burned to death, as no help could reach them.

BLACK RIVER FALLS, Wis., Sept. 28.—Reports from the east fork say that forest fires are raging in that vicinity. Lumbering camps, timber and hay are being reduced to ashes, and even the flooding dams on the streams are not spared by the raging flames. Bears, deer and all manner of small game are seeking the streams for a place of safety. In this vicinity fires are raging on every side and a large amount of property has been destroyed.

CHIPPEWA FALLS, Wis., Sept. 28.—Forest fires are raging all over Chippewa county and the air in this city is thick with smoke. Considerable timber land, barns containing summer crops, stock, etc., have been burned. Whole villages have been burned.

DR. BURCHARD DEAD.

The Eminent Presbyterian Divine Succumbs to Peritonitis.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Sept. 28.—Rev. Dr. Burchard, of New York city, died at 3:30 o'clock Friday afternoon. He attended the First Presbyterian church last Sunday and was taken ill in the evening, but he was not considered in a serious condition until Tuesday. His illness developed into peritonitis. He was 79 years of age.

REV. DR. BURCHARD.

The doctor was known principally through his famous alliterative expression to which is accredited Mr. Blaine's defeat. Dr. Burchard was present at a reception to Mr. Blaine, then republican candidate for president, tendered at the Fifth Avenue hotel in New York by several hundred ministers of various denominations. Dr. Burchard was there and had been chosen to address Mr. Blaine in behalf of the clergy, who gathered in the grand corridor of the hotel on the second floor. Mr. Blaine was escorted from his rooms on the third floor down the staircase in full view of the clergymen and others who had gathered to greet him. Pausing on the staircase a half dozen steps above the corridor floor where the throng was, Mr. Blaine stood and waited the address of welcome. Dr. Burchard left his colleagues and ascended the staircase to the second step below Mr. Blaine. Then Dr. Burchard spoke, and as he neared the close of an address of affectionate regard and esteem for Mr. Blaine he used practically these words: "And we admire and we welcome you, Mr. Blaine, as a steadfast opponent of rum, Romanism and rebellion."

SWEPT BY A TORNADO.

Northern Minnesota Partly Denuded of Timber by the Wind.

THIEF RIVER FALLS, Minn., Sept. 28.—A hurricane swept through northern Minnesota Saturday night, striking the Red and Rock lake lumber regions. The tornado struck Beltrami county and passed in a northwesterly direction into Itasca county, spending its force near the Manitoba line. It is estimated that 150,000,000 feet of timber was destroyed. The country was sparsely settled with woodsmen and it will not be known for several days whether or not any of them were killed.

Short on Silver Dollars.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—Owing to the fact that the coinage of silver dollars was by law stopped July 1 (except that of the trade dollar bullion, about $5,000,000 in all, which is now in progress), the shipment from the mints of standard silver dollars now depends almost entirely on the amount of silver certificates of treasury notes presented for redemption. In the absence of ability to ship silver dollars the department, in response to requisitions for silver coin, is sending out large amounts of fractional silver coin as the most convenient substitute for the silver dollar.

Gave Them Arsenic.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 28.—Mrs. Otto Heberer, wife of a well-to-do butcher, gave her three children arsenic and then took a dose herself and disappeared. Her body was found in a vacant lot. The husband says his wife was insane, but neighbors deny this and say the act was caused by jealousy. The children will probably recover.

Mrs. Grant Will Be Present.

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—At the unveiling of the Grant monument in this city Oct. 7 the widow of the great soldier will be present. Mrs. Grant will remain in the city some days.

A ROW WITH CHILI.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—For two hours Monday morning the president was in consultation with the representatives of the state and navy departments. Secretary Tracy, who arrived in Washington Sunday night, nearly a week before the date fixed for his return from the north, came to the white house early in the day. He was joined there by Acting Secretary Warton, of the department of state, and Gen. John W. Foster, and later by Com. Ramsay, chief of the navigation bureau, who had been summoned for the purpose.

It is conjectured that the matters under consideration were statements from Minister Egan and Capt. Schley of recent occurrences in Chili, which are also conjectured to accord with special dispatches from Valparaiso to the effect that three United States citizens had been arbitrarily arrested in Santiago by order of the junta; that a cordon of police had been posted around the United States legation building; that access to the legation had been controlled by the junta, and finally that the United States minister to Chili was being harrassed and annoyed in his efforts to care for American interests. Just what Capt. Schley had to communicate to the navy department cannot be learned from any of the officials, but it is surmised that it related to the treatment of refugees, or that the bitter anti-American sentiment in Chili, resulting from the seizure of the Itata, has revealed itself in hostile or unfriendly demonstrations toward the officers and men of the Baltimore.

Another cable was received from Minister Egan Monday night. While all information as to the nature of the dispatches from him is withheld enough of their contents are known to confirm the statement that the junta has gone to the point of serious complications with the United States. Minister Egan has reaffirmed the sacredness of the political refugees in the American legation, has energetically protested against putting a police watch on it or requiring passports for those having business with the legation, and is now looking after the interests of three or four American citizens whom the junta assumes to treat as spies. Instructions have been sent him direct from the white house upholding his course and directing that emphatic representations be made to the governing powers against any invasion of the rights of asylum in the legation, whether under cover of police protection or local regulations of any sort. Further than this, the rights of the American citizens alleged to be spies will be strictly enforced.

Secretary Tracy says that no naval vessel will be ordered to Valparaiso at present, and this statement may be taken as correct, because in the first place it is not understood that there is any danger to life, and in the second place no vessel is available. The aspect of the situation at present is purely diplomatic, and the instructions sent to the minister are to meet a diplomatic complication.

At present the United States' naval force in Chili consists of one vessel—the cruiser Baltimore—commanded by Capt. Schley. The San Francisco touched at Callao, Peru, last week on her way northward with Admiral Brown in command. An effort was made by the navy department to communicate with her, but she sailed for Acapulco, Mexico, Friday, before the cablegram reached her. Her bottom is in bad condition, and the vessel would be almost unserviceable unless docked and cleaned. There are no other modern vessels on the Pacific side that could be dispatched to Chili and it is assumed that Com. Ramsay was called into the consultation by the president for the purpose of explaining the exact extent of the resources of the navy department.

ACROSS THE CONTINENT.

Millionaire Mackay Breaks the Record Between San Francisco and New York.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—At 10:56 o'clock a. m., Monday the private coach Grassmere, containing John W. Mackay, the California millionaire, and Miss Fair, daughter of Senator James G. Fair, and a sister of Mrs. Herman Oelrichs, rolled into the Grand Central depot attached to the fast mail over the New York Central & Hudson River railroad, having made the fastest trip on record from San Francisco to this city. The actual time of the trip after counting the difference of time between the two cities was four days, twelve hours and twenty-eight minutes. This beats the record of Herman Oelrichs, who in August last made the trip in four days, sixteen hours and ten minutes.

Tragedy in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Sept. 29.—During a riot among dock laborers at the Western Transit Company's shed Monday Joseph Bales, a colored youth, stabbed and instantly killed James Kelly, a white laborer. Bales was pursued by Kelly's friends for several blocks and escaped being lynched by being taken into a buggy and driven to the Chicago avenue police station. Several shots were fired at the fleeing murderer and one took effect in his right arm. Several others who joined in the chase were hit by bullets, but none were seriously hurt.

Lynched.

HOLLANDALE, Miss., Sept. 29.—Saturday night a colored woman named Lou Stevenson called John Davis (white bartender) from a saloon, and while she engaged him in conversation a negro named Grant White appeared on the scene and shot Davis, killing him instantly, without provocation. White fled, but was captured near Way Side and brought back to the scene of the murder. The infuriated populace hanged both White and the woman, Lou Stevenson, to a railroad bridge near the town during the early hours of Monday morning.

Into the River.

CHICAGO, Sept. 29.—Two persons were drowned in the river at Washington street Monday night. A coupe carrying three persons plunged into the open draw and only one was taken out alive. The cabman, Rufus Terry, of 576 West Lake street, and Miss Carrie Green (colored), 71 North Leavitt street, were drowned. John Sheldon, of 571 Fulton street, the other occupant of the carriage, was rescued. The bridge had been opened to permit a vessel to pass, and the driver was unable to check his horse in time to prevent the disaster.

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS

Big Fire in Minneapolis.

Moore & Co.'s machine shops, elevator C, the warehouses of the North American Beef Company, owned by Cudahy Brothers, caught fire at Minneapolis and were destroyed. The old Ames homestead and other dwellings in the vicinity were also burned. The value of the wheat in the elevator was $50,000 and the building and machinery were worth $125,000. The machine shops were valued at $115,000, on which there was less than $5,000 insurance. The other losses will amount to about $30,000.

Factories for Duluth.

When Jay Cooke was in Duluth a few days ago he stated to a friend that negotiations had been completed for the erection of one of the largest paper manufacturing establishments in America on the St. Louis river, a few miles above Duluth. He also said that arrangements had been made to establish two of the largest linen factories on the continent at another point on the river, where the town site called Belfast is to be located.

Poisoned Her Husband.

Eric Crite, a well to do Scandinavian residing in St. Paul, died August 23 last and was quietly buried. Now his wife has confessed that she murdered her husband by administering poison. She was arrested. The body would be exhumed for examination. The couple had been married nineteen years. Mrs. Crite says her husband had spit in her face four times and she became angry and gave him the poison in his coffee.

Fought with Swords.

Tom Allerton and James Arrowsmith, both powerful young men and expert swordsmen, fought a duel with swords at Pipestone and Allerton received an ugly gash on the left side of his head and was not expected to live. Arrowsmith was under arrest. The duel grew out of a family feud which has existed between the Arrowsmith and Allerton families for five years over a division in some property.

Ten Persons Injured.

Ten persons were injured in a collision on the Inter-suburban electric line in St. Paul. All were going home from the Minneapolis exposition. The most seriously injured were: Minnie Peterson, Lillian Fitzen and George S. Ross, but it was believed all would recover. The others were Oscar Endust, Mrs. Stevens, Mr. J. M. Stoll, Mrs. J. M. Stoll, H. A. Capron, Miss Mary Bishop and Mrs. Thomas.

The Congregationalists.

At a meeting in Duluth of the Minnesota General Congregational society the Woman's Home Missionary Union elected the following officers:

President, Miss Catherine Nichols, of St. Paul; vice president, Mrs. A. H. Pierson, of Northfield; secretary, Miss Gertrude Keith, of Minneapolis; treasurer, Mrs. M. W. Skinner, of Northfield; auditor, Mrs. Horace Goodhue, of Northfield.

Minnesota Bonds Burned.

A small blaze at the capitol destroyed nearly $2,000,000 worth of bonds. The fire was set by Gov. Merriam, aided by State Treasurer Bobleter and State Auditor Bierman, for the cancellation of the old railroad adjustment bonds issued in 1881. The exact amount consumed was $1,991,000.

Duluth's Population.

The directory of Duluth for 1891 is out, and it contains 22,140 names in Duluth proper, against 20,720 last year. This would indicate a population there, using a multiplyer of two and one-half, of 55,350. According to the United States census last year Duluth's population was 32,820.

Railroad Ties Burned.

A destructive prairie fire raged west and southwest of Willmar for several days. Three miles of rail track 9 miles west of there were burned, the ties being consumed by the flames. Telegraph poles and railroad fences were also destroyed.

Several Buildings Burned.

A fire at St. Peter destroyed the Kasota eating house, the union depot and the hotel of Mrs. H. F. Lauman, the express office and other smaller buildings. The loss was estimated at from $40,000 to $50,000.

The News Briefly Chronicled.

William H. Hemminghouse, of St. Paul, crazed by illness, hung himself.

Strong & Miller, owners of large mills and elevators on the Hastings and Dakota branch of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway, will build in Duluth this fall the largest flour mill in the world. It will have a capacity of 12,000 barrels a day.

George King met a horrible death in Minneapolis by being struck by an electric car.

The jury in the case of T. O. Hall, the Duluth banker, on trial for receiving deposits in an insolvent bank, failed to reach a verdict and were discharged. They stood five for conviction and seven for acquittal.

E. J. Breed, general manager of the Marion flint glass works of Marion, Ind., was in Duluth to establish a plant there for the manufacture of glass.

The Dodge county agricultural fair at Mantorville was the most successful meeting of the society since its formation twenty-one years ago.

The board of education has awarded the contract to build the new Eau Claire (Wis.) high school to Edward Siskvon, of Minneapolis, for $34,800.

Ellen Langslow, of Duluth, appeared before a judge and asked to be sent to the insane asylum. Her request was granted

Mrs. F. B. Snyder, of Minneapolis, died very suddenly of Bright's disease of the kidneys. She was the daughter of ex-Gov. Pillsbury, and occupied a prominent position in Minneapolis society.

Winona's high wagon bridge across the Mississippi is now an assured thing. At an adjourned meeting of the city council, the contract with the Chicago Bridge & Iron Company for doing all the work and furnishing all the materials for $94,700 was adopted.

Fire broke out in the Aema Cooperative Barrel Company's building at Minneapolis and spread rapidly, the structure being destroyed. The loss was $20,000; covered by insurance.

In a quarrel at Pipestone between Tom Allerton and John Anonsmith the former was dangerously hurt.

William Colburn threshed 1,260 bushels of oats at Osseo from twenty acres A No. 1 oats. Isaac Trevis from fifteen acres of wheat threshed 630 bushels of No. 1 wheat. There were many others who had threshed likewise. Enormous crops of potatoes were reported.

WORTH REMEMBERING.

"He learns to limp who liveth with the lame,"
So in the Latin recently I read:
And who could maxim terser, truer frame
Than the sound counsel thus interpreted?

'Tis the old truth expressed in striking phrase,
That evermore surrounding friends and facts
Do lower life, or else life higher raise;
That what one chooses on himself reacts.

So books we read do e'er the mind affect—
The pure or prurient in prose or verse;
The mind will what is given it reflect
As doth the mirror light received disperse.

Yea, and from trifling things we scarce do see,
Or deem forgotten quite as soon as seen,
The soul impressions takes indelibly—
The camera's plate is not more sure and keen.

But further still, and more important far,
The influence of a friend the life displays;
Men imitators of their fellows are
From earliest youth to manhood's latest days.

Ah! true the proverb is as quaint its guise,
And well it would be did more heed we give
To this old sayin', witty yet most wise:
"He learns to limp who with the lame doth live."
—Rev. Philip B. Strong, in Golden Days.

OLD CLOTHES.

A Made-Over Jacket and What It Did for Its Owner.

If Carlyle had had my experience his philosophy of clothes would have been modified thereby. I cannot say in just what particular, but I am sure such an experience could not have failed to affect his views on the subject.

I was the youngest of a family of six, and the law of succession to cast-off garments being firmly established in the family, I was brought up in old clothes. My sister Hannah was the eldest, next to her came Maria, then came Tom, my only brother, followed by the twins, Ludora and Isabella, and last, and in all respects least, I made my entrance into the family.

I suppose the law of succession aforementioned was a necessary feature of my mother's domestic economy, for she was left a widow shortly after my birth, without an abundance with which to support the family. Maria, being but a year and a half younger than Hannah, was very near her in size, and seldom had to suffer the infelicity of wearing her outgrown or outworn clothes. The fact of Hannah's having a new article of dress or adornment was generally considered a sufficient reason that Maria should have it. Tom, being the only boy, was favored; and he was the only one who was permitted anything like extravagance in dress. His cast-off garments were given to our neighbor, Mrs. Hobbs, still poorer than we, to be converted into garments for "the little Hobbses," as we used to call her numerous offspring. Ludora and Isabella openly resented the "made-over" garments furnished them from Hannah and Maria's wardrobes, and soon outgrew the possibility of being forced to wear them; but I think I must have been a poor-spirited child, for I not only "stayed little" so long that when I had, at last, grown tall the fact was quite ignored, but I generally accepted what was given me uncomplainingly, and when, on one occasion, I did give an angry expression to my detestation of our clothes and my desire for new ones, the family were astounded. My mother said she would not have thought it possible for her little Bab to show such a naughty temper and selfish spirit; and, seeing that I had brought her to the verge of tears, I refrained from further complaint, though the "little Bab" was, at that moment, as offensive to me as the cast-off garments.

I never liked the name of "Bab," which, in fact, is not my name, and ally is not a name at all, being merely a contraction of baby, which had been worn for a short time by every one in the family, except the twins, to whom it could not be conveniently applied, and had, at last, like the old clothes, been given to me in final possession, while my own regal-sounding name of "Minerva" had been laid away, presumedly as too good for my everyday wear. To the title of "Bab," sufficiently diminutive in itself, was generally added the diminutive adjective "little," and I was called "little Bab" until I was fully five feet five, which is a little more than the height of either Hannah or Maria; but they possessing more avoirdupois and importance than I, no one ever thought of calling them little.

That this much wearing of old clothes had a manifest effect upon my destiny will clearly appear from the facts which I am about to relate. At the time of which I shall speak, Hannah and Maria were both married, and Tom was in his senior year in the college at D——. An epidemic of measles causing the college to close earlier than usual, he came home in March, accompanied by a friend who was a teacher there. I was absent on a visit to my Aunt Maria when they arrived, and when I returned home, this friend, Randolph Morey by name —whom Ludora and Isabella, though they were both engaged, declared to be "splendid!" had gone on, taking Tom with him, to visit relatives in N——.

Soon after my return, Ludora and Isabella went to spend a week with Aunt Maria and do some special shopping with reference to the double wedding in which they were to figure not many weeks later. The next day after their departure my mother said: "Bab, I wish you would see that Tom's room is in order. He will be back Saturday, and Ludora and Isabella were so busy with their sewing I don't think they made his room as neat as it might be."

I found that the room might be made neater. I picked up a garment which Tom had flung across a chair, and carried it to his closet, on entering which my eye fell upon a well-worn blue flannel coat and nether garments hanging there, and a novel idea flashed into my mind. Not long since a dress of dark blue serge had been made for me out of Ludora's and Isabella's old ones, and I needed a jacket of some heavier material, but matching the dress in color, to make it quite complete and comfortable for the cool autumn days. By ripping up those garments and washing and pressing the better parts of them I could get quite a respectable jacket out of them, and who would ever know from whence I obtained it? I knew Tom would not care, for, although there was still "right smart of wear in them," as Mrs. Hobbs would have said, they could be worn but little more without patching, and Tom abhorred patches.

I carried the garments to my mother to consult her. She, poor dear, having practiced making over until she had reduced the work to a science, "jumped at the idea," to use another of Mrs. Hobbs' expressions. By the close of the next day our united efforts had produced a jacket which, with the addition of some pretty buttons and a neat binding of braid, was really quite stylish looking. The next evening I drove to the station to meet Tom and his friend, feeling quite "dressed up" and complacent in my new old dress and jacket. But alas for my complacency! I was soon to know the bitterest mortification of my life.

The next morning Tom came to me in the dining-room and said: "Bab, what became of that blue flannel suit that was hanging in my closet?"

"Do you want it?" I asked.

"Morey wants it, it's his. We're going fishing, and as it's a little rainy he wants to wear it. He's a careful fellow of his clothes."

I think the power to faint is not in me, or it would have asserted itself at that moment. If the earth had suddenly opened at my feet, gladly would I have sunk into the yawning chasm.

"Oh! Tom!" I gasped, "I thought those things were yours, and I cut them up and made them into that jacket I wore to the station yesterday."

"Cut them up!" exclaimed Tom, in consternation, which soon gave way to uncontrollable laughter.

While he was laughing, I was desperately considering. I had always been considered truthful; I had always been truthful, whether from inherent goodness or lack of temptation, I cannot say, but I have a humiliating suspicion that it may have been the latter, as, now that temptation presented itself, I was willing to falsify, or rather, to have some one else do so for me. When Tom had subsided sufficiently to hear me, I said: "Tell him a tramp stole the clothes."

"A likely story," replied Tom, "that a tramp should find his way up into my closet and select that particular suit of old clothes as booty."

"Well, tell him we thought the clothes were yours and gave them away," I urged.

"I shall tell him the truth!" said Tom, in a tone of moral severity quite unusual with him.

He went up to his room, where Mr. Morey was waiting. A few moments later I followed him up the steps and slipped into my own room, which adjoined his, that I might see, or, rather, hear, how he performed the delicate task in hand. Other emotions were too strong within me to permit me to feel any scruples in playing eavesdropper. When I reached my room I heard Tom assuring Mr. Morey, in a grave tone, the frequent tremors of which gave evidence of suppressed emotion, that I had deliberately appropriated the missing articles to my own use.

"Tom, you are trying to sell me," said Mr. Morey.

"No, she cut them u-u-p," replied Tom, the crescendo on the word "up" being caused by a burst of laughter, "and made—"

I determined to go in and explain the matter myself. It would be easier than meeting Mr. Morey after he had received Tom's explanation. I don't know what I said, but I made him understand the situation, and he assured me the matter was of no consequence.

"I should have had but little further use for the clothes," said he. "I intended to take them home for my mother to make over for my little brothers; and I doubt not the boys would give you a vote of thanks, if they knew, for they don't like wearing made-over garments."

My heart went out, at once, to the little brothers.

Mr. Morey managed somehow, with a delicacy of which I am sure no other man could have been capable, to convey to me a compliment on the feminine ingenuity which could produce so pretty a garment from such poor materials, and even expressed the hope that I would continue to wear it. But that I averred I never could do again, when Tom put in:

"See here, Bab, if you go on wearing it, not even mother need ever know but what the things were mine; but if you don't, the truth must come out, and you never will hear the last of it from Ludora and Isabella."

Reflection convinced me of the truth of the argument, and I concluded that it would be better to wear the jacket occasionally, though I knew I should always feel "queer" in it.

This ludicrous incident made Mr. Morey and me feel better acquainted in a few days than we should otherwise have done in weeks; and that the attack I had made on his wardrobe did not forever disgrace me in his mind was proved by the fact that at the end of his visit he asked permission to write to me, and within a year asked me to be his wife.

I have told this bit of personal experience, not merely, as the casual reader may suppose, to make known how I happened to become Mrs. Randolph Morey, but to point the moral to parents that the garments in which their children are clad may seriously affect the events which clothe their life's history.—Martha Gion Sperbeck in Demorest's Monthly.

Habits of the Mink.

On the shores of Casco bay, Me., the mink is still abundant. It lives in holes in the rocks near high water mark. Its young are apparently brought forth at the end of February or early in March, and they are two-thirds as large as the parent by the middle of June. They enter the water like others, swim about after flounders or cunners, bringing them ashore. We have observed a family of four, the mother and three young ones, engaged in fishing and eating flounders, and they were so tame we could approach within four or five feet of their station under a wharf. It seems to vary in color from a sable black to reddish brown, the young being dark. Interesting in their shape and habits, they amuse the summer residents, and are not molested.—Interior.

A Skillful Flatterer.

Bob Van Slyck called on a Madison avenue family, in which there were two old maiden sisters of about fifty years of age. Van Slyck is an old friend of the family, and one of them being in a bantering mood said:

"Mr. Van Slyck, what do you think is the oldest?"

Van was in a dilemma. He did not like to hurt the feelings of either. He looked from one to the other, and asked:

"You want me to say which of you two girls is the oldest?"

"Yes."

"Neither of you looks older than the other. Each of you girls looks younger than the other."—Texas Siftings.

PERSONAL AND LITERARY.

—The late ex-Gov. Paul Dillingham, of Vermont, always used the appendage of "Jr." to his name, though almost ninety-one years of age.

—Among the manuscripts left by the late Count von Moltke, Prof. Felix Dahn, his biographer, has found a "Confession of Faith." The great marshal affirms his belief in God and a future life. The "Confession" will be published among the other works.

—George Washington's nearest living kin is Mrs. Fanny Washington Finch, of Washington, D. C., a great-grandniece of the Father of his Country. She is a tall, majestic woman, and in features resembles the portraits of her distinguished relative. She is the youngest and the only survivor of twelve children.

—One of the most influential men in Copenhagen is Herr Councilor Fersler who owns five newspapers: National, Tidende, Dagens Nyheder, Aftenposten, Dags-Tele rafen and Dagbladet. With the exception of Berlingske the Tidende and Avisen, Herr Fersler controls every conservative paper in the Danish capital.

—Robert J. Burdette is making his mark as a preacher, and can get off as good a sermon as he can write a joke. And his pulpit utterances are free from disagreeable drawbacks. There is no editor to blue-pencil his happy thoughts, and the foreman doesn't come around to announce that he has "no room for that stuff."

—Mrs. James T. Field, of Boston, the wife of the publisher, is said to possess one of the most valuable literary collections in the world. In the library are numbers of valuable MSS. and autograph letters, and in the garden, at the rear of the house, grow trees which were planted by many famous authors and public men.

—Richard Mansfield, the actor, is the son of Mme. Rudershoff, the once famous opera-singer and musical instructor. She was much opposed to her son's choice of the stage as a profession. Mr. Mansfield was successfully engaged in business in the dry-good house of Jordan, Marsh & Co. in Boston before he began his career as an actor.

—It is said that Amelie Rives will apply the money received for her new novel "According to St. John" in the interests of a friend. The book contains the impressions of Paris received by the writer during her stay there. She is credited with saying: "I have worked very hard and hope I have quieted down the extravagances of style which offended people so much. I consider the things I do now as simply studies, and I am searching all the while."

—The empress dowager of China is a strong-minded lady and rules her family with an iron hand. She is a woman of powerful physique, and so strikingly handsome and of so firm and strong a disposition that all wills must bend to hers. When the emperor inadvertently does something to displease her he is made to regret it, and as for his poor little wife, she has nothing to say at all. She isn't even allowed to have a good time, as she might have if she were left alone.

—Mr. Whittier recently said in regard to "Skipper Ireson's Ride," the controversy concerning which has broken out again: "I thought I had made all the amends possible for that. The story was told me by an old schoolmate, and I cast it in verse form. When the fact was made known to me that not Skipper Ireson but his crew were responsible for the abandonment of the wrecked ship, I so stated it in my published poems. I would not intentionally do harm to anyone."

HUMOROUS.

—Judged by the Price.—Customer—"You say these twenty-five-cent eggs are fresh?" Clerk—"Yes, sir; but if you have any doubts about it perhaps I had better charge you thirty cents."—Yankee Blade.

—Shopman—"Will you allow me to send this for you, madam?" Lady—"No, thank you; I'm driving." Lady's Little Girl (in ecstasy)—"Oh, mummy! Are we going back in the yellow 'bus?"—London Judy.

—Miss Smilax—"I like to waltz with you, Mr. Wooden; but why don't you ever reverse?" Wooden—"Well, I have reverses enough in my business without bringing them into my pleasures."—Boston Courier.

—Watts—"I don't approve of this idea of burying every eminent citizen with a brass band." Potts—"It would not be so bad, though, if they'd bury a brass band with each eminent citizen."—Indianapolis Journal.

—A Sad Misapprehension.—Miss Sevenfigures.—"Oh Mr. Gilthunt, this sudden proposal surprises me—I am embarrassed—" Mr. Gilthunt—"Embarrassed! Then I take it all back. I thought your fortune was as secure as the bank of England."—Kate Field's Washington.

—"You don't love me so much as you did?" pouted young Mrs. McBride. "Didn't I just say you were worth your weight in gold?" remonstrated her husband. "Yes; but you said that when we were first married, and I weigh seven pounds less now."—Pittsburgh Chronicle Telegraph.

—Not long ago, in a public school examination, an eccentric examiner demanded—"What views would King Alfred take of universal suffrage, the conscription and printed books, if he were living now?" A pupil wrote in answer—"If King Alfred were still alive, he would be too old to take any interest in anything."

Particular About His Name.

A green parrot lives in the city of Chelsea, Mass., who actually rejoices in the name of John W. Clarkson.

This parrot is a very good talker indeed. Visitors to the house where he resides are frequently astonished very soon after their arrival to hear a harsh and somewhat husky, but perfectly comprehensible voice, call out:

"John W. Clarkson wants a cracker!"

Another of his accustomed speeches, which sounds somewhat strange, is this:

"Pretty John W. Clarkson! Pretty, pretty John W. Clarkson!"

On one occasion, when some boy visitors were engaged in poking sticks between the wires of this accomplished bird's cage, they were startled to hear him call out to his mistress:

"Jennie! They're plaguing John W. Clarkson!"—Youth's Companion.

HOME HINTS AND HELPS.

—The washable cretonnes make good bed draperies and spreads. Colored marsailles in lovely tints is comparatively inexpensive and furnishes very attractive bed spreads.—N. Y. World.

—Oatmeal is particularly valuable as a food. It contains more nitrogen than any other cereal, with a very large percentage of starch and sugar. It contains more than ninety per cent. of nutriment. The coarsely-ground meal is best.

—For cleansing silver and brass add to one quart of rain-water two ounces ammonia and three ounces of precipitated chalk. Bottle and keep corked-shake before using. Wash silver in hot soapy water and rince in clean hot water.—N. Y. Tribune.

—Egg Salad: Boil eight eggs fifteen minutes; chop, salt and pepper them; then take one teaspoonful of flour, one of sugar, one of butter, one of prepared mustard and a half cup of good vinegar; cook five minutes and pour over the eggs.—Ladies Home Journal.

—Here is a recipe for delicious crullers: Take four eggs, beat very light, add four tablespoonfuls of sugar, the same of lard, a teaspoonful of salt and half a nutmeg grated; work into these as much sifted flour as will make a nice dough. Roll about an eighth of an inch thick, and fry in hot lard. Drop a pared potato into your lard to keep it from burning.—N. Y. Voice.

—To make skeleton leaves, soak in rain water for some weeks, remove by floating upon a card, and very gently remove the upper skin with a soft camel's hair brush. Float in water and catch on a card with the other side uppermost, and remove other skin and pulp. A stiff brush may be needed, to be used by dabbing. Do not touch with finger. Finally wash well, bleach with javelle water, wash and dry.—Scientific American.

—Champlain Potatoes: Cook one tablespoonful of butter and one teaspoonful of flour in a saucepan, and add cold boiled potatoes in somewhat thick slices. Mix well with a cupful of stock gravy or milk, and season with salt and pepper. Stew all together for a few minutes, then remove from the fire and add the yolk of one egg beaten with one teaspoonful of lemon juice and a little cold water. Stir for a few minutes, pour in a hot dish, and serve with chopped parsley. This way of cooking potatoes is called also "Maitre d' Hotel."—Demorest's Magazine.

A Savory Dish.

Cheese omelette is a most delicious and savory dish, and, since it is so quickly and easily made, furnishes an excellent dish for luncheon or tea on Sunday evening. Break three eggs into a bowl, beat well with a patent egg-beater, add a tablespoonful of milk or cream, and salt and pepper to taste. Place a frying-pan over a brisk fire and melt a tablespoonful of butter in it. As soon as the butter is very hot pour the egg mixture into it, beating all the while. Shake the pan gently while the omelette is cooking. As soon as it begins to "set," loosen the edges with a knife, scatter a dessertspoonful of grated cheese over the surface; of the omelette, fold it over in two, slip it onto a hot dish, and serve immediately. If the fire is clear and brisk the omelette should not take more than two or three minutes to cook. A chafing dish will permit of preparing this, and many other relishes at the table; certainly a much more comfortable way than in a hot kitchen, and if prepared at the table it can be served at once.—Christian Union.

To Make a Snow Pudding.

A generous quarter of a box of gelatine should be soaked in one-third of a cupful of cold water for two hours. At the end of that time add half a pint of boiling water, half a pint of sugar, the juice of one lemon and, if convenient, the juice of an orange. Stir until the gelatine and sugar are dissolved. Should the gelatine not dissolve perfectly place the bowl in a pan of boiling water for ten minutes. Strain this mixture into a large bowl and set in a cold place. When perfectly cold set the bowl in a pan and surround it with iced water. Add the unbeaten whites of two eggs. Watch the mixture, and when it begins to congeal beat with a whisk, or an egg-beater, until it is white and so thick that it will hardly flow when poured. Rinse a mold or large bowl in cold water and pour the pudding into it. Set by the ice for a few hours. At serving time dip the mold into warm water; then wipe it and turn the pudding on a flat dash. Pour a soft custard around it or serve the sauce in a pretty pitcher. —Ladies' Home Journal.

Newest Thing in Card Cases.

The newest card cases devised for formal visiting are really works of art. Only the finest and softest kids and leather are used—cream, amber and snow white. Those in suede are almost completely covered by silver, wrought in delicate lacy patterns, with either a tiny miniature set in moonstones in a cornor, a heavy monogram, or else a pink-tinted couch shell, surrounded by small brilliants. Twin hearts of moonstones and turquoises are seen on many of the handsomest specimens, while others are embossed with the inevitable silver fleur de lis. This fin de siecle effect is heightened by having a narrow silver ribbon wound about, to tie the triple figure and descend in graceful convolutions and loops to catch the next flower below.—Detroit Free Press.

Riding a Whale.

In the memoir of John Murray, the famous London publisher, there is a letter from Mr. Graham, then living on the Tay, describing an attack made upon a school of whales by the inhabitants of Dundee. She writes: "We saw the shoal of fish go up the river the day before, but little thought they were to afford such sport. A currier ran up to his middle into the water with a dressing-knife, and manfully plunged it up to the hilt into the side of the finner. The whale turned sharp on the currier, and turned him head over heels in the water, but bore off the knife of the half-drowning currier. Meanwhile a sailor leaped on the enraged animal's back, and swan Arion-like round the harbor, holding by the back fin. I am sorry to relate that the poor fish was at last mastered."—Youth's Companion.

THE SOLEMN PASSENGER.

He Approves of the Pleasant Passenger and Makes the Gruff One Stare.

"Well," said the solemn-looking passenger in the front seat to the pleasant young man just behind him, "the harvest is past, but the summer is still with us."

"Sure!" replied the young man.

"But it's on the wing, though!" continued the solemn man. "It's flying!"

"Right along!" said the pleasant passenger.

"Time is fleeting!" remarked the other.

"Well," said the pleasant youth, shaking his head, "that depends on how much time you get."

"Sir!" exclaimed the passenger in front.

"I say three months 'll fleet quicker than three years," replied the pleasant passenger, smiling. "Won't it?" said he to the gruff passenger who sat beside him.

"They say so that's tried it!" said the gruff passenger.

The solemn passenger was silent awhile, and then he opened up again:

"These are the days," said he "that the frivolous and unthinking spend in idling where the sea roars, or the mountain breezes whisper, or the streams of the valley murmur. You are not bound on idle vacation, I trust, my dear young friend?"

"Well, not exactly!" replied the pleasant young man, with a shake of his head.

"You bet your life he ain't!" said the gruff passenger.

"I am pleased to know it!" said the solemn passenger. "But I grieve to hear you suggest my wagering anything upon it, even so worthless and poor a thing as life. So you are not one of the trivial throng who are just now flocking to idle vacations?"

"No, sir! I am not!" replied the pleasant young man.

"You rejoice me!" said the solemn passenger, lifting his eyes, while the gruff passenger chuckled.

"I'm going on a vacation, though," said th pleasant young man, "but it won't be an idle one!" And he smiled at the gruff passenger, who chuckled again and said:

"Right you are! And the next station is ours!"

"Ah!" said the solemn man, "and its name?"

"Sing Sing!" replied the gruff passenger. "This young gent stays three years with us for having three wives, and none of 'em dead!"

The gruff passenger, from his manner, apparently thought this revelation would shock the solemn man into speechless horror, and he was knocked dumb himself when the solemn passenger grabbed the pleasant young man by the hand.

"My poor young friend!" he exclaimed. "Another martyr to righteousness and faithfulness to the law! May the spirit of Brigham sustain you!"

When the train stopped and the gruff man and the pleasant passenger got up to leave the car the solemn man pressed a card in the young man's hand. The gruff passenger took it and read it. This was its inscription:

Elder Mormon Church of Latter Day Saints,

The Only One Ever Printed—Can You Find the Word?

There is a 3 inch display advertisement in this paper, this week, which has no two words alike except one word. The same is true of each new one appearing each week from the Dr. Harter Medicine Co. This house places a "Crescent" on everything they make and publish. Look for it, send them the name of the word and they will return you book, beautiful lithographs or samples free.

SHE Spoke Without Thinking.—"Do you know, Miss Honeydew—or—Dolly—you are the first girl I have ever kissed!" "Oh, that's just what they all say!"—Life.

The Course of Empire.

The poet informs, is westward. Emigrants in that direction should be provided with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters as an antidote to malaria, the bane to newly settled clearings. Moreover, the peerless fortifying agent neutralizes the pernicious effect of damp and exposure, mental and bodily fatigue and nervous strain. Travelers, tourists, miners, navvies and mariners use it with advantage.

A WATCH wheel is usually modest on its travels. It prefers to go round in cog.—Baltimore American.

Progress.

It is very important in this age of vast material progress that a remedy be pleasing to the taste and to the eye, easily taken, acceptable to the stomach and healthy in its nature and effects. Possessing these qualities, Syrup of Figs is the one perfect laxative and most gentle diuretic known.

"THOUGH I fly, I am still game," said the wild duck.—Baltimore American.

WHY don't you try Carter's Little Liver Pills? They are a positive cure for sick headache, and all the ills produced by disordered liver. Only one pill a dose.

THE girl of the period—the lady compositor.—Boston Transcript.

Pike's Toothache Drops Cure in one minute.

IN order to fight the flies successfully the cow has to make a good many flank movements.—Buffalo Express.

IN aquatic disturbances the sculler is apt to be an oar-struck man.—Boston Courier.

FOR twenty-five cents you can get Carter's Little Liver Pills—the best liver regulator in the world. Don't forget this. One pill a dose.

AS THE mercury climbs up the perspiration rolls down.—Atlanta Journal

A sense of fullness and other troubles after eating? Then you need a "Pellet." Not one of the ordinary, griping, tearing pills—it's a sickness in itself to take them. But one of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets—the original Liver Pill, the smallest and the easiest to take. The easiest in the way they work, too—they're mild and gentle, but thorough and effective. Every part of the system feels their healthful influence. They cleanse and regulate the liver, stomach and bowels. Regulate, mind you. They prevent disease as well as cure it. They're purely vegetable and perfectly harmless. Sick Headache, Bilious Headache, Constipation, Indigestion, and all derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels are promptly relieved and permanently cured.

They're the cheapest pill you can buy, for they're guaranteed to give satisfaction, or your money is returned.

You pay only for the good you get.

This is true only of Dr. Pierce's medicines.

"August Flower"

For two years I suffered terribly with stomach trouble, and was for all that time under treatment by a physician. He finally, after trying everything, said stomach was about worn out, and that I would have to cease eating solid food for a time at least. I was so weak that I could not work. Finally on the recommendation of a friend who had used your preparations with beneficial results, I procured a bottle of August Flower, and commenced using it. It seemed to do me good at once. I gained in strength and flesh rapidly; my appetite became good, and I suffered no bad effects from what I ate. I feel now like a new man, and consider that August Flower has entirely cured me of Dyspepsia in its worst form. JAMES E. DEDERICK, Saugerties, New York.

OFFICAL PAPER OF VILLAGE OF DELANO.

DELANO, FRIDAY, OCT. 2, 1891.

GREAT NORTHERN R'Y.

Passenger trains leave Delano as follows:

No. 7, going west	- - - -	9:41 a. m.
" 9, " "	- - - -	8:21 p. m.
No. 10, going east	- - - -	5:23 a. m.
" 3, " "	- - - -	4:40 p. m.

GEO. W. BOLTON, Local Agent.

DELANO DIARY.

—Hon. C. G. Halgren and son Guy, of Watertown, were over yesterday after lumber and lime for the Mill company's new grain house.

—Rev. G. Roible, has been returned by the German Methodist conference to the Crow River circuit.

—The Delano Model Roller Mills shipped another car load of flour to Minneapolis, yesterday.

—The Delano base ball nine we understand met their match, the Maple Lake club, at Waverly on Sunday.

J. C. Niess, of St. Michaels was a GAZETTE caller on Wednesday. Jake thinks Delano a nice place.

—The last heard of the whereabouts of "Max" he was in Minneapolis hunting for a sprinter to beat the Waverly man.

—Peter Floody, engineer on the G. N. R'y. was shaking hands with Delano friends yesterday for a few minutes.

—Among arrivals yesterday morning was mayor Campbell, of Watertown on his road home from the convention city.

—Considerable wheat continues to be marketed at this place, notwithstanding the admonitions of the People's Party's leaders.

—Charles Hitz has been grading his lots in the rear of the city hall, where he intends building a residence in the not very distant future.

—M. A. O'Hair has been attending court at Waverly and at Armstrong during the week. Mike says his clients were victorious in both places.

—Our local weather observer informs us that the first snow of the season in 1887, came on Oct. 22; In 1888, on Oct. 16. Prepare for snow, in season.

—Prof. J. T. McClary, will deliver a lecture at Rockford on Saturday evening for the benefit of the Rockford schools. This will be quite a literary treat.

—Irvin Stewart and another gentleman have brought a drove of horses from the far west for sale here. Leon Frazie is among those securing first choice.

—L. McCurdy representing the St. Paul Globe made us a pleasant call yesterday. He says he finds the Globe readers in this vicinity pleased with the paper.

—The through trains over the Great Northern still continue to consist of from 12 to 14 cars. Where do all the people come from, and where do they go to, anyway?

—Church builder Maxfield has now tackled a twelve thousand dollar depot at Willmar where he has a crew of men at work excavating and getting ready for the structure.

—John Lohmiller has been employed by the Henrich Brewing company at this place instead of Joe Haumont who previously transacted their business in this section of the country.

—S. S. Ball has recovered his mare which was lost in Minneapolis on the day of the Harvest Parade. Sin was not quite sure that he would ever see her again so bought another and now has two.

—The Examining board of the Delano school met on Tuesday and endorsed the certificates of Mrs. Lindsley, which were issued by the County Superintendent. "Better late than never, but better never late."

—Considerable complaint is heard concerning the slowness with which Uncle Sam,s mail carriers get the mails over the county. Papers mailed at Delano on Friday ought to arrive at St. Michaels or Watertown before the middle of next week. At least most people interested think so.

—With this number ends vol. III of the BUFFALO GAZETTE. For three years has the GAZETTE been faithful to its trust and furnished its readers with items of interest and general news. Taking the side of all questions which reason dictates to be right. Without fear or favor doing justice to all.

—Charley Wiese seems to have bad luck as a horseman He traded off the one he has been breaking and yesterday morning he hitched the new animal into the buggy and started out but before he got upon the street he backed up and dished a front wheel the wrong way and broke the shafts. Try again, Charley.

—Rev. Jabez Blackhurst preached his last sermons on this circuit last Sabbath, before leaving for conference. It is expected that this circuit will be changed taking in Montrose and Waverly with Delano, and that Rockford and North Rockford will be joined to Buffalo circuit and that the present pastor will live here.

—If the city authorities would cause a tin cup to be attached to the town pump it would obviate the occurrence of such laughable incidents as was enacted one day this week when a small boy and an elderly lady, strangers in town, proceeded to get said small boy a drink. The boy held his mouth under the spout while the old lady manipulated the long pump handle. The traveling public is entitled to a dipper.

—Delano Fair day Saturday, Oct. 10. Presbyterian services at 10.30 Suuday.

—Mrs. J. D. Young has been on the sick list during the week.

—J. E. Brothers has sold his feed mill to Louie Buck.

—Several of our young couples are to be married in the near future.

—A grand Republicau meeting is billed for the 10th inst., at Buffalo.

—Mrs. Chance received by express, from Elbow Lake, last Friday, a fine young wild goose.

—Among freight receipts yesterday at our depot was a small selection of printer's stationary from Minneapolis for the GAZETTE office.

—John Coolen has moved into his new beautiful and commodious residence on Third street.

—Mr. Moberg of the Henrich Bros. Brewing Association is spending several days in town in the interests of the firm.

—For the enlightenment of the Eagle and in answer to her inquiry we will say, No, license is not a toriff. But a tariff is a tax all the same.

—Albert Johnson's oxen ran away Wednesday and bruised Albert up considerable.

—Conrad Marth, one of the old and substantial farmers of Franklin town was a GAZETTE caller during the week.

—Warren Merriman's smiling countenance again graces the streets of Delano as of yore. Mr. M. has had a hard siege but is on the mend.

—The rain on Sunday was welcomed by all. It laid the dust which was becomeing troublesome to travelers and put the ground in condition for plowing.

—From the Hutchinson Leader we learn that Dr. Wakefield had an experience with a wire fence lately. Wire fences are bad things. We speak from experience.

—Martin Conzet one of Greenwood's prosperous farmers was a GAZETTE caller on Tuesday. He informs us that 18 bushels per acre was an average crop of wheat this seasou in his vicinity.

—Ye Editor accompanied Rev. Jabez Blackhnrst on his rounds on Sunday last and was pleased to note the presence of good congregations at both Rockford and North Rockford. Both places have nice churches of their own which speaks well for the enterprise of the committees.

Cramer's Meat Market.

A first-class meat market is a blessing in every well regulated town, and Frank Cramer is furnishing that blessing. Mr. Cramer understands his business well, and when purchasing stock for his market is sure to buy only that which will give satisfaction to his customers. His porterhouse, pork and beef steaks, his bacon, hams and sausages, are fresh and as good as can be found in the market. Of vegetables he keeps a variety. Remember he makes a specialty of supplying threshing crews. He will give particular attention to the village trade and invites customers to call and see him.

To the Public.

W. H. FRAZEE. LEON FRAZEE.

Having leased the American House at Buffalo, together with the stables in connection with the property, we would most respectfully solicit the patronage of the traveling public whenever in the county seat. We will try to furnish accommodations as good and at as reasonable rates as any in the village. We will continue our machinery business in both Buffalo and Delano as heretofore. Give us a call at either or all our business places.

Yours Respectfully,
W. H. FRAZEE & SON.

44—tf URBON POGRZEBA.

An Eccentric Minnesotian.

LITCHFIELD, Sept. 29.—Franz Herman Widstrand, who was buried here yesterday, was one of the most eccentric characters in Minnesota. He was secretary of the Bank of Sweden, of which country he was a native, previous to 1855, being obliged to leave for America in that year on account of his interference in political affairs. He lived in Minneapolis until 1863, when he went to Washington as one of the assistant auditors of this government. Once more his political views got him into trouble, and he had to resign. Going to Wright county some years later he established the "Fairest community" at Lake Constance—a colony of free lovers, free thinkers and bloomer wearers—but his disciples soon became disheartened and deserted him.

WITH this number commences Vol. IV, of the Buffalo GAZETTE. Three years ago, in Buffalo, the county-seat of Wright one of the best counties in the state of Minnesota and on the eve of a hotly contested political campaign in which our state ticket was headed by that honorable citizen and eminent democrat, the late Hon. Eugene M. Wilson, whose good qualities were so unanimously acknowledged in the large vote given him in this so long a solid republican state the first number of the BUFFALO GAZETTE appeared, under the management of Barton Bros. It was democratic from the first, and although it was run for awhile by Barton & Junken and was then purchased by the present editor and publisher and moved to Delano, a democratic village, and the metropolis of the county it has never failed to discharge its duty in disseminating democratic doctrines, in keeping before the people the great idea that so many of our readers who came from other countries and brought a few goods with them know is the truth, that tariff is a tax. We are too modest to claim credit for all things that come our way and yet it is a fact that where a few years ago our county had but a solitary democratic official it now has six, with a seventh elected and who has not yet taken his office; our legislative district so surely republican now has three democratic legislators; four democrats occupy seats on our district court bench; our State Auditor is a democrat; our congressional district elected a democrat, last fall on the then, and now great issue, TARIFF IS A TAX.

DR. SAMUEL D. BURCHARD, of "Rum, Romanism and Rebellion" fame, died, at Syracuse on Sept. 25.

OMAHA people are having some lively religeous discussions just now judging from some of the reports from that place.

CHICAGO unveiled her Grant Equestrian Statue on Wednesday, in presence of a crowd estimated at 100,000. Judge Walter Q. Gresham delivered a fine oration on the occasion.

PROF. O. V. TOUSLEY, of Minneappolis, it is claimed has been appointed to succeed Lyman on the Civil Service Commission. Why don't Minneapolis ask for the Earth and have done with it?

THE Ecumenical Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church is in session at Washington. Fifty millions of Methodists, it is claimed, are represented. The meeting continues from Oct. 7 to Oct. 20.

MINNEAPOLIS has concluded she is big enough to feed and care for the great Republican National Convention. Why can't St. Paul have the Democratic National Convention, to kind of keep even you know?

REPORTS from Victoria, B. C., Oct. 8, say that Lieutenant Frederick Schwatka, the Northern Explorer, has returned to that place, after having made a successful trip. All hands well and hearty. They managed to pass through the St. Elias Alps, a feat it is claimed never before accomplished by man.

AS THE 3d of November draws nigh New York politicians grow more and more in earnest. Speeches are daily made and wires pulled to elect as governor of the Empire State either Flower or Fassett. Ohio seems to be having the livliest campaign, as the war there being waged is as to which principle shall prevail that of high protection as persisted in by McKinley people or the so-called free trade idea, advocated by Democrats, and represented by Campbell in that state.

Cleveland Presides.

Grover Cleveland presided last evening at the ratification meeting in New York City. He opened his remarks on assuming the position by saying, "My Fellow Citizens: The Democratic party has at all times been by profession and by tradition the party of the people."

Joint Debate.

Governor Campbell and Major McKinley met at Ada, Ohio, yesterday in joint debate over the political issues now before the people of that state. Immense crowds of the friends of both candidates were on the ground and listened to both sides from the same platform. Gov. Campbell opened and the Major followed. Republicans were supplied with tin horns, tin buttons, tin canes, tin flagstaffs &c &c, and the Democrats had their badges. Quite a lively time was had.

CHARLES STUART PARNELL DEAD.

Sir John Pope Hennesy Gone.

On Tuesday Charles Stuart Parnell the great Irish leader, died, at Brighton, of rheumatic troubles. He was 45 years of age and has taken an active part in trying to obtain home rule for the Emerald Isle. Like many others he made a mistake in getting mixed up in a divorce case, afterwards marrying the woman Mrs. O'Shea. Many of his followers deserted him and two factions was the consequence. The work for the cause he loved was well done and is appreciated by his countrymen and others. Now that he is dead the parties will, most likely, unite their efforts in securing the freedom of their country.

Sir John Pope Hennessy one of the strongest opponents of Mr. Parnell is also dead.

Cleveland is in Line.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—The reception at the Democratic club rooms, No. 17 Fifth Avenue, in honor of Hon. Roswell P. Flower, this evening, marks the re-entrance of Grover Cleveland into the political arena. After a silence unbroken since the opening of the peginning of the present campaign in this state, he made a speech clearly defining his position and his desire for the state ticket. Shortly after 9 o'clock the guests and members of the club began to arrive at the club rooms. Mr. Flower was one of the early arrivals. As he entered he was greeted with hearty applause. William E. Curtis introduced Mr. Flower, who responded very briefly, thanking the club for its flattering reception.

When Mr. Cleveland entered the club he was greeted with cheers. He was escorted to where Mr. Flower was standing, and the cheers broke out once more. Mr. Curtis immediately introduced him, and the ex-president made an address in part as follows: Maybe you are surprised to see me here to-night, as for the past few days I have been more interested in domestic politics. [Cheers and laughter.] I can say that I have been especially interested, although the subject of that solicitude on my part will never be of any especial benefit to the Democratic party [laughter] unless there comes a time when the woman's suffrage bill passes.

We are now entering upon a most important conflict, and I assure you that I do not want to be left out. In this, which in my mind is one of the most important campaigns which we have yet entered upon, it is a time when all who call themselves Democrats should do their utmost for the success of Democratic principles. It is with the greatest pleasure that I say to you that the ticket you have nominated deserves the unqualified, earnest and warmest support of the party, and any Democrat who fails in giving this will regret it. [Cheers and long-continued applause.]

You are accustomed to hear me issuing notes of warning, but I wish to utter another to-night. In order to secure votes enough to succeed it will be necessaay to work harder than ever before. And it needs the most earnest sentiment and patriotic devotion to insure success. I hope that when the sun sets on Nov. 3 you will have won a glorious victory. But it will not be one won without effort. I am confident that the right spirit will prevail and that the Democratic club will have good cause for congratulation. —St. Paul Globe.

Reciprocity.

Press News Association.

WASHINGTON. Oct. 6.—Negotiations are said to be in progress for freer trade relations between the United States and Germany. The report is that at the time Germany raised the embargo on American pork she expected this government to reciprocate in some way, but the President declined to do so on the ground that he could not afford to bargain for the righting of what was conceded to be originally wrong on Germany's part. But when Germany removed, without condition, the embargo on American pork, the President is said to have notified the German minister and his government that the United States would be reciprocal.—St. Paul Daily News.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, Oct. 2 1891.

When Mr. Harrison determind upon doing the "jingo" act, in hope of a favorable effect upon republican prospects in the State elections to be held this fall, he should have selected a country that was stronger than prostrate Chili, which has just passed through six months of devastating civil war. The threats that have been made against the temporary government of that country by the administration this week must result in making the United States appear to the nations of the world in the role of the overgrown school boy "bully" among a lot of little boys. It will take a great deal more than the reports of Minister Egan, who has made himself obnoxious to the Chilians by meddling in their local affairs to convince sessible and unprejudiced people that the present government of Chili, which certainly has had enough trouble at home, would deliberately and intentionally slight the United States in any way, notwithstanding its knowledge that Minister Egan should have so far forgotten his position as to openly take sides in the civil war which recently ended there, and it is believed by those who are familiar with Chilian affairs that it will be fully shown upon an impartial investigation that Minister Egan has purposely exceeded his legal authority, with the intention of goading the Chilian authorities into taking some step that could be considered by the United States as an affront, and it is further believed that in this, Minister Egan has been acting in accordance with the wishes and instructions of the present administration. This is not a pleasant thing for a patriotic American to have to say, but appearances certainly indicate its truthfulness.

Senator Daniels, of Virginia, who has been making speeches in the different sections of that state was in Washington this week. He says there is no opposition so far as he knows to his return to the Senate. His present term does not expire until March 4, 1893, but his successor will be named by the legislature which will be elected this fall.

It will not be the fault of the administration if the political machines known as "State associations" do not make the departments pan out well in "voluntary" contributions for use in the important states this fall, and lest there might be some misunderstanding on the part of the poor clerks as to how the administration views the efforts of these associations to compel them to come down with their cash, officials just a grade below cabinet officers have been put in charge of the various State associations. Sixth Auditor Coulter is the grand mogul of the Ohio association; he prides himself on being known as a "practical politician". The New York Association has elected Gen. Cyrus Bussey, Assistant Secretary of the Interior, president, and on its campaign executive committee are A. J. Davidson, Deputy Commissioner of Pensions; A. N. Parker, Deputy Attorney General, and a number of minor departmental officials, care being taken that not more than one of them comes from the same department. Thus every department is covered and no "voluntary" contributor escapes.

Nepotism and Repuplicanism have long been synonymous terms in Washington, but a sensation was nevertheless created this week when it came out that three employees of the Pension Office made affidavits and submitted them to Secretary Noble charging that they had been approached by the same son of Commissioner Raum, who was some months ago allowed to resign his position as appointment clerk in the Pension Office when he should have been put in prison for having engaged in the selling of appointments and promotions under his father, with a proposition to have them promoted if they would pay him a certain amount of cash. After these affidavits had been made and Commissioner Raum had been called upon for an explanation that official had the cheek to ask Secretary Noble to dismiss the clerks who made them on the ground that they were engaged in a conspiracy to injure him (Raum) and the Pension Office. It reminds one of the old saw: "Did ever criminal think well of the law.

CORRESPONDENCE

ANNANDALE.

Rev. Mr. Higgins is away this week in attendance upon the Methodist Conference at Red Wing and Elder Ringer supplied his pulpits last Sabbath. It is expected that Mr. Higgins will be continued here for another year.

John Nyler & Peter Carlson have the contract for the building of Mr. Rennie's store and are now at work on the same.

S. H. McGuire's new store is so far completed that he has moved his goods in. The building, when completed, will be a fine structure and a credit to our village.

Elder Stanley was here last week inquiring for a tenement; we hope he may succeed in finding one for we should consider his residence among us, with his family, an acquisition to our social and moral well being.

P. S. Rudolph, of Albion, attended the Methodist conference at Red Wing as lay delegate.

Dan F. Powers, blacksmith on Oak avenue, has got into his new house on Cherry avenue.

Johanes Hendrickson, bartender in Ericson & Nelson's saloon, got a leg broken in a friendly scuffle with Louis Wadman, last Tuesday afternoon. Dr. Ridgway was called to attend to the case.

W. W. Towle and G. W. Vogler are working in the vicinity of Cold Springs, in the interests of Fire and Life Insurance and as loan agents. They are rustlers and make business lively there.

G. W. Bayless who lately sold his farm in Albion has bought the Steward farm in Corinna.

John B. Dally and the Lewis brothers are competing for live hogs and have been paying four cents live weight. In the strife farmers are liable to get all their porkers are worth.

ROCKFORD.

C. M. Johnson did business in the city on Monday.

C. C. Tallman is moving into the Mrs. Walker place lately bought by Dr. O. R. Fassett.

F. A. Baker moves this week to Monticello to take charge of a congregation there.

A. Trombly will move into his house which has been purchased by Bent Gould.

Della Gent returned after a ten days trip to Hillsboro. Della thought he was better off at home sleeping under his mother's quilts than out on the prairie.

Joe Thomas and his son Frank and J. S. Gurney started for Dakota yesterday to aid in threshing. $3.00 per day.

Mr. Bowen and wife started on a trip to visit Kansas City and from there to Cherokee, Iowa. They expect to be gone about two or three weeks.

F. L. Sherer, of Delano, was in town Wednesday.

INDEPENDENCE.

We have had some cool weather after the hot wave that swept over this part of the country last month.

It is strange some enterprising fellow does not start out with a lot of canines and introduce into every village a first class dog fight. It would be about as resbectable as the Chicago races.

Last Tuesday the flag at Maple Plain was at half mast as a sign of distress and grief at the death of C. W. Gorden a member of Gorden Granger Post.

We have muddy roads since the late rains. Suppose people will soon be crying too much rain.

School will begin in District 102, next Monday with Robert McCutcheon of Minneapolis as teacher.

Farmers are getting a good deal of their plowing done, the late rains have softened up the ground so it plows very nicely now.

We have had no killing frost yet but may expect it at any time now and yet the leaves on the trees are dying of old age.

The October month has come,
The saddest of the year;
We hear no more the wood bees hum,
The leaves are brown and sear.

Potato digging is in order now, with the farmer, some of them do not turn out very big.

McCormick & Co. are buying a good deal of wheat, at their elevator. They pay the highest market price.

Al Rader has struck water for B. H. Hall, at 160 feet. Almost every body is having a tubular well. They are getting quite fashionable now days, but the amount of it is people have to have water, cost what it will.

Who said we would have better times this fall, after the crops were all gathered? Most of the farmers have had to meet obligations from one to five years standing and do not have a great amount left for themselves.

LORETTO.

Light frosts the past few nights.

Some of the farmers are digging their potatoes. The crop is poor, the potatoes being very small.

Look for a change of time on the "Soo line" soon.

P. J. O'Brien took a lay off for a few days and visited relatives in the southern part of the state. Wm. Christie of Eden Valley, run the section during Pat's absence.

Men are scarce this fall. The Soo line needs lots of them.

John Burg went to Minneapolis Monday. John is preparing for a big dance Saturday night.

Peter Becker finds business so rushing he has concluded to enlarge his feed mill this fall.

Philip and Jos. Lerch took the morning train Tuesday for the city. Jos. Lerch, it is understood has begun action against Adam Tautges for damages for entering his house some time ago and abusing him. Lawyers have been up from Minneapolis looking up his case.

Peter Rancoer had a "freco" at his home Sunday evening.

It is astonishing, the number of Jewish peddlers travelling through this part of the country. Hardly a day passes that you do not see one or more in town.

Mrs. P. O'Brien's father and mother spent a couple of days with them last week.

Frank Aydt left Monday for St. Paul.

A. J. Cruikshank has been having a big time in Minneapolis and has been sent to the work house for thirty days to pay for it.

Rams Horns.

MANY telegraph lines are being extended into the heart of Africa.

UMBRELLAS are now made of paper in France. They are made waterproof by gelatined bicromate of potassium.

IT is said that onions will cure diphtheria. Now if we can find something to cure onions it may be worth while to cure diphtheria.

JEAN INGELOW is now a gray-haired little old woman of 63 years. She is a kind friend of the poor, and at regular intervals gives them when she calls "copyright dinners" from the proceeds of her books.

W. C. WYNKOPP, a Denver mining expert, is about to proceed to Africa to look for the famous King Solomon's mines for an English syndicate. Perhaps the best part of them exist in a book which Rider Haggard wrote.

EX-GOV. MOREHOUSE, of Missouri, was the third ex-governor of that state to die by his own hands. Thomas Reynolds, after serving a four years' term, killed himself at Jefferson City in 1844, and Thomas C. Reynolds, at St. Louis in 1887.

PERU is not yet all a republic should be, as is evidenced by the fact that many inhabitants in the different territories of the country are signing petitions to congress asking that the free exercise of all worship and religions be permitted throughout the republic.

A SILVER shekel has been found in Galveston of the time of Simon Maccabeus, who lived 142 years before the beginning of the Christian era, and consequently is 2,033 years old. The coin is estimated by competent judges to be worth for its numismatic value $5,000, while the intrinsic value of the silver it contains does not exceed 51 or 52 cents.

FIVE hundred and eight thousand five hundred square feet of space in the world's fair buildings were formally assigned to the governments of England, Germany and Denmark. Of this amount England gets 265,000 square feet, Germany 210,000 square feet and Denmark 20,000 in the main building, and 13,500 in addition for a dairy exhibit.

THE new Plaza bank soon to commence business in the city of New York will be as distinctly a millionaires' bank as the Metropolitan club is a club of millionaires. It has on its list of stockholders a greater number of millionaires than any other similar institution in this country. The combined wealth of the men backing the new bank is probably $500,000,000.

FIVE American miners went from California on May 7 last to prospect for gold along the River Maranon, in Peru, the headwaters of the Amazon. A South American paper says that one of the party returned to Lima about three weeks ago completely broken down by sickness. He was unable to continue his journeyings, and reports the death in the mountains of his four companions.

PATTI is very fond of parrots, and when she sees one that strikes her fancy she does not hesitate to pay the price asked for it, however exorbitant it may be. Some years ago she actually paid five thousand dollars for a parrot, and this loquacious bird is still to be seen and heard in her winter garden at Craig-y-Nos. One of the diva's parrots speaks Welsh, another French and others English.

THE two erstwhile globe trotters of the feminine persuasion, Miss Elizabeth Bisland and Miss Cochrane ("Nelly Bly") are reported as thriving in their several walks. Miss Bisland, just from Europe, is to marry Mr. Charles W. Wetmore, a New York lawyer. Miss Cochrane is said to be wearing Parisian gowns and writing well-paid stories of the ephemeral and ineffectual sort. But both girls are getting on by self-help, and that's what American girls are born for.

THE evidence taken in the celebrated Davis will case in Butte, Mont., covered four thousand pages of transcripts, a total of about one million two hundred thousand words. If the sheets of evidence were placed end to end and close together they would reach nearly a mile. As they stand in the court records they make a pile about six feet high. And this is simply evidence, without attorneys' speeches and rulings of the court. The stenographic work cost about $5,000.

THE wonderful crops and the abundance of general products in the United States this year seem to be a family blessing, bestowed without regard to where the individual members may be located, from the arctic circle to the gulf and covering half the world in longitude. This is really noteworthy, considering the hard times afflicting the rest of the world with equal impartiality. The salmon product of Alaska is unusually large, and will average 15 per cent. over that of last year. Over 200,000 cases of salmon will be shipped from Alaska this season. One steamer brought down 20,000 cases.

LAND titles run back a long way on the peninsula of Delaware and Maryland. One Aldrich, a farmer in Delaware, sold a farm, and the title deeds that he passed were dated well back into the seventeenth century, and they bore the signature of the Indian chief from whom the land was originally bought. The property up to the recent sale had descended in the family by inheritance. When the United States government was seeking to erect a structure on Wallop's island, one Sneed came along with a seventeenth century title, and gave no end of trouble before his claims were satisfied.

JUDGE MCMILLAN, of Brookhaven, Miss., who has been figuring on the census returns, claims that the oldest people now living in the United States reside in southern Mississippi. He cites the following instances, all the parties being known to him: Near Union Church resides Elizabeth McIntyre, aged one hundred and one, and near by lives Mrs. Mary Goodson, aged one hundred and ten. Both were born near where they live. Mrs. McIntyre has a sister living near Byram who is one hundred and ten years old. James Stuart living eight miles south of Brook Haven is one hundred and four years old.

IN the sixtieth annual report of the commissioner of Indian affairs Mr. Morgan says the time is at hand for an extension over the Indians of the protection and privileges of our courts. The enrollment of Indian pupils for the year ended June 30 was 17,926, an increase over last year of 1,549. The commissioner regards the education of the Indian as the only solution of the Indian problem.

PERISHED BY FIRE.

Flames Destroy a Tenement House in New York and Five Lives Are Lost.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—New York has been visited by another fire horror. Three persons were burned to death and suffocated and two boys were so badly burned that they died after being removed to the hospital. The dead are: Mrs. Annie Murphy, 32 years old, of 262 Hudson street; Miss Katie Dunn, 23 years old, a dressmaker, who boarded with Mrs. Murphy; Josephine Ryan, 5 years old, of Washington, D. C., Mrs. Murphy's niece; Martin D. Toohey, 11 years old, died at the hospital at 9 o'clock; John Toohey, 9 years old, Mrs. Murphy's second son, died at the hospital.

The fire broke out in the five-story tenement house at Hudson and Dominick street early Monday morning William Murphy, his wife and two children occupied the fifth floor. Mrs. Murphy climbed through the top door to the roof, her clothing being in flames. There she burned slowly to death. Her charred corpse was found on the roof by the firemen. Josephine Ryan, who was visiting the Murphy family, was burned to death in her bed. Katie Dunn, who boarded with the Murphys, was found in her bed asphyxiated by smoke. The fire started in a woodshed in the basement, and quickly igniting the gas meters the flames rushed up the elevator shaft to the top floor.

The policemen discovered the fire and immediately broke in the doors of the main entrance to the house on the Dominick street side. Flames and smoke rushed out and drove the policemen back. The stairway leading to the upper floors was a winding one, the center forming a shaft that was filled with a column of flame. It was evident that it would be impossible for the inmates of the house, fifty in number, to escape by the stairs. The policemen hastened to the fire escape on the front of the building and shouted to the panic-stricken occupants not to attempt to descend by the stairs. Then they climbed up the fire escape and ordered the men, women and children to descend. In this they were assisted by the firemen, who had quickly answered the alarm.

Fireman Lucas on reaching the fifth floor found in the rear rooms Matthew Ryan, a boxmaker, who is a widower, and his three young children, almost overpowered by smoke and unable to help themselves. He dragged them to the window and with the aid of his comrades succeeded in getting them down the fire escape safely. Just then hook and ladder truck No. 8 drove up and one of its firemen, William Murphy, sprang to the ground, shouting:

"Great heavens, it's my house! Where are my wife and children?"

Before anyone could stop him he rushed through the flames and smoke and fought his way up the stairs to the fifth floor. There he found the body of his wife, burned almost beyond recognition, lying in the hallway just outside her apartments.

A little farther away was the burned form of little Josephine Ryan, the dead woman's niece. She was still living, but died soon after. The body of Miss Katie Dunn was found at the foot of a short ladder leading to the roof. She had evidently been overcome by the smoke and burned to death while seeking escape there.

The two boys, John and Martin Toohey, Murphy's stepsons, were found in the room. They were removed to the rooms of the Monticello club, across the street, where the half-dressed tenants had found refuge. Thence the boys were taken to St. Vincent's hospital where they died in a short time.

Mrs. Murphy was married to Fireman Murphy only one month ago. She was then the widow of Policeman Toohey.

READY FOR WORK.

Opening of the New United States Court of Appeals at Chicago.

CHICAGO, Oct. 6.—The new United States court of appeals for this district convened in this city Monday, Justice Harlan, of the federal supreme court, presiding. The other members beside Justice Harlan are Judges Walter Q Gresham and Henry W. Blodgett, of the United States court for this district.

The new court is known as the United States circuit court of appeals for the seventh circuit, and is one of nine provided for by a late act of congress, taking away appellate jurisdiction from the present United States courts and giving it in amplified form to this. The court is to consist of the judge of the supreme court for the circuit in which the court is held, the present circuit judge for that circuit and another circuit judge to be appointed. Until such appointments are made or in case of their inability to act, a district judge may be called in. This is why Judge Blodgett sat as one of the court Monday. The purpose of the institution of the court is to relieve the overcrowded docket of the supreme court. Efforts to secure the establishment of such a court have been made for fifty years. The late Judge David Davis was especially active in the matter and the act finally passed by congress is virtually the bill drafted by him. In dignity it is supposed to be very little below the United States supreme court, whatever it may be in extent of jurisdiction. That is why the judges wear robes.

Will Wed Each Other's Daughters.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 6.—The interesting announcement is made here that Col. Forsyth, of the United States army, who served on Gen. Philip Sheridan's staff, and who is aged about 60 years, is to wed the daughter of Dr. Bache, one of the old and wealthy families of this city. The lady in question is about 20 years of age. Col. Forsyth was in the Pine Ridge battle some time ago. Dr. Bache, who is about 60 years old, proposes to retaliate upon his military friend, and will marry Col. Forsyth's daughter, who is also about 20 years old.

Low Water in the Ohio.

CINCINNATI, O., Oct. 6.—The water in the Ohio is so low that eighteen steamboats are aground between here and Point Pleasant, W. Va. It is said that in several places the river can be safely crossed by horses and wagons. Shippers are put to much loss by the interruption of navigation.

Kicked His Brother to Death.

BAY CITY, Mich., Oct. 6.—William Burke was kicked and so badly injured by his brother Hurlbert Sunday that he died during the night. Hurlbert is under arrest. He says he acted in self-defense.

THE INDIANS.

Principal Points and Suggestions Contained in the Annual Report of Commissioner Morgan.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—The sixtieth annual report of the commissioner of Indian affairs has just been submitted to the secretary of the interior. After alluding to the increased public interest in the subject of Indian administration the commissioner outlines what he regards as the settled policy of the government in its dealings with the Indians, emphasizing comprehensiveness, definiteness of aim, clearness of outline, adaptation of means to ends, justice, firmness, humanity, radicalness, stability, and time as the essential elements of such a policy. He thinks the great forces now at work—land in severalty, with its accompanying dissolution of the tribal relation and breaking up of the reservation; the destruction of the agency system; citizenship and all that belongs thereto, of manhood, independence, privilege and duty; education, which seeks to bring the rising generation of Indians into right relationship with the age in which they live and to put into their hands the tools by which they may gain for themselves food and clothing and build for themselves homes—will, if allowed to continue undisturbed a reasonable length of time, accomplish their beneficent ends.

The report points out that originally the Indians were regarded as independent nationalities, then as dependent allies. In 1872 congress forbade making any treaties with the Indians, and in 1887 the general allotment act provided for the allotment of lands and the admission of the Indians into full citizenship. It says the time has come for a declaration by congress to the effect that hereafter it will not recognize the Indians as competent to make war; that they shall be treated not as belligerents but as subjects and dependent people, capable of insurrection, rioting or disturbance of the peace, but not of waging war; that the general government has the right not only to establish schools for Indian children, but also to use force to secure to these children the benefit of these schools. The commissioner submits that the time is at hand for an extension to the Indians of the protection and privileges of the courts, and also thinks the time is near at hand when congress should pass an enabling act whereby the five civilized tribes may form either a territorial or a state government and be represented on the floors of congress. The report says the allotment of lands to Indians is making satisfactory progress. The commissioner thinks the ultimate destruction of the entire system of reservations is inevitable.

The enrollment of Indian pupils for the year ended June 30 was 17,926, an increase over last year of 1,549. Regarding contract schools, the commissioner recommends the maintenance of the status quo for the present, but urges that the appropriation of public funds for sectarian education is contrary to the spirit of the constitution, opposed to public policy and ought at an early day to be discontinued. He expressed strong appreciation of the missionary work done among the Indians by the churches, and thinks the present time is peculiarly favorable for the increase of such work. The amount of congressional appropriation for Indian education available for the year to come is nearly $2,250,000. The commissioner regards the education of the Indian as the only solution of the Indian problem.

PROF. BRIGGS INDICTED.

Formal Charges Preferred at the Meeting of the Presbytery.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Great interest was manifested Monday in the meeting of the New York presbytery in the Scotch Presbyterian church because the charge of heresy against Rev. Dr. Briggs was expected to come up. The interest in this is not confined to the Presbyterian church, but has spread until the eyes of churchmen and laymen throughout the land were centered on the proceedings at the little church in West Fourteenth street. A long, stubborn and acrimonious debate, which lasted out the day, ended in a decision definitely committing the local presbytery to the trial of Dr. Briggs and all the other heresy-hunting and protracted dissensions that it involves. The vote by which the indictment was ordered stood 62 to 24. The charges are in brief: Disbelief in the Bible as the only true source of divine authority, disbelief in the verbal inspiration and inerrancy of the scriptures, disbelief in the immediate sanctification at death of the souls of those dying in the faith. The trial will begin in about ten days.

To Succeed Redfield Proctor.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Ex-Gov. Persons B. Cheney, of New Hampshire, is at the Fifth Avenue hotel in this city on his way to Washington, where, according to report, he will receive from President Harrison the appointment to the office of secretary of war to succeed Redfield Proctor, of Vermont. The story goes that Mr. Cheney, soon after Mr. Proctor's resignation, received the offer of the portfolio from President Harrison and held it under consideration. His decision was reached some weeks ago, it is said, and he then begged for time to put his personal affairs in order before assuming the duties of public office.

Killed at a Funeral.

DES MOINES, Ia., Oct. 6.—Frightful consequences followed a runaway at Altoona, a few miles from here, Monday afternoon. The funeral of Nicholas Hemstreet, an old settler, attracted a large attendance. As the procession left the church for the cemetery the horse driven by Joseph Parker became frightened and ran away. This caused seven or eight other runaways. Six buggies were smashed and many overturned. Edward Drestell, aged 14 years, was killed. Mrs. R. C. Lane, Mrs. J. O. Mason, Joseph Perdue, Mrs. Isaac Parker, Mrs. Joseph Parker and Mrs. Sayre were injured severely.

Reproduced Writing by Electricity.

CHICAGO, Oct. 6.—An exhibition of telegraph writing was given Sunday at the office of the American National Telegraph Company. A representative of the Telegraph Writing Company stood at a machine in St. Paul and wrote messages which were almost instantaneously reproduced in his own handwriting on a tape that rolled off a "ticker" at this end of the wire. Conversations in writing between several persons at both points were carried on for several hours, and the test was considered thoroughly satisfactory.

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS

TO SAVE THE WHEAT.

Railroads Offering to Carry Men and Machines to North Dakota.

The Jobbers' union of St. Paul has issued an urgent call for threshers and machines for North Dakota. Unless they can be got in numbers a great part of the immense wheat crop of that state will be lost. So short was the working force that farmers were threshing from the shock and helping each other out. But by this process not nearly all of the wheat can be saved and the important fall plowing cannot be done. The railroads are offering to carry machines and men to the harvest fields and return free.

Brown Denies It.

Jacob Brown, who confessed in Minneapolis that he had murdered a tramp in Centralia, Ill., now denies his story. He claims that his name is J. A. Buda, and that he killed his brother-in-law; that he was tried and acquitted on the ground of insanity and sent to the asylum at Anna, Ill., where he remained a year, and then went to St. Paul. He professed total ignorance of his story and claimed he had been drinking. Another man was convicted of the crime and sent to the penitentiary for life.

The Fires Are Out.

The forest fires in the northern portion of the state have been extinguished by rain. There has never before been a fire of such magnitude in that region. The whole country has been swept by the flames, and everything has been burned outside of the towns, except that a few lumber camps were, by great exertion, saved. Thousands of tons of hay have been cut on the lowlands about the lakes and this is all destroyed. For miles and miles on every side there is nothing but a blackened waste.

To Protect the Girls.

A mass meeting of the newly-organized Young Women's Christian association in Minneapolis was held, and Miss Elizabeth Wilson, the international secretary, defined the work of the new association. She said a protective body, not a reform divided the young women to be reached in two classes, the embracing idle girls who have every luxury and comfort at their command, and the second class those girls who must work but who do not know how.

Big Blast Furnace Leased.

Charles Himrod & Co., Crearar & Clinch, and Maj. Bertolet, all iron and steel dealers and furnace men, have leased the new blast furnace of the Duluth Iron & Steel Company and will operate it for a term of years. The furnace has a capacity of about 1,100 tons of pig iron. It will be the first large coke furnace on Lake Superior and the first one to use the Bessemer ores of the Vermillion range at home.

Capitol Lands Sold.

State Auditor Biermann has disposed of the capitol lands in Kandiyohi county by leases to the highest bidders. There were about 150 farmers present from the eastern part of the county at the opening of the sale. The rental per acre yer year ran from 50 cents up to $3.25. If the lands had been placed on the market a good deal of them would have brought $20 per acre.

Swept by a Tornado.

A hurricane swept through northern Minnesota striking the Red and Rock lake lumber regions. The tornado struck Beltrami county and passed in a northwesterly direction into Itasca county, spending its force near the Manitoba line. It was estimated that 150,000,000 feet of timber was destroyed.

An Unknown Suicide.

An unknown man was killed on the Great Northern railway tracks a mile south of Granite Falls. He had apparently laid down on the tracks with his body across the rail. The head was entirely severed from the trunk, and was found some ten feet away. There was no clew to his identity.

Discovered a Lost Art.

Peter Johnson, of Dassel, thinks he has discovered the lost art of tempering copper. He and Nils Nilson, a machinist, want to organize a company to build a factory in Minneapolis. The new process will make copper as hard as steel.

The News Briefly Chronicled.

Fifteen young men from Tipperary and Kilkenny have been selected by Bishop McGoldrich, of Duluth, as students for the American priesthood.

Charles Dunham, a brakeman on the Northwestern, was thrown between two freight cars near Owatonna by a brake chain giving away and his head was cut off.

In Twenty Years.

To the citizen of the Old World, who is observant on his travels in the United States, this is a country where development is marvelously rapid. In Europe, a family, a town, or a city which cannot trace its history back more than two hundred and fifty years is as hard to be found as a black swan. Old towns have grown, but new ones have not been founded. Sixty millions more of people are here than a hundred and fifteen years ago. But if the development of a hundred or two hundred years seems wonderful to the European, what shall we say of the material progress of the last twenty years? A single illustration is enough. Twenty years ago this week, Chicago suffered an unparalleled loss by fire. The business district was destroyed and thousands of people left shelterless in the streets. What is Chicago now? The second city of the United States. What were the states west of the Mississippi twenty years ago? What they are now can best be ascertained by taking a trip over the Burlington system of roads, which reaches all important places in ten Western and Northern States. THE OLD GIRLS.

What has become of the old girls,
The jolly girls we knew
When life was all delightful
And the summer skies were blue,
'Twas ring-around a rosy,
'Twas tag and pussy cat,
'Twas swinging on the beechen limb
And other things like that.

But now the girls are new girls,
They're not quite like the old
They know so much at sixteen
It turns a man's heart cold.
In sciences they're mighty—
The new girls who are here;
Dressed in their gowns and puckers
They come out ev'ry year.

But then, you know, the old girls
We loved when we were young,
We like to sing their praises
With lips and heart and tongue.
We can't forget the old girls,
Their smiles and wiles so sweet;
It's fitting we should place them
Upon the highest seat.

So, here is to the old girls,
And one sits close beside
The singer who is singing
His old-girl love betide,
The new girl—his new girl,
A chit—she's like the rest
She soon will be an old girl
And build another nest.

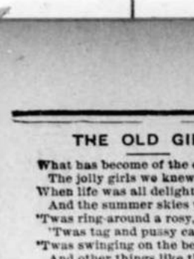
The Lovely Liar.

[WRITTEN FOR THIS PAPER.]



NO DOUBT we were uncharitable as well as lacking in perception when we so christened him. In fact, I have a very settled conviction that we were. But, on the other hand, what time has the average citizen of a mining camp, who properly attends to his everyday duties, to cultivate the minor virtues or to analyze character?

In the rowdy west, with its cosmopolite and ever changing population, life is too short to study one's neighbors, or to ascertain how many ancestors they had. One must accept them in the same way one vessel at sea recognizes another, which is, I believe, to consider it an enemy until it proves itself otherwise. And after this one has little more than appearances by which to judge one's neighbors.

It was after this manner that we came to pass judgment on the Lovely Liar, and to christen him thus. If he was not a liar, then appearances were greatly against him.

This being true—appearances as well as certain circumstances being against him, I do not think we were so much to blame.

It was not that he was uniformly successful in prevarication—far from it. As a matter of fact, we considered him the weakest liar in camp, for in all his repertoire he only had three stories which bore the semblance of truth, and he had told these so often that nobody believed them, in spite of the modest, impartial, truthful way in which he related them.

No; it was not his ability as a romancer which gained him his title, for he had none. It was his prolific imagination, and a plethora of supposedly fictitious reminiscence which he was prone to exhibit on all available occasions, which earned for him his uncomplimentary sobriquet.

The Lovely Liar had another name, which we used only in his presence. This was the one he had with him when he struck the camp and went to work as timekeeper for Walworth & O'Higgins, the proprietors of the big "Norah" mine—Henry Shepard. When he was near by we called him "Shep," for short; on all other occasions he was simply "The Lovely Liar."

He was a young man, apparently not over twenty-five, with a smooth face and a modest, deprecating air quite out of place in Bogardus Gulch. Still, he was a first-class accountant, very gentlemanly, and got along with the citizens of the gulch, including his employers, very well. One could not, as old Hi French said one day, "help likin' th' blame cuss—he's so confounded pleasant." And yet, in the eyes of every man in the camp, he was the most miscellaneous and widely-informed truth distorter in the range.

Now I think of it, Shepard had a very pleasant, well modulated, gentlemanly voice, and cannot really be blamed for enjoying his own conversation; after all, maybe his principal fault lay in his fondness for talking.

There was never a thing happened that didn't remind Shepard of a similar experience in which he had figured prominently; never a social gathering in Piatt's poker-room at which he did not reminisce to a greater and more varied extent than anyone else present; never an exclusive little party of mine owners, timekeepers, superintendents and assayers, when the flowing bowl circulated freely, that the Lovely Liar did not relate, with great impressiveness in each instance, his railroad wreck story, his story about capturing a brace of bank robbers, and the one in which he rescued a lady from a watery grave in Lake Erie.

And we would feign sleep, with a rousing nasal accompaniment; would groan and sigh, and try to change the subject; but the Lovely Liar, oblivious, would continue his tale to the bitter end—modestly, it must be acknowledged, but relentless, nevertheless.

The three stories mentioned we could not impeach—they were faultlessly related, and always the same as regards details—and yet they never seemed to carry the atmosphere of veracity which should surround a successful lie. Especially was this true of the Lovely Liar's impromptu anecdotes. He always began them as a schoolgirl might, no matter what might be the nature of the forthcoming story. "He-he-he!" he would giggle, weakly, "that reminds me of a little occurrence down in New Mexico," or "when I was in Alaska," or "during my last trip to Europe"—and then he would proceed for a moment, look up, stammer, snicker in a childishly bashful way, blush till he was almost black in the face, and wind up his yarn hastily, without much punctuation and without looking up. Then he would relapse into a dignified silence which he would maintain for some time, with an air that seemed to say: "I know that you know I am a blamed liar, but why not try to pretend that you appreciate my stories instead of looking so confoundedly glum. It's rather embarrassing."

The Lovely Liar was at the gulch three years, and during two years and a half of this period nobody in camp would believe him even if he merely said he wished the weather would change.

Then, one evening in June, when I was sitting on the steps in front of our engine house at the Tamarack mine, I heard footsteps, and, looking up, saw the youthful face and figure of the Lovely Liar coming toward me. He looked the same as usual when not lying—serenely and contentedly happy. He remarked, cheerfully: "Hullo, old chap," and sat down beside me, in response to my somewhat brief nod. Seated, he filled his pipe, humming musically to himself the while. Then he turned to me with a broad smile and said:

"Well, I'm going in the morning."

"Going! Where? to Crecsote?"

"No—he-he-he! I'm going—er-er-east. To the states, that's what." And the Lovely Liar looked up, got red in the face, giggled, blushed some more, and went on hastily:

"Yes. Been here three years, you know. Come here to get out of the way. Wife, you know—married when I was twenty. Lived with her a year—regular Xantippe. We quit, and I skipped to give her chance for divorce, on ground of desertion. She's got it, and I'm going back. Be married this month, too. Folks want me to marry her—charming girl—lots of money—rather sweet on me, too. Pretty silky prospect, after working in this hole, eh? Well, good-by, old chap—hope I'll see you again—er-er-er-good-by—come and see us, old fel—"

And the Lovely Liar disappeared. I didn't weep, but sat and pondered. I could see it all. The Lovely Liar, probably the son of poor but respectable parents, had, three years before, got into some trouble with his employers, taken a convenient roll of currency belonging to some one else, and skipped to hide himself in the west. Now, the old folks having settled his defalcation, he was going back home, to lie about what he had done out west—the fortune he had made and lost, and so on.

The light-headed idiot! He must needs lie at the last moment. As if any sensible woman would marry such a confounded liar! And I sniffed and strolled down to Piatt's to talk it over with the boys.

About a year later the manager of the Tamarack sent me to an Illinois city to consult with the president of the company, Mr. Howard, about the proposed purchase of another property in our vicinity. I arrived in the afternoon, and Mr. Howard, whose family was out of town for the time being, invited me to dine with him that evening at a swell cafe.

At the table directly opposite sat a handsome, correctly dressed man, with whiskers trimmed in the French fashion, who every few minutes looked at me keenly as if wondering where he had seen me before.

I asked Mr. Howard who the stranger was.

"That? Why, that's Shepard—usually known as Col. Shepard. Fine young fellow, and very wealthy. Popular, too, but one of the most bashful men I ever saw."

I stared at the stranger, and Mr. Howard went on:

"Great talker, the colonel. Queer, that, for a bashful man, too. Inclined to brag a bit, in a modest way, I fancy, but always confines himself to the truth. His word is as good as his bond. Well, perhaps he's justified in feeling a bit proud of himself, for I know of very few young men of his age who've been as successful and have as much to be proud of. Of course he has made mistakes—for instance, he made an unfortunate marriage when he was only twenty, and after a few months he went out west and buried himself for three years, so his wife could get a divorce. He could have gotten it himself, on grounds which would have been disagreeable to her, but he was too much of a man, and chose another way. He was married again last year, and made an excellent match. The present Mrs. Shepard brought him a cool half million and he was well-fixed himself. By the way, the story of their courtship is quite romantic. And—" Mr. Howard, seeing I was interested, proceeded to relate how Col. Shepard, in rescuing an unknown lady from drowning in Lake Erie, shortly after he was first married, had begun the romance which culminated in his second matrimonial connection.

Mr. Howard had also related the bank burglar story, and part of the other old one—about the railroad wreck—and I was wishing I could think of some way to apologize to the gentleman under discussion for the way we used to slang him behind his back when some one slapped me on the shoulder, and he who had once been known as the Lovely Liar greeted me like a long-lost brother.

And I went back to Bogardus Gulch and felt puffed up with pride because I was able to give the boys some pointers on human character that they had never learned. R. L. KETCHUM.

THE HORSE NETTLE.

Description and Methods of Destroying This Troublesome Weed.

A subscriber sends to the Orange Judd Farmer samples of a weed and writes:

This is, and has been for twenty five or thirty years, very troublesome on our farm; seems impossible to eradicate it. Grows very rapidly in cultivated ground, roots run deep and catch again when thrown on top of ground in wet weather.

Prof. L. H. Pammel, of the Iowa experiment station, replies: It is horse nettle (Solanum Carolinense, L.) well known as a troublesome weed in Illinois, Missouri, Iowa and southward. It occurs from Connecticut south to Florida and west to Texas. Texas books and articles on this weed frequently state that it prefers sandy soil. My own observation in Illinois, Missouri and Iowa do not show this to be the case, though it may be true for Connecticut and other eastern states. In the clay soil of Missouri and Illinois, or in the black soil of Iowa it grows very luxuriantly. It is a perennial, provided with deep running roots. The stems and leaves are more or less prickly; flowers are bluish or whitish, much like those of a potato, to which it is closely related. The berry commonly called the seed, is from one-half to three-fourths of an inch in diameter, and is of yellowish color. Of it Darlington says: "This is an exceedingly pernicious weed, and so tenacious of life that it is almost impossible to get rid of it when once fully introduced. It grows in patches so thickly as to deter stock from feeding among it and even to monopolize the soil, while its roots gradually extend around and to great depth."

What Darlington says is most emphatically true, at least so far as tenacity is concerned, and what Mr. Hollister says: "It is as bad as Canada thistle," has been realized by many farmers. While stock will avoid it, I am inclined to believe that where the pasture is closely grazed it can be diminished very materially by tramping on it.

This is true of many of our weeds. Hon. George O. Van Houten recently told me that common milkweed (Asclepias cornuti) can be destroyed easily in pastures. With horse nettle the treatment must be vigorous. Nothing short of removing the roots, leaves and all will kill it. Why not try the experiment of keeping the leaves down for a season?

GOOD ROOT CELLAR.

It Should Be Located Midway Between the Garden and the Barn.

Believing fully with the eminent divine, who, in reference to the custom of abscribing deaths by typhoid fever, diphtheria, etc., to "providential dispensations," said that if people would look to their drain pipes and cellars they would see that the evil was not from Providence, so, in setting up our lares and penates we decided to use some forethought and keep out such visitations. Much puzzling and thought resulted in a determination to build a root cellar midway between the kitchen, garden and barn and save the cost of it in doctors' and undertakers' bills.

We had a space about eighteen or twenty feet long and ten feet wide marked off and dug down more than five feet. Then posts were inserted at the corners and at proper intervals on the sides, and boards nailed to them, thus forming a solid wall. The space between this wall and the outside wall of earth, about five inches, was filled in with sawdust. On the bottom a few tiles were laid to prevent moisture or seepage. A good plank floor was then put down and partitions built for various bins. The roof sloped steeply down and touched the walled up earth outside. A layer of felt paper between the boards and shingles which formed the thick roof supplied extra warmth.

Two small chimney-like openings with adjustable covers on the roof gave ventilation, and at the west extremity was a removable trap door, three feet by two feet, which could be lifted to fill more expeditiously from the wagon the great baskets of mangel wurzels, carrots, etc., for the faithful cows and horses. The roots were stored in a receptable built expressly for the purpose in the west end of this root cellar. A hallway on the north side made it easy to reach the bins and compartments which were all on the south.

A door, like an outside cellar door, opens on a few steps leading down to an inner upright door of plank covered with felt paper. This door opens into the cellar proper, and here for ten years we have stored roots and vegetables. The annoyance of opening the house cellar door in very cold weather, the picking over of fruits and vegetables, and the disorder incident to these operations, are all done away with, and our root cellar is an indispensable storehouse on our place.—Vick's Magazine.

Some Startling Figures.

Discussing the magnitude of "1,000,000 bushels of wheat," a broker is quoted as saying: "If 1,000,000 bushels were loaded on freight cars, 500 bushels to a car, it would fill a train over fifteen miles long. If transported by wagon, forty-four bushels on a wagon, it would make a row of teams 142 miles long. If made into bread, reckoning a bushel to every sixty pounds of flour, it would give each man, woman and child in the United States a two-pound loaf."—Colman's Rural World.

IF sheep are kept for mutton and wool, take well-selected ewes and breed to thoroughbred rams.

FRUIT AND VEGETABLES.

How to Store a Supply of Both Sufficient to Last All Winter.

On the farm it is always good economy to store up a sufficient supply of fruit and vegetables in the fall to last all winter. If the work is properly done they can readily be kept in a good condition. While the cellar is a convenient place for keeping what is needed during the winter, the average farm cellar is too warm to keep fruits or vegetables a long time. Nearly all varieties will keep best at a low temperature as nearly just above freezing as possible. Apples, pears and grapes are the principal fruits stored for winter use. The first can be kept all winter; but the holidays is as late as the two latter are usually kept. Grapes should have all damaged or decaying fruit picked off and then be carefully packed in layers in jars or boxes, filling the spaces between with clean, dry sawdust; cork dust is still better when it can be had. If kept in a cool place there is little danger of their spoiling.

Choice pears should be carefully sorted and kept in a cool, airy place for a few days, and then each should be wrapped in paper and packed in shallow boxes or drawers, one layer in each, and stored in a dry place. Pears will keep in a higher temperature than either apples or grapes.

Apples can be stored in boxes or bins in the cellar. When this is done it is nearly always best to arrange them so that they will be four or six inches from the wall and from the floor, so as to admit of a good circulation of air all around them. Care must be taken in sorting and handling so as not to have any bruised or damaged fruit among what is stowed away especially for long keeping.

Another good plan of keeping apples is to dig a trench about 3 feet wide and as long as is necessary. From 12 to 18 inches will be deep enough, depending somewhat on the character of the soil. Line it well on the bottom and sides with clean, dry straw. Set a forked stake or post at each end if the trench is not over 8 feet long; if longer than this more posts will be necessary. It is always best to pick the apples and sort carefully and then put in a place where they can be in the shade for a few days to cure out before storing away. Then pile them in the trench and cover with straw. Lay a good stout pole in the forked posts and then set boards with one end on the ground and the other on the pole. It is best to have an open space of 6 or more inches between the boards and the layer of straw over the fruit. Cover the boards with soil deep enough to keep out frost. This is a good way to store fruit or vegetables of any kind and it is less trouble to get at them than if no boards are used. Potatoes and turnips will keep better in a pit than in the ordinary cellar, and while the supply needed for immediate use can be stored in the cellar, what is desired to keep until late in the winter or early spring can in very many cases be kept better in pits.

Grapes, pears and sweet potatoes should be harvested and stored away first; then Irish potatoes, carrots and beets. Apples, turnips and cabbage will stand considerable frost without injury, but should not be allowed to freeze. Parsnips and salsify will be all the better if left out until after the first freeze. Generally after the ground freezes hard it is best to apply a second covering of soil, straw or fodder. Be sure to make good drainage on the outside.—St. Louis Republic.

THE HACKNEY HORSE.

Its Points, from an English Standpoint, Approximately Indicated.

Our illustration represents a hackney or trotting stallion, with the points approximately indicated, from an English standpoint. The head is judged under 6 points, namely: 8 ear, 9 face, 10 eye and expression, 11 jaws, 12 lips, and 13 nostril; giving 25 points if judged according to single points, or 10 when the points are arranged in groups. The forequarter division comprises: 14 neck, 15 breast, 16 withers, 17 shoulders, 18 fore ribs, and 19 chest; aggregating 35 in single points, or 14 if the points are grouped. The middle piece division includes: 20 the back, 21 back ribs, 22 belly, 23 loin, 24 the flank, 25 sheath; giving 25 out of 250, or 10 out of a possible 100. The hindquarter division comprises: 26 hips, 27 quarters, 28 croup, and 29 set-on of tail; aggregating same as previous division, 25 and 10 respectively. The division relating to the legs is subdivided into 30 forearm, 31 knee, 32 gaskin, 33 hock, 34 legs, 35 bone, 36 muscle, 37 pasterns, and 38 feet; and to this division is allotted 55 points if judged by single points, or 22 if the points are judged in groups, the aggregates as before stated being 250 if judged by single points, or 100 if judged in groups. The above is given from an English contemporary from which we have reproduced the engraving.

HORTICULTURAL NOTES.

REMOVE and burn all limbs of plum trees affected by black knot.

THE farm home should be made as pleasant as possible with flowers and shrubs.

IN Italy chrysanthemums are cemetery flowers and unpopular for general cultivation or button-hole decorations.

THERE are some very fine native shrubs in every section of the United States. Transplant some of those near you to your lawn.

SOME farmers allow the hens to have the full run of the door yard to the complete destruction of all the good wife's flowers. This is not right.

A. LIETZE, a florist of Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, has written to a Chicago florist, asking him to take charge of an exhibit for the world's fair of 400 varieties of caladium, a foliage plant with immense leaves.

IF the potatoes or peas were taken off too late to make turnip sowing profitable, sow rye. It will keep weeds down, may be cut late in fall and even during winter for poultry food. In the spring it may be turned under, and thus help as a fertilizer.

UNDERTAKING TOO MUCH.

The Disadvantages of an Overburdened Condition.

There is an Arabian proverb which says, "Never attempt all you can do, for he that attempts everything that he can do often attempts more than he can do." The greatest fault with most women's work lies in the desire to undertake more than it is possible for them to accomplish. Where men gain results by calm, deliberate work and thought, women too often fail to accomplish anything by burdening themselves with responsibilities that they are utterly unable to bear. The girl student who works side by side with her brother is called on to do all her own sewing and mending, and often to assist in domestic duties which are sufficient in themselves to tax her strength to its fullest. Her stronger brother is bothered with no such petty cares. His tailor does his mending, or possibly the sister herself adds this to her burden of work. He has those play hours from study or work, which serve to keep "Jack from being a dull boy"—hours which his sister must too often spend in the drudgery of the needle, the dustbrush and broom. If our schoolgirls are to accomplish the same results which our schoolboys do, they should be equally unencumbered by domestic duties. There is scarcely a college for girls in the land where this truth is wholly recognized. In most coeducational institutions, and in all girls' colleges, the girls are expected to make up their own beds and keep tidy their own rooms, which is not required of boys and would be deemed an absurdity if it were. There can be no objection to an exaction of these domestic cares in institutions where it is a part of the regime of the school that domestic duties shall be performed as in other schools, like agricultural ones for boys, for instance, a certain amount of manual duties is required.

As it is with the girl in school and college, so it is with the woman in the family. There are a thousand and one petty cares placed on the mother which are not taken into the account of her duties, but which are exacted strenuously and add heavily to the regular burden of "work which is never done." Not the least of these duties are so called charitable duties, when the house-mother is expected to lay aside her cares, bake cake for the Sunday-school picnic, contribute her quota of work to the sewing circle, or assist a slack sister who is forever making appeals to the charity of neighbors. Of all women, the village minister's wife is one of the most overburdened with these endless duties which are always expected but never recognized. In the great cities, the appointment of missionaries has done much to mitigate the cares of the minister's wife, but in the country she visits the sick and dying, ministers to those who are hopeless, is head and center of the church work, and generally makes herself efficient in pushing forward the needs of the women of the parish, yet she has her own exacting household work to do, and woe unto her, under the keen gaze of all her husband's parishioners, if she fail in any part, for a thousand tongues will tell of any failure. This is only one instance of the exacting duties which women undertake, and the only marvel is that more do not fail. When women recognize the fact that they must refuse valiantly and firmly to undertake too much and must give themselves a good margin for relaxation, they will be healthier and wiser. If they attempt the same intellectual work which men do, they must allow themselves the same exemption from petty duties which their brothers have.—N. Y. Tribune.

SHE LED THE WAY

And Finally Emerged, Bedraggled, But Still in the Ring.

"Come along here, Sary, I'm goin' through this crowd," said a thin-faced old lady last night as the parade was passing along High.

"Grandma, you can't get through there."

"Hey? Can't I? Come along."

"With a wild swing of the arms and a nudging of the elbows the old lady dived into the crowd.

"Grandma!"

"Come along h'yer, Sary, push that fool out o' the way. Get back there, you fool—"

"Grandma, I can't—"

"Keep right behind me; I'll get ye through—keep off my toes, ye big-footed idiot—h'yer, miss, put this umbrella down, or I'll break it."

"Grandma!"

"Come right along. Knock that seegar out o' that fool's mouth. H'yer, you impudent Nigger, git out o' the way! Right along!" And the ins and outs of the old lady were truly wonderful.

"Oh, Grandma, I'll be killed—"

"Killed nothin'. Come right along. H'yer, git back; out o' the way there; quit scrowgin'; don't blow your smoke in my face; hain't you got no sense? Where's yer manners? Ma ever whip ye for ill-manners? Right through this way, Sary! Stand back, there! H'yer, you little fool, git back; don't kill the child; where's the police? Confound such a place! Here, keep comin', Sary! Stand back! Out o' the way! What's the matter with you, fool? Offen my feet! Git back! Come on, Sary!" And the old lady and her young charge emerged from the far side of the crowd looking like a pair of towels emerging from the rollers of a wringer.

ONE ENJOYS

Both the method and results when Syrup of Figs is taken; it is pleasant and refreshing to the taste, and acts gently yet promptly on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels, cleanses the system effectually, dispels colds, headaches and fevers and cures habitual constipation. "German Syrup"

The majority of well-read physicians now believe that Consumption is a germ disease. In other words, instead of being in the constitution itself it is caused by innumerable small creatures living in the lungs having no business there and eating them away as caterpillars do the leaves of trees.

A Germ Disease.

The phlegm that is coughed up is those parts of the lungs which have been gnawed off and destroyed. These little bacilli, as the germs are called, are too small to be seen with the naked eye, but they are very much alive just the same, and enter the body in our food, in the air we breathe, and through the pores of the skin. Thence they get into the blood and finally arrive at the lungs where they fasten and increase with frightful rapidity. Then German Syrup comes in, loosens them, kills them, expells them, heals the places they leave, and so nourish and soothe that, in a short time consumptives become germ-proof and well.

The Secret of Health

Is the power to eat, digest and assimilate a proper quantity of wholesome food. This can never be the case while impurities exist in the system. The blood must be purified; it is the vital principle, ramifying through every part of the body. Dr. Tutt's Pills expel all impurities and vitalize the whole system.

A Noted Divine says:

"I have been using Dr. Tutt's Liver Pills the past three months for dyspepsia, weak stomach and nervousness. I never had anything to do me so much good. I recommend them as the best pill in existence, and use all I can to acquaint others with their merits. They are a special blessing."

EPPS'S COCOA
BREAKFAST.
"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

OFFICAL PAPER OF VILLAGE OF DELANO.

DELANO, FRIDAY, OCT. 9, 1891.

GREAT NORTHERN R'Y.

Passenger trains leave Delano as follows:

No. 7, going west		9:41 a. m.
" 9, " "		8:21 p. m.
No. 10, going east		5:23 a. m.
" 3, " "		4:40 p. m.

GEO. W. BOLTON, Local Agent.

DELANO DIARY.

—Wash Rader has moved into town and become a city gentleman.

—To-morrow will be Delano Fair Day and one of the largest of the season is looked for.

—Mrs. James Sherry and Miss Sherry were transacting business in the village yesterday afternoon.

—The jolly hushbandman is preparing his grounds for next year's crop Plowing is fine since the late rains.

—J. E. Nelson is moving his family to Minneapolis. George Ball will occupy the residence made vacant on Second Street.

—The Episcoaal society held a Harvest Service at the Presbyterian church, on Monday evening. Rev. F Millspaugh officiating.

—Cards are out for the wedding of Mr. Angie McEcharim and Miss Anna Eppel on Oct. 13. They expect to make Monticello their home.

—Steward & Brizzee are disposing of their horses at quite a good rate They have some nice ones. They have traded one for a new buggy to Leon Frazee.

—Farmers are holding on to their hay as if they expected a long severe winter. We predict that good hay in the spring will be cheaper than it is now.

—A fine picture of the late Daniel H. Freeman has been made by the Harris company, of Hamline, also one of W. D. Freeman. The company is doing some excellent work.

—Monday was pension day and quite a number of old soldiers and soldiers widows were in town looking after their interests. Squire Billings informs us that he was of assistance to an even 40 of them.

—One of Delano's livery teams was seen going towards Watertown on Sunday at what might be termed a "snail's gallop". It just beats all how slow some folks can drive. And the young lady had the lines, too.

—A couple of acrobats and jugglers gave an exibition on Wednesday evening at Simon's hall. One of them claimed to put up the heaviest weight on a fair square lift of any man in the world and offers a reward for his equal.

—Mr. William Gould has moved into a house on the west side. We understand he is a tanner and thinks of starting up in that business here. This would be a new industry for our place and one which might prove profitable.

—Several of our neighboring villages are organizing and re-organizing literary societies for the winter. Let the metropolis not be behind in this matter. Nothing can be more entertaining and instructive than a well regulated literary society. Let us have one soon.

—The contract for the bridge across Marth's creek on the Montrose road has we are informed been let for $630. Our informant thinks this is about $200. too much and desires to know if the balance will not be expended in making the stream navigable for steamboats. That would be nice.

—Riley Sturman carries one hand in a sling the result of an injury received by accidentally striking his finger against the tine of a pitchfork and causing a wound which did not keep him from work for a couple of days, but which has taken his undivided attention most of the time since then.

—The new sidewalk on north Third street is quite an improvement, but if it was more level in some places it would be much more plesant to travel over, especially in wet or frosty weather. Let us have a civil engineer and establish grades on sidewalks and streets before more new residences are built and have a little system to things.

—The Republicans of Delano seem to be in something of a chaotic state. Considerable pulling ond hauling is going on and harmony don't appear to perch. Not a very big crowd seems willing to attend the pow wow at Buffalo to-morrow and we do not think the Delano club expects to carry off the banner offered as a prize to the biggest club present at the meeting.

—One of our citizens called in a few days ago and said that he had been called upon by a man recently, who offered to cure him of rheumatism if he would take six bottles of medicine for $6, which he did paying the money down and using the medicine when the vender called and desired him to continue treatment, which he refused to do even though one bottle was offered for nothing. He had a plenty but was not cured and was out the $6.00.

—State of Minnesota vs. Joseph Truant and Agnes Truant, who were charged with assault and battery in the third degree was, on Wednesday, tried by jury, before Justice Bohn. The case grew out of a dispute about plowing up some beans sown by Truant on land he afterwards sold to Mr. Ciris. When Ciris sent his boy to plow Trunt stopped him when both parties were reinforced and a melee occurred. The verdict was, Not guilty. Attorneys for State, M. A. O'Hair and O. L. Billings. For Defendent, F. H. Lindsley.

—Mr. Gott and Miss Gasker are soon to be wedded.

—"Peck" Young and his pony are among the "institootions" of the town.

—The Ladie's Aid Society met on Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Mulford.

—Albert Davis is working at his trade, plasterer, at Annandale for a few weeks.

—Superintendent Lindsley has had his residence re-shingled and touched up for winter.

—August Bernick is a carpenter and joiner now-a-days. Laying a sidewalk on Second Street.

—Services will in future be held at 7.30 p. m. each Sabbath evening at the Presbyterian church.

—E. J. Swedeback is still fixing up his new home. A kitchen chimney is the latest improvement.

—W. F. Kohler, Watertown's rustling harness maker has a new add this week. Read what he has to say.

—The base ball club have posters out for a dance to be held at the city hall on Thursday evening Oct. 22.

—Mrs. Andrew Haunsman and her brother Johnny Eppel came up from the Exposition city on Wednesday.

—S. G. Svengestol, of Maple Plain, will auction off his goods, on Saturday, Oct. 17. He expects to spend the winter in Wisconsin.

—A Delano belle quite Gracefully climbed up on a hay rack as the beau watered his horses at the town pump, Tuesday and took a ride

—Peter Floody says he has tried the Dr. McCoy treatment for catarrh and considers it no better that others. In fact he claims it is a humbug.

—An interesting game of ball was played on lower R. R. Ave., on Tuesday afternoon to the amusement of quite a crowd of spectators.

—Del Young and Leon Frazees' new broncho were, on Monday, trying to see who was boss. Sometimes one had his way and sometimes tother.

—Rev. Jabez Blackhurst will move to Litchfield for the next year. Rev. J. R. Davies, of Watertown, will occupy the M. E. manse at this place.

—W. D. Freeman is shipping his new kind of potatoes to a seed firm in Pennsylvania. He gets $2.00 per bushel. It pays to experiment, sometimes.

—The time for warming up the houses has arrived and the usual autumnal discussions about stovepipes has been going on during the week past.

—Street Commissioner Brandon is happy he has a crew of men at work on the streets. We hope he will get around to the gutter on Third Street before it freezes up.

—Five o'clock tea, to-day, at the M. E. manse. As Rev. Blackhurst goes to Litchfield soon this will probably be the last opportunity many will have of taking tea at his home.

—Prof. Sam Pape surprised a select audience on Wednesday, at the depot, with an exhibition of his skill and power as an expert swinger of clubs and handler of dumbbells.

—Willis E. Johnson moved with his family this week to the district near Cokato where he taught school several years ago. He has been engaged to teach this winter his third term in that place.

—J. W. McDonald has graded his lot adjoining C. H. Vorses in good shape and will doubtless have as fine and comfortable a dwelling as the village affords located thereon. J. W. is a rustler.

—Rev. J. Davies the new M. E. minister for this circuit will preach on Sunday at 10.30 a. m. at Montrose, at 2.30 p. m. at Waverly and at 7.30 p. m. at Delano. He will commence next Sabbath Oct. 11.

—Swan Anderson, on Lake Minnetonka, supplied many of our fruit lovers with some delicious grapes on several occasions lately. He was in on Wednesday. We are informed that he sold 1500 lbs. and had about 500 lbs. caught by jack frost on Tuesday night.

—Cowboys and girls are thick in town since the arrival of the drove of ponies. Scarcely a child big enough to carry a string but has his lasso. Larger children have appropriated clothes lines, swing ropes, etc, and are catching each other according to the latest fashion.

—Mose Williams returned yesterday from Hillsboro, Dak. where he has been helping thresh. He says for the past ten days there has been so much rain it was not possible to do much. That wheat is in the stack, mostly, and is growing badly. That if the weather does not change a great deal of it will not get threshed. Since so much time has been lost there is a scarcity of machines. Mose has been on the sick list hence his return to Delano.

Personals.

I. C. Stewart drove over to Hanover, on Monday.

Ed Steward and family took a trip to Minneapolis on Monday.

George Ruppelius, of Rockford was in Delano on Tuesday.

Mrs. John Sturman visited Willmar Last Friday.

Prof. Willis E. Johnson has returned home from St. Cloud.

Miss Julia Steffes visited with friends at Litchfield over Sunday.

Mr. Burns, of Watertown drove over on Wednesday afternoon.

J. Fletcher Powers has been shucking his corn crop this week.

Station agent Cassida, of Howard was a Delano visitor yesterday.

John Buhl and wife, of Graceville, visited Delano friends on Tuesday

Will Dorman and son, of Rockford were GAZETTE callers on Tuesday.

C. J. Buckley and Queeny returned on Sunday and Mrs. B. and Grover on Tuesday from a trip to Lisbon, Dakota.

Franz Dussa and son went to the Flour city, on Tuesday, with a load of cabbage.

Dr. J. S. Shrader visited Monticello on Sunday last. Doc says the roads were rather heavy that day.

Mrs. F. F. Chancellor and Mrs. Jake Bryant spent a portion of the past week with friends at Hutchinson.

W. F. Kohler, wife and son, of Watertown, visited Grandma Epple as usual on the first day of the week.

E. H. Schroer, the gentlemanly agent of the "Gazetteer" published by R. L. Polk & Co., made us a call to-day.

Hon. H. J. Peck, of Shakopee, visited Delano on legal business last Friday.

Mrs. J. N. Haven and daughter of Montrose drove down yesterday on business.

Mr. and Mrs. Colwell and son, of Ashland, Wisconsin, are visiting with Mrs. C's aunt Mrs. William Lewis and family.

Zephania Flowers, the "Cleveland Hustler," who the St, Peter Tribune says, has sold over 500 copies of an Improved Atlas, since March, has struck our county. Look out for him or he may sell you one.

County Cullings.

From the Herald we learn that J. A. Scott, chairman, and H. Tanner, secretary, of the Executive committee of the Wright County Agricultural Society have resigned their positions respectively. The society is short of funds and not unanimous on the subject of raising money to pay premiums. It is to be regretted that everything could not be satisfactorily arranged without friction.

The appointments made by the M. E. conferences, lately which most interests our county are, Rev. John Stafford P. E.; Annandale, F. E. Higgins; Buffalo, North Rockford and Rockford, C. F. Davis; Delano, Montrose and Waverly, J. R. Davies; Howard Lake and Smith Lake, J. C. Hull; Monticello, J. J. Crist; Watertown, B. E. Shernin; The Germans have at Clearwater, Rev. G. R. Fritze; Crow River Circuit, G. Raihle.

It will take more peace and harmony than is to spare by Davis, Washburn, Evans Goodnough & Co. to sooth the ruffled feelings of Wright County Republicans. Think of it once! O. J. and A. Y., Stacy, Billings, Hoover, Culkin, all to be reconciled and Gutzwiller waiting around for an invitation to a high seat among them! Think of it! Think of it! Won't it take lots of harmony to go around? And where is it all to come from?

The McKinley bill is proving a bonanza for our county seat. One of the biggest republican meetings ever held there is announced, with orators of national reputation as Senator Washburn and Senator Davis, Bob Evans and others to try to persuade the people of Wright county to keep on voting the Republican ticket, right or wrong. They want persuade, however. Of course Senator Davis knows the farmer should have free binding twine on the free list, and tried to get it there but then in order to keep up the doctrine of protection he was overrued.

Mrs. Mary Ann Doherty has at last obtained a pension. A special lawwas enacted by Congress to grant her a pension, but President Cleveland vetoed the bill. She now gets her pension through the regular course of procedure at the pension office. Good for Mary Ann.—Buffalo Journal.

And so Mary Ann can get her pension just as other women do, and President Cleveland was not further from the right than Senator Eaton or the Editor of the GAZETTE or any body else that is not favorable to Special Legislation would have been if similarly situated.

The Eagle has come to a sorry plight. Poor thing! Once a Democrat, then an Independent and now a What-is-it? She quit being a Democrat and slid over until she claims herself a Republican. The Democrats have long since cried "good riddance to bad rubbish" and hailed the day when they got rid of her. The Independents didn't seem to depend very much on her for leadership and now the Republicans insist they will have none of her. Like a poor old lambless ewe she is bleating about trying to find a fold. And none will take her in. Poor thing! Poor thing!

Gazette on Time.

On the strength of our local concerning complaints of the slowness of Uncle Sam's mails in our county claiming that "papers mailed at Delano on Friday ought to arrive at St. Michaels or Watertown before the middle of next week." Postmaster Vorse dropped a little line to the Watertown Postmaster and received the following reply which, in order to exonerate him he desires published:

WATERTOWN, MINN., Oct. 3d, '91.

Postmaster, Delano, Minn.,

Dear Sir:—The GAZETTE has always come on time to this office and I have not heard any complaint in any way. Always come on Saturday.

Very Respectfully,

A. G. MILLER, P. M.

By GEO. U. MILLER, Assistant P. M.

While this lets our P. M. out it proves that the GAZETTE has always been on time for the mail. St. Michaels has not yet been heard from. Those claiming that they do not receive the GAZETTE on time will have to seek another cause, evidently, so far as concerns Watertown. If you don't get your GAZETTE on time don't be bashful. Let us know.

GROVER CLEVELAND is in the thickest of the fight.

INDIANAPOLIS, the home of President Harrison, elected Democratic city officers a few days ago.

NEARER, and still nearer draws the hour of election, in several of the so-called doubtful states, when will be decided the question of which party has the lead.

THIS morning's Globe gives an account of the hanging, at early dawn, of William Rose, at Redwood Falls, for the murder of Farmer Lufkin. He is said to have died bravely and protesting his innocence.

Republican Rally, at Buffalo.

On Saturday afternoon agreeable to a courteous special invitation from the chairman of the Republican county club ye Editor drove over to our beautiful county seat by the lake to attend the opening meeting of the Republican campaign to be waged from now on to November 1892 against everything not exactly in line with the G. O. P. So far as we could see things had been nicely arranged by the local committe at Buffalo. Dudley's hall was decorated tastily and the stage gave ample room for the accomodation of those who desired seats before the gaze of the audience. The Howard Lake band and orchestra, the Monticello drum corps, and the Buffalo glee club and orchestra furnished some fine music and the weather being fine things were in splendid condition for the grand opening of the presidential boom. The audience comfortably filled the hall and seemed in good humor. When your reporter arrived late in the afternoon he found on entering the hall, the Hon. Cushman K. Davis had already opened up his speech and had got over to where he said "taxation never ruined any country" and he proposed to drop that subject in a short time for the very important money question. Mr. Davis we knew was a very fine orator, having heard him in St. Paul years ago, but, upon this occasion he seemed to us to have been touched off rather prematurely, consulting his notes, quite frequently, and not getting along so smoothly as we expected he would. He fired at the Alliance 2 per cent scheme, "I would not give a snap for such currency based on such a plan." He informed the audience that "tariff on coffee is a tax but on calico and other articles it is not," "Silver is a commodity and not a safe basis for currency,"

After a song by the Buffalo Glee club, "Ring out sweet bells, ring out", Mr. Culkin introduced William Henry Eustice, of Minneapolis, who we consider one of the finest buncombe speakers to whom it has been our pleasure to listen. He did not wish to say anything to cause the friends to loose the ideas that had been advanced in the very eloquent speech of Mr. Davis to which they had listened.

An adjournment for supper was had after which another session was held, the committee reported Monticello and Howard Lake clubs as having an equal number of members present but as Howard Lake's club had to come the farthest the banner donated by the Buffalo club was awarded to them, and was presented by the "silver tongued orator" who construed his title given him by the chairman to mean a "spurious coin". He wished those having the banner in charge to, "like the Douglas having the heart of Bruce in keeping, fling it amid the enemy and follow on to victory". The silver tongued exhibited a couple of specimens of flax product worth $1.75 and $1.95 per ton at which of course people wondered, being hardly enough to induce farmers to haul wheat straw to town. One of his fellows corrected him as he went to sit down and he announced it was $175. and $195.

Here the Howard Orchestra with a whistler appeared and was encored. Then John Day Smith proceeded to take the floor by grabbing up the stand and thrusting it one side as if he had hold of his late antagonist's ghost, which he had caught napping, and at whom he soon began to fire, until Republicans wished for the presence of the "Sage" to defend himself. Mr. Smith was very complimentary to the ladies so many of whom he was glad to see present. He hoped the Lord would deliver us from another combine. He exhibited a ten dollar gold piece to the audience (most of whom were familiar with the object) and claimed it to be the only money. He says there is 300,000 tons of silver dollars in the U. S. treasury and the U. S. is unable to get more than 50,000. dollars of it in circulation at once. He remembers a "Globe" picture of a house on which the tax on each article was marked. (Some of the audience remember houses, not pictures, on which they have paid taxes.) He "likes a partisan Republican or a Democrat. Let us stand for our convictions. Let us stand for truth." When through this good advice he took a seat in close proximity to A. Y. Eaton of whom it was remarked by some of the audience, "A. Y. looks as if he had been tromped on."

At X P. M. the ponderosity called Bob Evans came on and said "I have been making a calculation as to how far I could go in imposing upon you (so had quite a large proportion of the audience.) Had some hesitation about coming here. Didn't want to see a failure (as a matter of fact we suspect he did not come until telegraphed that the meeting was ready for him, as he put in his appearance after the arrival of the evening train.) He bragged considerably about what such grand men as Lincoln, Garfield, Seward and others long since in their graves had done and advised that the martyred Lincoln be considered the Bruce of Republicans, (we suspect he caught that from Eustice) and the party march on. After eulogizing the party a while he told a story of a man who said "My country right or wrong, but right or wrong my country" and thought he might go that far. He too hit the "combine alliance" friends. When he mentioned Reciprocity of James G. Blaine applause was loud. "All we asked last year was that they remember the past. Don't forget the past. Some forgot and we lost the lower house of Congress. I believe all republicans that forgot are ashamed of it."

The audience joined the Buffalo Glee Club in singing America, then C. L. Smith was announced for a two minute speech, which on account of his ability to talk fast, appeared to be about enough. His great point was that Democrats whenever they came into power did so on the cry of some calamity, but probably owing to lack of time, did not tell that the Republicans had made this calamity cry possible. He thinks agriculturalists are growing wiser and more independent.

The Buffalo orchestra followed by Mr. Goodnow who said he was selected as the thinnest thing with which to pad in between a couple of pieces of music. He evidently ought not to have said that. He said "I don't dance but have others to dance" (the quartette had just finished.)

The meeting before the scenes appeared quite harmonious to the casual observer, but in the furthermost recesses of the stage scenery sat as a back piece Senator Eaton, Banker Oakley (whom Eustice asked the audience to blame for bringing down the price of eggs) and near them, very suggestively, sat the portly form of the judge of probate. Upon one occasion we thought we caught a glimpse of O. J. Several of the speakers said peace, harmony, smiling faces, bountiful harvest, etc., etc. But behind those scenes we are suspicious that the best part of the play was enacted.

Senator Washburne was not present. This is not his year anyway.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9, 1891.

Mr. Harrison, who once snubbed Mr J. S. Clarkson most unmercifully, according to republican authority, suddenly discovered the greatness which that gentleman carries concealed somewhere about his person, and, presto, change! Mr. Clarkson is the sole companion of long presidential drives and has the honor of being dined at the White House. It is but a repetition of the old, old story "circumstances alter cases". When Mr. Clarkson was a sore-headed minor official, mad because the newly elected President refused to have him in his cabinet, Mr. Harrison who had not then begun to think of a renomination did not hesitate to let it be known how little he thought Clarkson amounted to; but now things have changed, Mr. Clarkson is "Boss" of the National committee of his party, and even if some people do say that his boss is Quay, Mr. Harrison regards him as being of sufficient importance to be conciliated at the present stage of the game, and Mr. Clarkson seems in no way loth to being conciliated, and Senator Quay has left the Pennsylvania campaign long enough to come to Washington to see what there is "in it" for him.

The eyes of Methodists all over the world are now turned towards Washington. The Ecumenical conference of that church, with delegates from every section of the world began a two weeks session here Wednesday. The first of these conferences was held ten years ago in London.

The gossips now have it that California and New Hampshire are certain of the two cabinet appointments and that Mr. Estee and ex-Governor Cheeny are the men who have been selected. The first is backed by M. H. DeYoung, the California "boss" and the last by Senator Chandler, the once-was and would-be-again New Hampshire "boss".

The acting Governor of Arizona Territory in his annual report to the Secretary of the Interior presents an array of facts and figures in favor of the assumption of Statehood by the territory that ought to convince any unprejudiced person, but she will have to wait until the democrats get control of the Senate before she can be admitted to the Union. The republican Senators will not vote to admit any territory unless absolute proof is presented to them that the new State will vote for the G. O. P.

The republican national committee will meet in Washington November 20, for the purpose of formally electing "boss" Clarkson to succeed "boss" Quay as chairman of the committee, and to ratify "boss" Clarkson's choice of the time and place for holding the nominating convention next year.

"Satin rebuking sin", or in more homely phraseology, "the kettle calling the pot black", must have been thought of by the delegation of New York merchants to whom Secretary Foster was posing one day this week as the "nonpartisan, business Secretary of the Treasury". It was a sight that ought to have made the very stone pillars of the Treasury building fall down in amazement when Secretary Foster gravely informed these shrewd New Yorkers that there were more than fifty collection districts through the country that might be abolished without detriment to the service, and at an annual saving of several hundred thouand dollars, but that he was powerless in the matter because the wicked politicians want the Government patronage increased instead of reduced. What Mr. Foster said is true enough as far as the Collectors of Customs go, but it would be difficult for him to convince those who know him that he really wishes to abolish them. But from the fact that he mentioned ten districts in Maine and eight in Massachusetts that ought to be abolished it looks to "a man up a tree" as if the "politicians" he wanted to frighten were the anti-Harrison Senators and Representatives from Maine and Massachusetts. If they will promise to work for Harrison delegations to the National convention they will probably find it an easy matter to "convince" Mr. Foster that all of those collection districts are as necessary to the country as they are to the aforesaid Senators and Representatives.

Mr. Harrison told a delegation of Philadelphia friends of Minister Egan that the administration would vigorously support Mr. Egan in the performance of his duties. This is rather ambiguous, inasmuch as all of the misunderstanding which has existed between Mr. Egan and the Chilian government appears to have been caused by his doing things outside of his duties, at least that is the substance of the charges which are made against him, and which are expected to be proven by documents now on the way here. It may be shown that he has been guilty of things that the administration, much as it may sympathise with him, will not dare to support him in.

CORRESPONDENCE

ANNANDALE.

Rev. Higgins returned last week from the Methodist conference where he passed his examination and was admitted to the conference; but in consequence of sickness, was unable to officiate at the morning service and Elder Ringer supplied in his stead.

There was a dance in the Cotten hall last Friday night, under the general management of Prof. Davis with music by the Kimball orchestra. Some of our most respectable citizens attended, among whom was the editor of the Post; though neither a bachelor or a widower his "better half" is away in California visiting a son and doubtless he, at times, feels a little lonely and can, notwithstanding his three score years and more; which he carries very gracefully, enjoy the society of the young. Indeed be is old only in years, in feelings he is of the same age as those with whom he is associating.

Mr. Thayer, the former hotel keeper at Fair Haven has bought out the livery stock of A. R. Adkins and proposes coming here with his family to reside.

Mr J. L. Sherman has gone to Iowa to look after some farm rents.

A. B. Matthews has sold out his hardware store and stock of goods to parties from Illinois.

Our republican friends held a grand rally at Buffalo last Saturday with distinguished speakers from abroad and city music. We understand that some of the speakers were happy in their logic in demonstrating that the more we pay for a thing the less we pay and perhaps some of them believed it!

Our popular young druggist, Mr. L. H. Williams has recently stocked up a large show case with useful and ornamental articles, such as please the ladies and are appropriate as presents from gentlemen to ladies?

Mr. Ernest Grant the well known salesman for the dry goods house of Wyman, Partridge & Co. of Minneapolis is here again with his samples stocking up our merchants for the fall and winter trade.

Dr. Ridgway and Elder Higgins have been out again duck shooting but the ducks flew too high, as usual.

Judge Fish, of St. Paul, spoke to quite a large audience in the Cotten hall last Tuesday evening, in the interest of the Farmer's Alliance. The Judge made some pretty extravagant statements which it would be hard to believe did we not know that some of them are absolutely true especially his references to finance and railroad construction are only too true. Our National Banking schemes have, from their infancy been nothing short of legalized robbery. People may after it is too late, discover that the exaction of interest is all wrong; that interest is the mawworm that is consuming the vitals of labor. By reason of interest huge monopolis are enabled to crush out competition and reduce labor to servitude.

MONTROSE CHIPS.

C. S. Rennix, Emil Leuzinger, and Nettie Core boarded the east bound train for Minneapolis on Monday afternoon last.

Eppler Bros. threshing outfit has returned from the western prairie.

Rev. Geo. Johnson and wife, a Presbyterian minister at Weston, Minn., are visiting with Mr. Swartout's family.

The G. N. R'y has changed time on the east bound afternoon passenger train, which now leaves here one hour earlier than formerly. This change gives the people a splendid opportunity to go to the cities and transact their business and return on the evening train.

A delegation of about ten stalwart republican voters went over to Buffalo to attend the republican mass-meeting held there on Saturday last. They report having heard some good, sound, republican doctrine on tariff and finance. The doctrine, they say, is par-excellence the best political doctrine of the times, as each succeeding day more clearly and forcibly demonstrates.

Last Sabbath noted the Advent of the new conference year in the M. E. church, when Rev. J. R. Davies, now of this circuit, preached his initial sermon to a good sized audience. He was well recieved, and the sermon highly appreciated. The conference year just closed has far surpassed all former ones of this place financially, although not without much energy on the part of those who take an interest in and are still alive to such work. It is confidentially hoped that the present year will witness still greater success in the line of church work.

Miss Frances Kelley left for Parkersburgh, W. Va. to see her mother who has been ill for some time and who has expressed a wish to see her daughter once again before she dies. Miss Kelley has the sympathy and well wishes of all her friends here who wish her a safe arrival to her destination, and that she may be able to gratify her mother's fond wish.

WATERTOWN WAYS.

Our fair last Monday was well attended and a fair amount of business was done by our merchants. The Milling Co. took in between four and five hundred bushels of wheat on that day on exchange.

Henry Doyle came down from Howard Lake with a span of colts last Monday and sold them for $145.

F. I. Mason has engaged and will teach the Swede Lake school this winter. He will not move away as he expected.

J. M. Finnigan and E. F. Burns two of Norwood's hustling business men were doing business in Watertown on Monday.

Rev. J. R. Davies moved on to his new charge at Delano last Monday. Mr. Davies did a good work for the Watertown circuit both at Watertown and Mound City and we wish him abundant success on his new work which we have no doubt but he will have.

Mrs Rev. Levi Gleason is spending a week or two visiting with her daughter, Mrs. Dr. Shannon.

Mrs. John Malstead has gone to South Dakota to nurse her son, who was kicked by a horse on his farm last week.

Rev. B. E. Sherwin, the new Methodist minister on the Watertown circuit arrived Sunday morning and preached his first sermon at the M. E. Church in Watertown last Sunday evening. He seems to be a very smart man and gave us a good sermon last Sabbath. We hope he may have a good and successful year while on this point which we feel assured he will.

Dr. P. O'Hair, of Waverly, was in attendance at the Craven—Burns wedding last week and while here gave us a pleasant call. Come again, doctor, we are always glad to see you.

Attorney M. A. O'Hair, of Delano was in Watertown a while on Sunday last calling on his many friends in this vicinity.

There was somewhat of a drunken row on our streets one night this week. I wonder where our police force were? or if we have any?

INDEPENDENCE.

The latest event of much note occurring in our midst was the marriage of Truman Styner to Miss Syntha Pitman, a few days ago. The boys turned out and gave them a first class serenade. Mr. Styner and his bride will occupy rooms in the Barnett building, at Armstrong. Everybody wishes the happy couple a long and prosperous life. Both parties are well known in this community and highly respected. We have heard talk of one or two other weddings that will come off soon.

According to what we read in the papers the farmers of Minnesota are having a prosperous time after the mammoth crop of this year and some of them might as well spend their money getting them a wife

There has been much display in Minnesota during the last two months in Agricultural Fairs and other ways over the big crops raised here. But we hardly think it comes up to the greatest maximum. But we have enough and to spare, for which we should be very thankful. While on this line of thought there looms up in my imagination that the great show and parade ground between Minneapolis and St Paul, where they hold, once a year, what is called a State Agricultural Fair for the purpose of exhibiting stock, grain, vegetables, etc., etc. in the interest of the farmer is about as much interest to the common farmer of Minnesota as a Chinese doll baby would be to a monkey show. If all reports be true it is a good place to see the productions of one class of industry and that is the saloon. A leading paper of Minneapolis says, "one morning there were 12 wagon loads of beer unloaded on the fair grounds, and we do not know how many through the day or how many were left during the other six days of the fair. And besides it is said that right under the grand stand was the Chinese Empire and a blind pig. If all this be true does it speak well for the law abiding citizens of Minnesota? Some of you that have a premium list of the Minnesota Agricultural Society will find among the managers some of the leading men of the State.

Roads will be bad again after last night's rain.

Gustave Johnson's wife was buried at Armstrong cemetery yesterday after noon. Mrs. Johnson had been at the Insane Asylum at St. Peter for a number of years. Mr. Johnson and his wife came to Independence in quite an early day. The family has the sympathy of the whole community. They are highly respected here, Mr. Johnson being one of our best citizens.

How is it that some blunderbuss of a fellow will, all the time, keep saying that a tariff is not a tax (the definition of blunderbuss being a short gun with large bore) when the McKinley bill has raised the duties on imported goods on an average from 47 to 74 per cent and yet it does not cost anything to the consumer. Now if a fellow cannot get this through his head his brain must be terrible thick seems to me how it is. Just as soon as the duty is raised on a certain kind of goods the manufacturers of these goods form a trust or combine and put up the prices, as the Glass trust, and the Oat Meal trust in Ohio right under the proboscis of John Sherman and Major William McKinley and who know about them.

Resolutions.

WHEREAS, our worthy comrade Charles Gordon has been removed from among us by a sudden and untimely death, therefore be it

Resolved, that we deeply mourn the loss of our beloved comrade and that our deep and heartfelt sympathy extends to his widow and family.

Resolved, that by the death of comrade Gordon we loose a loved member, a faithful attendant and an efficient member of our post, and an ardent worker for the Grand Army and the widows and orphans of all who was engaged in the great struggle of the Rebellion.

Resolved, that the charter of the post be draped in mourning for the term of thirty days, and each comrade wear the usual badge of mourning

Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the widow of the deceased.

Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the Delano Eagle and Buffalo Gazette, at Delano, for publication.

W. W. HENRY, a grandson of Patrick Henry, attends the church (St. John's) in Richmond, Va., where the latter delivered the speech that made his name famous. The seat on which the orator stood when he cried: "Give me liberty or give me death" is still shown to visitors.

GORHAM GRAY, inventor of a kind of wire by which the conductivity is in the core instead of on the surface of the wire, says he is convinced that telephony is practicable not only between this country and Europe, through the Atlantic ocean, but for 9,000 miles from New York through to San Francisco and Hawaii. Hello, there!

A GERMAN doctor has been publishing the results of a long course of visual examinations. He finds that in only one case out of fifteen are both eyes in good condition. In seven cases out of every ten people possess one eye which is stronger than the other. In two cases out of five patients are affected with astigmatism. Nearly fifty per cent. possess an imperfect appreciation of colors.

THE doctors are discussing the question whether the epidemic la grippe will return this winter. The weight of testimony is that it is not likely to be severe. "The microbes of la grippe live and thrive in arctic cold," says a wise writer, and "the long hot summer has been the best possible agent to destroy the germs." Such diseases, however, have to wear out gradually. La grippe will likely be a fixture among diseases for years to come.

AN important deposit of that rare metal known as vanadium has been found in the province of Mendoza, Argentine Republic. This metal is one of the rarest and most valuable known, and is used for setting dyes in silks, ribbons, hosiery and other fine goods. The principal source of supply until recently has been a small deposit in the Ura mountains, and it has been held as high as $1,500 per ounce. This newly discovered deposit in Mendoza will therefore be recognized as of great importance.

THE army is to be set to work at professional studies, and an officer will hereafter find promotion harder than ever. The new regulation will go into effect a year from next January. An important feature of the forthcoming order is the establishment of a lyceum at every post in the army. Every officer in the service will be required to prepare and read a paper upon such professional subjects as he may elect at certain specific times before these lyceums. Attendance is also made compulsory.

IT was decided recently by the English courts that the magistrates by whom saloon licenses are granted have absolute discretion in the matter. Hitherto old licenses have been renewed or new ones granted as a matter of course, except when it was known that the applicant had been guilty of some misdemeanor. Men who have had licenses for years have been refused renewals on the ground that there were enough places for the sale of liquor without theirs. The magistrates say that they will decide how many public houses a town needs, and will also have something to say as to their location.

LYMAN E. KNAPP, Governor of Alaska, in his annual report to the secretary of the interior says the products of Alaska exported during the year and their value were: 688,332 cases of salmon, valued at $2,753,328; 4,150 pounds of ivory, worth $9,507; 231,282 pounds of whalebone, worth $1,503,333; 14,899 gallons of whale oil, worth $4,467; 1,138,000 codfish, $569,000; 7,300 barrels salted salmon, $73,000; gold and silver bullion, $1,000,000; 21,586 fur seals taken under lease, $647,880; 60,000 skins taken by poachers, $1,800,000; other furs and skins, $450,000; curios, $25,000; other products, $106,900; total, $8,941,515.

THE constitution of the United States of Brazil, adopted February 24 last, provides an educational limitation to citizenship. "Persons ignorant of the alphabet" are not allowed to vote at federal or state elections. The constitution also excludes beggars, and members of communities of whatsoever denomination who are subject to vows of obedience, etc., which implies the surrender of individual liberty. In this prohibition are included soldiers on pay. Evidently the Brazilians are anxious that the ballot in their country shall only be cast by freemen, who shall be at least moderately intelligent.

OUTBREAK IN OMAHA.

Leaders of the Recent Lynching Placed in Jail—A Mob Threatens to Storm the Building, but Desists on Finding That the Prisoners Had Been Removed.

OMAHA, Neb., Oct. 12.—Seven of the leaders of the mob that lynched Coe were brought to the jail from which they on Saturday night took their victim, and a howling mob surrounded the bastile Saturday night and demanded their release. The men under arrest are R. G. Bloom, Capt. John O'Donohoe, H. H. Brandies, Ed Fitzgerald, Ed Neaschaeffer, Patrick O'Herne and John Fritz. Bloom is manager of the Morse Dry Goods Company, the largest retail house in the city; O'Donohoe is an ex-captain of police and O'Herne was arrested while attending the democratic county convention as a delegate. The men are all charged with murder in the first degree and were refused bail.

As soon as it became known that they were under arrest a crowd gathered at the city lock-up and demanded the release of the prisoners. Instead of complying with the request Chief Seavey loaded the seven men into a patrol wagon and rushed them up to the county jail. The crowd followed, and by 7:30 p. m. the jail was surrounded and word was sent to County Attorney Mahoney that unless the men were released on bail they would be taken from the jail by force. Mahoney replied that under no circumstances would the men be released. The crowd at once began to make preparations for storming the jail. There were fully 5,000 people in the mob. The mob secured a big steel rail and marched to the east door. They had just started to use it as a battering ram when a committee of citizens appeared at the jail door and made a proposition to the crowd to have a committee appointed to go through the jail and ascertain if the men wanted were inside. This suited the crowd, and when the committee reported that five of the men had been released and the other two had been taken out of town for safe keeping the mob dispersed.

County Attorney Mahoney said that, under the laws of Nebraska, any man who took part in the lynching was guilty of murder in the first degree and punishable by hanging. Mahoney will advise the county commissioners to offer a reward for the arrest and conviction of the leaders of the mob He did not blame the county and city officers, but thought that if a squad of police had been detailed when the mob first gathered all trouble would have been avoided. Omaha and Douglas county would be compelled to take hold of the matter and ferret out the perpetrators of what he called a cowardly and cold-blooded murder.

Jailer Horrigan in speaking of the case said that Coe was alive when he was pulled through the window and into the open air, but before he was 10 feet from the jail he was dead. Every spark of life had left his carcass, as he was tramped upon by hundreds of men, while others at the end of the rope pulled the body almost limb from limb.

Scarcely had the body of Coe stopped its convulsive swaying Friday before it was known that the negro's victim was not dead and in no danger of death. It is claimed that the announcement the papers gave of the death of the child was merely an incident in the plot to provoke mob violence by the friends of the victim's family. Crape had been attached to the door of the family, and apparently preparations were being made for the child's funeral.

SWEPT BY FLAMES.

Fire Destroys Many Buildings at Dwight, Ill., Including One Hotel.

DWIGHT, Ill., Oct. 12.—A very disastrous fire broke out here Saturday morning about half past 9 o'clock. The wind was very high, and a total lack of water and means to subdue the fire caused in a very short time a loss of $20,000. There was very little insurance. The fire broke out in the engine room of Kepplinger's machine shop, a large two-story wooden building with a public hall above. This was completely destroyed. The violence of the wind was so great and the flames so fierce that the fire swept across the street, over the railroad track of the Chicago & Alton railway, and totally destroyed the residence of Thomas Perry. Sweeping west the fire next destroyed the printing office of the Dwight Star and Herald, on which there was an insurance of $1,000. The Dwight steam laundry of Barr & Co. was totally destroyed; insurance on machinery, $1,000. The building and printing office of C. A. Stuck, of the North Star, was next completely consumed. The furniture warehouse of Mrs. Koehnlein was also burned. By far the greatest destruction and loss was the burning of the Struffe house. This was a large two-story hotel which had been erected this summer for the accommodation of the Keeley patients. Some of the furniture was saved, but the house itself was totally destroyed. At this stage of the fire the whole block, which contains some of the finest residences of the town, was threatened with destruction. Next to the Struffe house was the residence of Mr. Crocker, a two-story frame building, standing isolated. This building was torn down and dragged away and by this action the fire was stopped and much loss prevented. Engines came from Odell, Bloomington and Joliet and rendered good service.

A Famous Steamship Wrecked.

NORFOLK, Va., Oct. 12.—The United States steamship Despatch, for many years regarded as the official yacht of the president and the secretary of the navy, has gone ashore on the Assateague shoals, 40 miles north of Cape Charles. The coast there is very treacherous. She was bound from Brooklyn to Washington. During a severe gale on Friday night she struck the dreaded sands. She will become probably a total wreck. Her commander, Lieut. Cowles, and all her crew are known to be safe. The Despatch was purchased by the government in 1873 for $98,000.

Named for Congress.

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—W. Bourke Cockran was nominated for congress by the democrats of the Tenth district Saturday night. The republicans of the Twelfth congressional district nominated Col. William McMichael Saturday night. Joseph J. Little was nominated for congress in the same district by the democrats.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Oct. 12.—The prohibition congressional convention Saturday nominated Henry Schultz, a prominent farmer of Allegan county, as their candidate to succeed Congressman M. H. Ford, deceased.

THE PARNELLITES.

They Issue a Manifesto Declaring Union Impossible with the Opponents of Their Dead Leader.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—Parnell's colleagues have issued a manifesto deciding to keep up the fight against the McCarthyites. The manifesto is as follows:

"Ireland has lost its leader, but the cause of Ireland's freedom remains. We have a duty to the living and the dead. That duty is to maintain erect and unsullied the flag of the national independence. You, the people of Ireland, gave into the hands of Charles Stewart Parnell and his parliamentary colleagues the charge of your political interests and the honor and safety of your political cause. You asked us by constitutional means to restore prosperity, peace and freedom to our country under the head of our illustrious chief. Animated by his spirit and guided by his clear intelligence and firmness of soul we carried the struggle to the point at which the dawn of victory was seen by all men. In an unfortunate hour a majority of the Irish representatives, at the bidding of an English statesman, broke from our ranks, abandoned the flag of independent opposition and ranged themselves as followers and satellites of a British statesman. We who address you refused to become parties to this treason and relying on the national convictions maintained intact our allegiance to the independent national party of Ireland, convinced that our people would justify and support us. The great leader is dead, but the cause lives, and relying on your devotion to Irish nationality we propose to carry on the struggle until the principles for which he lived and died have triumphed and national unity has been restored. The parliamentary party is pledged to work for Ireland under the flag of independent opposition and absolutely free from the control of any foreign power or party. This is our resolution. Its realization depends on you. It involves sacrifices and struggles and we call on you to make them.

"True to our principles that we are the representatives and instruments of the people, we have resolved to call together a convention of representative Irishmen to discuss in the name of the nation the means by which we can best carry out the policy and programme which he bequeathed us in dying. To our ranks we shall welcome all honest men who believe that the political affairs of Ireland should be controlled and directed by the representatives of the Irish people and by them alone; but with the men immediately responsible for the disruption of the national party, who in obedience to foreign dictation have loaded with calumny and hounded to death the foremost man of our race, we can have no fellowship, and on their guidance Ireland can have no safety. Between them and the men who stood true to the cause of national independence Ireland must choose. On the threshold of the tomb the leader who we mourn defined our duty in these imperishable words:

"'If I were dead and gone to-morrow the men who are fighting against English influence in Irish public life would fight on still; they would still be the independent nationalists; they would still believe in the future of Ireland, and they would still protest that it was not by taking orders from an English minister that Ireland's future could be saved.'

"Fellow-countrymen, let it be to the glory of our race at home and abroad to act up to the spirit of this message. God save Ireland."

Parnell's friends are indignant at the statements made by John Dillon and others that Parnell refused to release the Paris fund of £40,000 for the benefit of the evicted tenants. Parnell's friends claim that he was perfectly willing to release the fund, provided that his claims for money advanced to evicted tenants should be allowed on the same basis as money advanced to John Dillon and others. Mr. Dillon, it is asserted, is perfectly willing to have his own claims allowed out of the fund, but not willing that Mr. Parnell's claim should be recognized. The funds, according to Mr. Parnell's latest statement, amounted to about £35,000. Against this there are a number of claims, bringing the total available amount down to about $20,000.

WIND AND WAVE.

Great Ocean Steamers the Prey of Sea and Gale.

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—The terrible storm which has swept over the Atlantic and beaten upon the coast has strewn the shore from Maine to Florida with the wrecks of many craft and has undoubtedly cost the lives of many hardy seamen.

The great steamers from Europe had a terrible experience in the gale. The Umbria and the Augusta Victoria, of the Cunard line, arrived Monday and both suffered severely. Four of the passengers of the steamship Augusta Victoria have broken limbs to exhibit as a record of the severity of the voyage. Eight others were more or less injured on the vessel. The vessel ran into the gale on the 4th and could not shake it off until the 9th. The seas ran mountain high and frequently broke over the bows of the steamer, washing everything movable from the decks. A sudden roll of the vessel on the wildest day of the storm dashed many of the passengers down, and when picked up four were found to have broken arms and legs, while eight others were severely bruised.

Several passengers on the Umbria were injured also.

TIMBER DAMAGED.

County Surveyor Lewis, of Grand Rapids, Minn., Estimates the Loss by a Recent Cyclone.

GRAND RAPIDS, Minn., Oct. 13.—County Surveyor F. R. Lewis, who was supposed to have been lost in the tornado in the upper woods, returned safe and sound Monday He was only partially in the storm, having been on the north edge of it, but crossed its entire track on his return. From his statement the townships devastated cover about 400 square miles. In this area Surveyor Lewis estimates that over 25 per cent. of all the pine timber is down. Mr. Lewis thinks that if this timber could be cut before fire gets into it the loss would not exceed 50,000,000 or 70,000,000 feet. Otherwise it will be double that amount.

SLAIN WITH A HAMMER.

An Engineer at Lima, O., Kills His Fellow Workman.

LIMA, O., Oct. 13.—Monday afternoon Frank Castle was killed by Elmer Downs. Both men were engineers employed at the same place, each working twelve hours, when the other would relieve him. Castle was late in getting around and Downs was not in a good humor when he appeared, and after a few words they engaged in a fight, during which Castle's skull was crushed by a blow with a hammer in Down's hands. Castle died almost instantly.

Burned to Death.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 13.—Mrs. Fernandez, a Mexican woman, Sunday night left her three youngest children in charge of her daughter Mercy aged 10. Mercy locked them in a room and went to play. The children knocked over a lamp and set fire to the room. Two were rescued, but the youngest, Grace, was burned to death.

Nominated for Congress.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Oct. 13.—The republicans on Monday nominated ex-Congressman Charles E. Belknap, of Grand Rapids, as their candidate for congress from the Fifth district.

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS

"SEND WHEAT AT ONCE."

Sly Green Goods Men Are Operating in Winona and Vicinity.

Several Winona merchants within the past few days have received communications from "shovers of the queer," marked "strictly confidential." The communication sets forth that the writer has a plentiful stock of "green goods" on hand, prepared from stolen government plates, and offers to sell 4,000 bogus dollars for $350 in good money. The communication, which is printed on a typewriter, is without any signature. A reply by letter is strictly forbidden, but the receiver, if he desires the goods, must telegraph to James Day, Bloomsbury, Hunterdon county, N. J., the following sentence: "Send wheat at once." Then instructions will be given as to where a meeting can take place. The address is said to be good for fifteen days only.

Knocks Out Grain Gamblers.

The supreme court of Minnesota has handed down a decision of importance to grain gamblers, which knocks out dealers in futures in one sweeping blow. The court holds that contracts for the sale and delivery of grain or other commodities to be delivered at a future day are not per se unlawful when the parties in good faith intend to perform them according to their terms. But contracts in form for future delivery not intended to represent actual transaction, but merely to pay and receive the difference between the agreed price and the market price at a future day, are in the nature of wagers on the future price, and void.

Murdered and Robbed.

The series of robberies, assaults and general acts of lawlessness of the past two months at East Grand Forks culminated in the murder of Justice of the Peace Robert Woods, who was found lying on a street crossing with a bullet in his head. Four robberies besides that of Woods had been committed within twenty-four hours and the people were in a state of great excitement. There was no clew to the murderers and robbers.

Blowers Gets His Wife Again.

Morris Blowers persuaded his wife to start home with him from Lake City. Her paramour, Ed Osborn, would probably stay in jail unless he succeeded in furnishing bonds until the November term of court, when the complaining witness would probably fail to appear, as it was understood that Mrs. Blowers made that one of the conditions on which she consented to return home with her husband.

A Reduced Death Rate.

The latest publication of the state board of health gives a statistical report of the distribution of mortality of the important diseases in Minnesota during June, July and August, 1891. The total number of deaths in the state were: In June, 582 (1890, 777); July, 814 (1890, 970); August, 891 (1890, 932); a very marked reduction as compared with the same months last year.

Lake Steamer Burned.

The passenger steamer Winslow, which was nearly wrecked at Lakeside during a fog, was burned at the Lake Superior Transit Company's dock in Duluth. The Winslow was built in Cleveland in 1870 and was valued at $35,000. She was a total loss; insured in English companies. The Winslow was the first vessel to carry a cargo of wheat from Duluth.

Marling Gets the Contract.

Commissioner Carter in Washington has awarded the contract for the designated surveys within the Red lake Indian reservation in Minnesota. The cost of this work is $3,000, and Abner L. Marling, United States deputy surveyor of Minnesota, secures the contract.

The News Brief Chronicled.

The receipts of the state prison for August amounted to $2,398.88.

Mrs. Carrie R. Cox, of Minnesota, has been appointed copyist in the patent office at Washington at a salary of $720 per annum.

The Minneapolis retail grocers are on the point of boycotting commission men who sell at retail.

The Duluth chamber of commerce has issued circulars to the various interested commercial bodies, calling for a deep water convention.

About twenty prominent farmers met in Minneapolis and organized the Farmers' and Laborers' exchange, an institution to consist of all the farmers and laborers of the county.

Monroe Nichols took possession of the office of register of the Duluth land office, succeeding Col. Colville.

The man killed by the cars on the Great Northern tracks at Granite Falls has been identified as Ole Johnson, a well-to-do farmer of Renville county.

The Olympic theater in St. Paul was burned, the loss being about $100,000.

H. J. Gude's grain elevator at Duluth was burned, the loss being $20,000; insurance, $9,200.

Eight buildings, including five principal business houses, were destroyed by fire at Gibbon. Loss, $9,000.

Mrs William Tiegens, of Tyner, Pembina county, was pronounced insane in the county court.

It was said two cases of sealskins and imported shawls, valued up among the thousands, were taken from a car near Lake City by thieves.

New Duluth held its first village election and elected Gus Lind as president. License carried by a large majority.

Two St. Paul men filed articles of incorporation for a new type foundry at Minneapolis, to be known as the Tachtype Manufacturing Company. Its capital stock is $2,000,000.

Col. W. H. H. Stowell, of the company that has leased the mammoth blast furnace for reducing iron ore at West Duluth, says the plant will be in operation by November 1. About 150 men will be employed and the furnace will turn out 125 tons of bessemer pig a day.

A. D. Thomson, of Duluth, says that of the 6,500,000 bushels of wheat which was shipped out of that city in the past month about 4,000,000 bushels was for direct export.

Charles Watson, the traveling salesman who victimized several Duluth persons by drawing on his former employers and getting the drafts cashed, has succeeded in escaping to England.

Dyer & Martin, of Stevens Point, Wis., have taken a contract to bank between 40,000,000 and 50,000,000 feet of logs for Laird & Norton, of Winona. The contract amounts to between $200,000 and $250,000

PERSONAL AND LITERARY.

—John Fiske, the historian, says Lowell was a matchless Dante scholar, and no experience was so valuable, and no instruction in any college corner was pursued with so much pleasure as in his advanced class in Italian.

—Anthony Schubert, third officer of the British tramp steamship Strathdon, is one of the heirs of Schubert, the rich Philadelphia piano-maker. He expects to get $5,000,000 out of the estate and settle down to an easy shore life.

—Lord Tennyson's fondness for seclusion grows upon him with his years. It is quite impossible for visitors to see him, and he has a dread of having strangers approach him. He is becoming moody and silent, and never walks out unattended.

—Boulanger stalks about the streets of Brussels, "remote, unfriended, melancholy, slow." There is not much about the former "brav' general" to excite admiration nowadays. His figure has proved to be too small for the trappings of greatness.

—Gen. Butler's wife, of whom he writes so tenderly in his memoirs, was an exquisite elocutionist, surpassed, in the opinion of many, by Fanny Kemble alone. She knew several of the Shakespeare plays by heart, and believed that they were the work of Bacon.

—M. Dumas has written a preface to an anonymous book in praise of anonymity. He holds that thought should be crystalized into the forms used by Pascal and De la Rochefoucauld, and then cast upon the world without the author's name attached, so that it may be taken or rejected on its own merits.

—Prince Victor is twenty-nine years old. He has the stature of his father, Prince Napoleon, and he is superbly handsome. His head is imposing; Roman strength and French intellect are expressed in his countenance. The contours are full and ample toward the skull, but softened down in the lower part of the face. He is unmistakably the great nephew of the great Napoleon.

—The ages of some noted women are given, by an exchange, as follows: Harriet Beecher Stowe is 80; Julia Ward Howe, 72; Belva Lockwood, 51; Susan B. Anthony, 71; Marion Harland, 56; Mary Mapes Dodge, 52; Kate Field, 50; Fanny Davenport, 40; Ada Rehan, 31; Emma Thursby, 34; Ella Wheeler Wilcox, 36; Lillian Russell, 31; Clara Morris, 44, and Mary Anderson, 32.

—Two American poets—Maurice Thompson and James Whitcomb Riley—both charming writers, have recently published poems containing two lines precisely the same, as follows:

He pursed his lips and puffed his cheeks,
And blew, and blew, and blew.

One of them applied the lines to the ancient god Pan, and the other to the south wind. Maurice Thompson declares the lines were strictly original with him, and James Whitcomb Riley swears they are his own.

—This belated anecdote about Emerson was lately told by Dr. Holmes: A certain paragrapher on a Boston paper was explaining at great length to the courteous sage of Concord how he wrote and polished his jokes and epigrams. "You see," he said, "I turn out about two dozen a day in the rough and then I polish them slowly. I used to read them to my wife, but—but—she is dead." "How horrible!" cried Emerson, in genuine sympathy.

HUMOROUS.

—Mr. Easy—"Isn't Mr. Slowpay a little deaf?" Mr. Hardup—"I can easily believe it, as I've been calling for more than a year for some money he owes me."—Harper's Bazar.

—Butcher—"How would a saddle of mutton suit you, ma'am." Miss Batchem—"Very well, but let it be a side saddle, because it is for my sister and myself."—Binghamton Republican.

—"Please charge it," said the impecunious customer, as he drank his glass of seltzer at the soda fountain. "It's charged now," said the druggist. "Fifteen cents, please."—Detroit Free Press.

—Physician—"I told you that you needed change, and here I find you at the bank as usual." Patient—"Well, isn't this the place to get change? Where can I find more of it?"—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

—Vender of Patent Medicine—"You know that Shakespeare says: 'Truth hath a quiet breast.'" Student—"Yes." Vender of Patent Medicine—"Well, Truth always keeps a bottle of my nerve tonic on hand."—Pharmaceutical Era.

—Small Brother—"Pa says he wishes you'd make haste and propose to sis." Young Man—"Then he is willing to let her marry me?" Small Brother—"Taint that. He says you won't come so often after you have been kicked."—Soundings.

—Mr. Jaggs—"I tell you, whisky is a handy thing to have around when you have cramps." Mrs. Jaggs (who knows a thing or two)—"Yes, and cramps are a handy thing to have around when you have whisky in the house."—Philadelphia Record.

—A Change of Diet.—Enthusiastic Young Lady—"I adore poets; do tell me all about them. They must be ethereal creatures that live on love and sunshine!" Magazine Editor—"They occasionally afford peanuts."—Drake's Magazine.

—The Open Fireplace.—Host—"What do you think of my new open fireplace? Just see how merrily the flames leap." Visitor—"It's beautiful (teeth chattering), simply beautiful." Host—"If you feel cold, come down into the kitchen and get warm!"—Yankee Blade.

—Four-year-old Charlotte had been having some trouble with her English, but she has entirely passed her difficulties on one point. "I see how it is now, mamma," she said the other day. "Hens set and lay." "Yes." "And people sit and lie, don't they mamma?" —Washington Star.

—Such Is Fame.—"There's something familiar about that tune," observed Raynor, "but I can't recall the name of it to save my life." "Don't know 'McGinty' when you hear it?" said Shyne, pityingly. The band, meanwhile, kept on playing "Boulanger's March."—Chicago Tribune.

—Husband—"When the tailor comes for that suit of mine to be mended I want you to let him have it." Wife—"But I should think you would let me mend them. It is so much cheaper." Husband—"No, it isn't. The last time you mended my clothes it cost me fifty dollars for a new dress for you."—Clothier and Furnisher.

THE OLD COFFEE-MILL.

Just at the hour when chanticleer
Wakes his harem with lusty crow,
I turn on my pillow and seem to hear
A welcome sound from the world below.
It is not the chirp of the early bird,
Nor the passing milkman's sonorous thrill
Whose homely call in my dream is heard,
But the musical grind of the coffee-mill,
Mingled with mother's staccato clear:
"It's time to get up now, William, dear."

It always hung by the chimney wide—
"G'round, g'round, g'round g'r-o-u-n-d;"
Time and wear and rust it defied—
"G'round, g'round, g'round g'r-o-u-n-d;"
Its music silenced the cricket's note—
"G'round, g'round, g'round g'r-o-u-n-d;"
Its fragrance tickled each thirsty throat—
"G'round, g'round, g'round g'r-o-u-n-d;"
The hand that turned it, turned with a will,
And incense ground from the old coffee-mill.

O, years that are gone, come back again!
And find in my pillow a rose-leaf dream;
Take out of my heart this smarting pain—
Make all things really, what now they seem;
Bring the eyes that had never learned to weep,
Bring the slumber that held me at early dawn,
Awake me, as then, from sweet boyish sleep
To weed the garden or hoe the corn,
To the tune of father's "Git up thar, Bill!"
An the rhythm and rhyme of the old coffee-mill.

THE U. S. MINTS.

Something About the Process of Coining Money.

It is quite natural that the United States mint should have many visitors. It amuses one, the manufacture of money, and even the hardened millionaire or the passionless cashier of a savings bank is bound to be impressed by the fine sang-froid of the maidens who sit at the coinage machines, their laps heaping full of the precious plankets, and handle gold and silver as coolly as though they were shelling peas. Yes, it is well worth while to come to Philadelphia just to see them. You find the mint on Chestnut street, just below Broad, a rather squat but striking structure of white marble, with a Grecian facade.

The first building erected in the United States for public use, under the authority of the federal government, was one for the United States mint. It was a plain, brick building, on the east side of Seventh street, near Arch, and the corner-stone was laid by the great David Rittenhouse, director of the mint, on July 31, 1792. The following October operations of coining began. On the 19th of May, 1829, an act was passed by congress locating the United States mint on its present site. The first coinage was of silver half-dimes, in October, 1792. The first metal purchased for coinage was six pounds of old copper, at one shilling and threepence per pound, which was coined and delivered to the treasurer in 1793. The first deposit of silver bullion was made on July 18, 1794, by the Bank of Maryland. It consisted of "coins of France," amounting to $80,715.73½. The first return of gold coinage was on July 31, 1795, and consisted of seven hundred and forty-four half eagles.

Over forty thousand persons visit the mint in the course of a year. Owing to the immense amount of the precious metals which is always in course of transition and the watchful care necessary to a correct transaction of business, the public is necessarily excluded from some of the departments. The system of surveillance adopted in the mint is so precise and the weighing so accurate, that the abstraction of the smallest particle of metal would lead to almost immediate detection.

All the gold and silver received for coining is first weighed. The largest weight used in the deposit-room is five hundred ounces, the smallest is the thousandth part of an ounce. The scales are wonderfully delicate, and are examined and adjusted on alternate days. On the right of this room is one of the twelve vaults in the building Of solid masonry, several of them are iron-lined, with double doors of the same metal and most complicated and burglar-proof locks.

It is estimated that about fifteen hundred million dollars' worth of gold has been received and weighed in this room, probably nine-tenths of the amount being from California since its discovery there in the year 1848. Previous to that time the surplus of gold came principally from Virginia, North Carolina and Georgia. During the past ten years considerable quantities have been received from Nova Scotia, but most of the gold that reaches the mint at the present time comes from California, Montana, Colorado, Idaho, Nevada, Arizona, Oregon, Dakota, Virginia, South Carolina and New Mexico. Formerly the silver used by the mint came principally from Mexico and South America, but since the discovery of the immense veins of that metal in the territories of the United States, the supply is furnished from the great west. The copper used comes principally from the mines of Lake Superior, the finest from Minnesota. The nickel is chiefly from Lancaster county, Pennsylvania.

After the metal had been carefully weighed in the presence of the depositor and the proper officials, it is locked in iron boxes and taken to the melting-room, where it is opened by two men, each provided with a key to one of the separate locks. There are four furnaces in this room, and the first process of melting takes place here. The gold and silver, being mixed with borax and other fluxing material, is placed in pots, melted and put in iron molds, and, when cooled, is again taken to the deposit-room in bars, where it is reweighed and a small piece cut from each lot by the assayer. From this the fineness of the whole is ascertained, the value calculated, and the depositor paid. The metal in its rough state is then transferred to the refiner.

The two essential things regarding every piece of metal offered in payment of any dues are, first, the weight or quantity; next, the fineness or purity of the same. The process of weighing even the baser metals used in coining must be conducted by the careful use of accurate scales, with precise notes of the results. In precious metals—gold, silver and their high-grade alloys—a very small variation in the fineness makes a great difference in the value. Nothing is more essential than the accurate determination of the weight of the sample and of the metal obtained from it. It requires keen sight and most delicate adjustment in the hand which manipulates the lilliputian scales of an assayer's table. The smallest weight used in the mint is found in the assay room; it is the thirteen-hundredth part of a grain, and can scarcely be seen with the naked eye, unless on a white ground. The assay department is strictly a technical branch of the service. It has been practically under one regime for the last fifty years.

After the gold and silver used by the mint have been separated from each other and purified, they are conveyed to the drying cellar, put under pressure of some eighty tons, and all the water pressed out. The metal is then dried with heat, and afterwards taken in large cakes to the furnaces. The melting rooms are on the first floor. Here all the metal used in coining is alloyed, melted and poured into narrow molds. These castings, called ingots, are about a foot long, a half inch thick and from one to two and a half inches in breadth. The value of gold ingots is from six hundred to fourteen hundred dollars each; those of silver about sixty dollars. The floors that cover the melting rooms are made of iron in honeycomb pattern, so that they can be readily taken up to save the dust, their roughness acting as a scraper and preventing any metallic particles from clinging to the soles of the shoes of those who pass through the department. The sweepings of the entire building have averaged twenty-three thousand dollars per annum for the last five years.

The methods of coining money have varied with the progress in mechanic arts, and are but vaguely traced from the beginning, the primitive mode being by the casting of the piece in sand, the impression being made with a punch. In the middle ages the metal was hammered into sheets of the required thickness, cut with shears into shape and then stamped by hand with the design. The mill and screw, by which greater increase in power, with finer finish, was gained, dates back to the sixteenth century. This process, with various modifications and improvements, continued in use in the Philadelphia mint until 1836.

The first steam coining press was invented by M. Thonnelier, of France, in 1833, and was first used in the United States mint in 1836. It was remodeled and rebuilt in 1858, but in 1874 was superseded by the one now in operation, the very perfection of mechanism, in which the vibration and unsteady bearing of the former press were entirely obviated and precision attained by the solid stroke, with a saving of over seventy-five per cent. in the wearing and breaking of the dies. The dies for coining are prepared by engravers especially employed at the mint for that purpose. The process of engraving them consists in cutting the devices and legends in soft steel, those parts being depressed which in the coin appear in relief. This, having been finished and hardened, constitutes an "original die," too precious to be directly employed in striking coins, but used for multiplying dies. It is first employed to impress another piece of soft steel, which then presents the appearance of a coin and is called a hub. This hub, being hardened, is used to impress other pieces of steel in like manner, which, being like the original die, are hardened and used for striking the coins. A pair of these will on an average perform two weeks' work.

The planchets, or discs, of metal not yet stamped, after being adjusted, are first, in order to protect the surface of the coin, passed through the milling machine. They are fed to it through an upright tube, and as they descend from the lower aperture are caught upon the edge of a revolving wheel and carried about a quarter of a revolution, during which the edge is compressed and forced up, the space between the wheel and the rim being a little less than the diameter of the planchet. This apparatus moves so nimbly that five hundred and sixty half dimes can be milled in a minute, but for large pieces the average is about one hundred and twenty. In this room are the milling machines and the massive but delicate coining presses, ten in number. Each of these is capable of coining from eighty to one hundred perfect pieces a minute. Only the largest are used in making coins of large denominations.

After being stamped the coins are taken to the coiner's room and placed on a long table—the double-eagles in piles of ten each. The light and heavy ones are kept separate in coining, and when delivered to the treasurer they are mixed together in such proportions as to give him full weight in every delivery. By law the deviation in the standard weight in delivering to him must not exceed three pennyweights in one thousand double-eagles. The gold coins—as small as quarter-eagles being counted and weighed to verify the count—are put up in bags of five thousand dollars each. The three-dollar pieces are put in bags of three thousand dollars, and one-dollar pieces in one thousand-dollar bags. The silver pieces, and sometimes small gold, are counted on a very ingenious contrivance called a "counting board." By this process twenty-five dollars in five-cent pieces can be counted in less than a minute. The "boards" are a simple flat surface of wood with copper partitions the height and size of the coin to be counted, rising from the surface at regular intervals and running parallel with each other from top to bottom. They somewhat resemble a common household "washing-board," with the grooves running parallel with the sides, but much larger. The boards are worked by hand over a box, and as the pieces are counted they slide into a drawer prepared to receive them. They are then put into bags and are ready for shipment.

For the various duties of the mint there are over three hundred persons employed as clerks, workmen, etc.—say about two-thirds men and one-third women—the number depending largely, of course, upon the amount of work to be done.—Melville Phillips, in Once a Week.

She Had a Long Memory.

A lady who formerly lived in this state but is now a resident of Ohio was riding on the East Eighth-street cable car yesterday, casually glancing at the houses as she passed. In one of the yards she saw a crazy quilt hanging on a line. Instantly she got off the car, and, going to the house, rang the door-bell and asked if Mrs. Blank lived there. On receiving an affirmative reply she entered, and two old friends were soon chatting over old times. She said she had recognized the quilt as one she had seen her friend make in central Missouri eighteen years ago. A lady had just come from the east bringing with her a crazy quilt, which was so pretty and hard to make that the East-side lady fashioned another just like it. This was the one that brought the two friends so unexpectedly together. "I knew that there were only two quilts like that in the world," she said, "and I instantly concluded that this must be yours, although until to-day I did not know where you lived."—Kansas City Times.

AGRICULTURAL HINTS.

THE LEAF CRUMPLER.

A Destructive Insect, Which May, However, Be Easily Kept in Check.

During the winter and spring months one often finds upon the twigs of various fruit trees masses of dry, brown leaves surrounding a long, horn-like, tubular case. If one of these cases be carefully cut open it will be found to contain a brownish worm or caterpillar about half an inch long. This insect is the leaf-crumpler, and it often becomes one of the most injurious of orchard pests. The adult insect is a small, grayish moth that appears during June or July, and deposits eggs on the various trees that serve as food plants for the larvæ. These include the apple, quince, and possibly the the peach, as well as both the wild and cultivated varieties of the cherry, plum and crab apple. From these eggs there soon hatch small brownish worms that construct tubular, silken cases (Fig. 1) within which they remain concealed when not eating. As they grow larger they draw about the opening of their abodes many partially-eaten leaves, so that by autumn there is quite a bunch surrounding each case. (Fig. 2.) At the approach of cold weather the cases are attached to the twigs by means of silken threads, the larvæ frequently gnawing away the tender bark to insure a firm hold; and thus the winter is passed.

FIG. 1.

As soon in spring as the leaves begin to appear the larvæ attack them, frequently eating out the flower buds as well. The front part of a larvæ is seen in Fig. 3. They continue feeding and growing until sometime in June, when they become pupæ, pupating within the cases. About a fortnight later the moths emerge, and thus the life cycle is completed. The perfect insect is shown at Fig. 4, somewhat enlarged.

FIG. 3.

FIG. 4.

Fortunately there are several species of parasites that help to keep this insect in check. In young orchards the larval cases are easily picked off during winter. They may then be burned or, what is probably better, carried to a considerable distance from their food plants, and left on the ground, thus allowing the parasites to develop and escape. The leaf-crumpler larvæ are also liable to destruction by spraying with paris green or London purple, and may easily be held in check in this way. In orchards regularly sprayed for the codlin moth this, as well as other leaf-eating apple pests, will rarely prove troublesome. Not only should all the larval cases possible be picked off during winter, but spraying should be commenced early also. The larvæ are more easily and profitably destroyed while young and tender, and before they have done much damage to the leaves and flower buds. One great reason why fruit growers often fail to keep insect as well as fungus enemies in check is because they neglect the spraying until the harm is done.—American Agriculturist.

AMONG THE POULTRY.

An overgrown, excessively fat fowl is a nuisance.

A little stimulating food will not come amiss in moulting season.

Young turkeys will lay more eggs than old ones, but they will be smaller.

If young turkey hens are to be kept for breeding, select out the best of the earliest hatched.

The best table fowls are the games, Cochins, Houdans, Brahmas, Langshans, Wyandottes and Dominiques.

There is no difference in any respect between chickens hatched in an incubator and those hatched under a hen.

The best breeds for eggs are Leghorns, Minorcas, Houdans, Spanish, Polands, Hamburgs and Andalusians.

Young geese that have not yet completed their growth should be fed liberally from now on until they are ready to market.

Cabbage makes a good green feed for winter. All the small, unmarketable heads should be gathered up and stored away.

When pigeons are kept in small yards care must be taken to keep an even number. An odd male will cause continual trouble.

Poultry of any kind intending to be dressed before sending to market should be kept from food for twenty-four hours before killing.

It is not a good plan to keep pullets and old hens, fat and lean hens all together. They do not require the same food and will do better separate.

Egg-bound hens or persistent cases of croup rarely pay for the trouble required to cure. The hatchet in a majority of cases is the cheapest remedy.

While in many localities it is best to close up the poultry house at night, during the day the doors and windows should be opened, when the weather will admit, so as to secure a good ventilation.

Preserving Liquefied Honey.

Under the ordinary plan of liquefying honey the product is sticky, somewhat like molasses, having thickened in melting. But more than this, it has lost part of that fragrant aroma and exquisite taste which it before possessed. These important qualities can all be retained, according to British Bee Journal, by a simple process, which consists in covering the honey about to be subjected to heat, with half an inch of cold water. The crust and the whole of the acid portion, if any, on top of the granulated honey, should be removed previous to placing the cold water on. After melting there appears about the same quantity of water on top as when placed on at first. When the honey has been allowed to cool down to a lukewarm condition, the water covering should be poured off. Honey that was originally clear, and has become thick and cloudy by being melted without the covering of water, will not alter, if melted again with it.

FEEDING FOR MILK.

Effect of Various Feeds on Milk and Butter Production.

The experiment station at Geneva, N. Y., has been trying the effects of various feeds upon milk and butter production. The bulletin says:

"While wheat bran has been a good milk producer, yet when fed without other grain it has been found inferior to corn meal, but in combination with other grain foods it has given better results than when fed alone. The butter was inferior to that produced on corn meal, being much lighter colored, not so good grain and containing a less per cent. of olein.

"Of all foods thus far experimented with, linseed meal proved itself the greatest butter producer. The milk yield invariably fell off when we substituted linseed meal for corn meal, but the fats increased, thus producing a larger yield of butter. In one experiment there was fed hay, corn meal and wheat bran with the following results: Milk per day, 20 lbs. 7 ozs.; milk for 1 lb. butter, 21.3 lbs.; butter per day, 15.4 ozs.; per cent. of water in butter, 12.79. In the second period linseed meal was substituted for the corn meal, otherwise the ration was the same as in period one: Milk per day, 20 lbs. 1 oz.; milk per 1 lb. butter, 19.2 lbs; butter per day, 18.5 ozs.; per cent. of water in butter, 12.65. A slight falling off in milk, but 5.1 lbs. less milk required for a pound of butter.

"From experiments made the following conclusions are drawn: That the chemical composition of foods does not always show their relative feeding value as butter producers. That some grain foods increase the yield of milk without increasing the fat in the milk. That some foods diminish the milk yield but increase the butter fats. That linseed meal produces less milk than corn meal, but more butter. That the butter produced under linseed meal feed contains an excess of olien, therefore is soft and oily. That the best butter was produced when a combination of several of these foods was fed together.

HOW TO FILE A SAW.

Anyone with Good Eyes and a Steady Hand Can Do It.

As farmers frequently have occasion to use saws, and as saws will become dull from use, and since anyone with good eyes and steady hands can learn to sharpen one, a few directions may be useful. The first thing required is a saw clamp. This may be obtained from the hardware dealer, but a home-made one may be substituted. If a vice is at hand, it may be made to hold the clamp, which consists of two, one inch thick, soft wood pieces, about the length of the saw blade and three inches wide. The upper edge of each piece is given a long bevel on one side so that the wood will not be in the way of the hands. Lay the pieces together, beveled side out. Fasten loosely by a screw. This is simply for convenience in handling. Place the saw between the jaws of the clamp so that the teeth are just clear of the wood and fasten it firmly to the vice. Take three-cornered file provided with a handle (a corn cob will do) in right hand. Grasp the point with the thumb and first two fingers of the left and stand in front of the saw where the light falls clearly upon it. You will notice that each alternate tooth is set in opposite direction from plane of the surface of the saw, and that the edges of the teeth are beveled in like manner. If the saw is dull these bevels are probably rounding instead of flat and the points of the teeth worn off. Stand so that the hands, holding the file, will move back and forth in the direction of the bevels of the teeth. File the teeth (each alternate one) until the bevel is straight and the edges and points are sharp, being careful to push the file straight ahead without letting it rock up and down, and doing all the work when the file is going from you. Always lift it clear of the teeth when drawing it back. When all the teeth set one way are sharpened, turn the saw around and file the others. — Orange Judd Farmer.

HANDY HARNESS HOOK.

One That Can Be Made from Strips of Worn Wagon Tires.

By far too many farmers, instead of hanging up the harness and collars after being used, throw them upon the floor, across the wagon seat, upon benches, and if in the stable the chances are that they are temporarily thrown across the division between the stalls. All of this careless and shiftless way of doing business is easily avoided by having plenty of strong iron or wooden hooks placed in some convenient part of the wagon house. Always avoid hanging harness in the horse stable, as the tainted atmosphere destroys the grain of the leather, tarnishes the plated portions and makes the whole sticky and disagreeable to handle. In the accompanying illustration, sent by L. D. Snook, of Yates county, N. Y., the figures B B B, represent a very good form of iron hooks, which can be easily made from strips of worn wagon tires. Place the rounded side up and screw them to the side of the building, or to a girt. The plain hooks, A A, are of either wood or iron and intended for the collars, as it is not best to hang the collars on the same hook with the bridle and harness, unless the hook be of extra length.—American Agriculturist.

The Production of Mutton.

While the profits resulting from different classes of stock are dependent largely upon the conditions that surround the individual growers, generally speaking, sheep return a better profit upon the capital land and labor required for them than does any other stock. Skillful sheep raisers can undoubtedly produce mutton. As cheaply as good cattlemen or hog raisers can produce their specialties as mutton commands usually better prices than these products, there should be money in it if there is in any butcher's stock. And in addition to this is the fleece, which not unfrequently pays for the whole keep of the animal, having the mutton as clear gain.—N. W. Farmer.

It is important to have thrifty, vigorous breeding birds if you expect thrifty, vigorous chickens. Now is the time to be making the selections.

Do Clothes Make a Boy?

"Do clothes make a boy?" No—clothes make clothes. What are clothes? They are an expression of character. A boy who respects himself will dress as decently as he can—simply and cleanly. A boy who respects the worth of life will not dress conspicuously even if he have the means. He is best dressed whose appearance excites no special attention, and carries no critical remarks. Conspicuous dress goes with a high head, and a very indefinite purpose in life. Dress does not make the boy, but it often exhibits him; theatrical dress in society is in bad taste; but every one owes it to others to look as well as he can. Neglected dress shows a want of self-respect, and a lack of self-respect arises as a rule from a sense of cheapness of character. It is often impossible for a poor boy to dress as well as he would wish. But he can always express his well-dressed character by making his clothes neat and tasteful.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Cleared away

—all the troubles and ailments that make woman's life a burden to her. She's relieved, cured, and restored, with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Periodical pains, weak back, bearing-down sensations, nervous prostration, all "female complaints," are cured by it. It improves digestion, enriches the blood, dispels aches and pains, brings refreshing sleep, and restores health and strength.

It's a powerful general, as well as uterine, tonic and nervine, imparting vigor and strength to the entire system. Contains no alcohol to inebriate; no syrup or sugar to derange digestion; a legitimate medicine—not a beverage.

If you're a tired, nervous, or suffering woman, then the "Favorite Prescription" is the only medicine that's guaranteed, in every case, to bring you help. If it doesn't give you satisfaction, you have your money back.

"August Flower"

I had been troubled five months with Dyspepsia. The doctors told me it was chronic. I had a fullness after eating and a heavy load in the pit of my stomach. I suffered frequently from a Water Brash of clear matter. Sometimes a deathly Sickness at the Stomach would overtake me. Then again I would have the terrible pains of Wind Colic. At such times I would try to belch and could not. I was working then for Thomas McHenry, Druggist, Cor. Irwin and Western Ave., Allegheny City, Pa., in whose employ I had been for seven years. Finally I used August Flower, and after using just one bottle for two weeks, was entirely relieved of all the trouble. I can now eat things I dared not touch before. I would like to refer you to Mr. McHenry, for whom I worked, who knows all about my condition, and from whom I bought the medicine. I live with my wife and family at 39 James St., Allegheny City, Pa. DELANO DIARY.

—Miss Sadie VanEman has been sitting up nights lately with a felon.

—The Ladies Aid Society met at the residence of Mrs. Jonas Johnson on Wednesday.

—Hennepin County's unterified, John McGarey, was hauling some of his surplus wheat to Delano this week.

--Report came to town yesterday that Thomas Worthy had fallen from a bee tree and received a considerable of a shaking up.

—Mr. Staddon's lots were graded down this week preparatory to the erection of that new photograph gallery and residence.

—William McKinley will have a public auction on his farm Saturday, Oct. 31. He has rented the farm for three years, to Jerome Teichnor.

—The east bound evening train on the G. N. R'y now leaves Delano one hour earlier than heretofore: leaving time being now 3:40 instead of 4:40.

—We are in receeipt of quite an interesting article from Maple Lake, on Dancing, but owing to its uncommon length have been unable to print it.

—Squire Billings informs us that James Quinn and Mrs Helen Bain have been granted pensions, and Malcome Anderson an increase of pension.

—Monday night's rain gave the new city hall roof a thorough test. The recorder informs us that it did not leak a drop. It is not made of tin but asbestos.

—J. N. Stacy has taken out another patent right we see by the report sent us by C. A. Snow & Co. This time a wheat tester. Before it was the Stacy filler.

—A. W. Wittman shipped about $80. worth of school text-books, left on his hands as agent, back to the county auditor, at Buffalo, yesterday. He says he would not like to pay what the freight to the county seat will cost for the entire stock.

—Miss Gustie Cruikshank left on Monday morning, for Union City, Penn., in company with her cousin, Mrs. Peters, who has been visiting at Howard Lake for several weeks and is returning home. Gustie will live with her mother's aunt, Mrs. Jackson.

—Rev. Jabez Blackhurst went to Litchfield on Saturday evening to preach on his new appointment at that place. Of course the Litchfield brethren listened to an able and interesting sermon or there was something wrong. Rev. B. is a good preacher.

--Rev. Davies, the new M. E. pastor at this place preached on Sunday evening to a fair sized audience. He took for his text "And now abideth faith, hope, charity; these three;" I Cor. chap. XIII. v. 13. He preached an interesting sermon, but did not tell us whether or not he was superstitious on 13.

—On Wednesday afternoon a seven years old son of Olaf Nolan's got his right hand caught between the rollers of a cane mill and received a frightful wound, tearing the skin across the palm and back of the hand and driving the bone out of the thumb back into the hand, leaving the thumb limp, the little fellow was brought to town where his wounds were dressed and his hand put into as good condition as possible.

—The Delano Fair on Saturday was attended by a large crowd of people. Some complaints were heard about buyers not paying enough for stock. We see no very good reason for this, Delano, being on the R. R. and handy for shipping while Watertown is seven or eight miles from the track, unless by crowding prices down here they are enabled to buy at their own figures at Watertown, but this would hardly be the case if our local buyers are up to snuff.

—On Tuesday, Oct. 13, at 9 a. m., at St. Peters church, in Delano, Mr Angie McEcharim and Miss Anna Eppel were joined in the holy bans of matrimony. Rev. Lawrence conducting the ceremonies. Miss Eppel was a daughter of the Hon. Valentine Eppel, of this place and a young lady highly respected by a large circle of friends who are sorry to lose her from their midst as she is soon to accompany her husband to Monticello, where they are to reside, and where many good wishes accompany them. Among the many costly and useful presents bestowed upon the happy couple was a fine heating stove, a sewing machine, dishes, cutlery, lamps, $45. in gold, a rocking chair and many other articles handy to have in the house. Those in attendance from abroad were William C. Eppel, Beardsley; Mrs. G. A. Hoffman and son George, Will Dedrick, Anna Mara, Angus McEcharim the grooms father, and John, Archie, and Alex his brothers, John McEcharim and wife, Mike Kelly, Henry and Hughey Hopkins, Buffalo; Mr. and Mrs. O'Neal, Andrew Taylor, Miss Ida Varney, Buffalo; Gracie Desmond, George Baldwin, Maple Lake; Katie Steffes, Minneapolis; Mr. and Mrs. William Haggerty, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Dedrick, Mr. and Mrs. Merton Parmeter, Rockford; Mrs. Val. Kuchenmeister, Waverly, and Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Kohler, Watertown.

—Several of our citizens are working on patent rights; each of course expecting to become wealthy. What's the use of patent laws if people can't use them.

—William McKinley claims the best paying thing on his farm is a flock of sheep. He says some of his ewes brought him $7. cash and he had the ewes left.

Personals.

I. Gutzwiller, Jr. went to Twincite on Tuesday.

J. C. Hitz took in Monticello on his rounds this week.

Burt St. Johns, of Watertown, was over on Wednesday.

Charley Carlton, of Minneapolis, was a Delano visitor this week.

Miss Cora Peters and Fred returned from the cities last evening.

Jacob Beal, of Maple Plain, done business in Delano yesterday.

O. L. Billings visited Minneapolis on legal business last Monday.

Lije Sexton, of Buffalo, made Delano a business visit on Tuesday.

Miss Carrie Brenner of Minneapolis was visiting Delano friends on Monday.

Mrs. M. C. Staples and children, of Howard Lake, spent Sunday in Delano.

Mrs. James Hayes and daughter of Montrose, visited Delano on Monday.

Dr. J. S. Shrader, J. W. and J. C. McDonald took in the city sights on Monday.

J. W. Parsons and son Arthur and Fred Barrows made a trip to Montrose on Sunday.

Allen Jenkins and sons of Rockford were up on Saturday to attend the Delano Fair.

Father Scott, of Howard Lake, spent a portion of last week with I. H. Grafft's folks.

Mr. Bradford, of Independence watered his horses at the Delano town pump, yesterday.

Miss Elizabeth Preiss, of St. Paul, visited with her sister, Mrs. J. C. Hitz and family this week.

J. R. Gardner, that veteran Insurance man of Minneapolis, was doing business in Delano, this week.

Mrs Bushnell and her mother Mrs. Dickey, of Wayzata, were guests of Mrs. Kerrick, one day this week.

Will Eppel came down from Beardsley to attend his sister Anna's wedding which took place on Tuesday.

Rev. Guillot, of Waverly, came down on the afternoon train Tuesday for a few hours business in Delano.

Rev. G. Johnson and wife, old time residents here came up on Monday evening and visited at Wm. Lewises'.

Rev. B. E. Sherin, the new minister at Watertown, arrived here Saturday evening and on Sunday morning accompanied by Alva Catlin drove over to his new appointment.

F. F. Chancellor, John Cunningham, J. W. McDonald, C. J. Buckley, C. W. Ingerson, William Lewis, F. H. and Fred Lindsley, John Rader, wife and daughter were among those in attendance on the Republican rally at Buffalo on Saturday.

County Cullings.

The Monticello jail burned to the ground on Tuesday morning, while containing a man whose name is given as George Baker, and who it is said was manacled. His body was nearly consumed by the flames. Coroner Cassel visited the place but decided to hold no inquest. The inmate is supposed to have set the fire.

The Eagle evidently seeks to divert the attention of the GAZETTE for a time at least, from giving its readers a good, clean, readable paper, in Delano, by seeking a personal quarrel by its inuendoes concerning the last campaign. So far as these hints might be construed by some, to mean us, we will say there is no truth in them.

Some of the Republican newspapers seem to us not to give due prominence to several of Senator Davis' points in his speech at Buffalo, last Saturday, among them that tariff on coffee is a tax, no question about it. Also, that the Senator waxed quite eloquent as he indulged in a little laudation of his efforts in behalf of wheat raisers, in the U. S. Senate, where, he justly claimed, he was instrumental in getting a reduction in the tariff on binding twine, thereby saving to Minnesota farmers at least $25,000.00.

WHO SHALL JUDGE.

Who shall judge a man from manners?
Who shall know him by his dress?
Paupers may be fit for princes,
Princes fit for something else;
Crumpled shirt and dirty jacket
May beclothe the golden ore
Of the deepest thought and feeling—
Satin vests could do no more.

There are springs of crystal nectar
Ever welling out of stone;
There are purple buds and golden
Hidden, crushed and overgrown.
God, who counts by souls, not dresses,
Loves and prospers you and me,
While he values thrones the highest
But as pebbles in the sea.

Man, upraised above his fellows,
Oft forgets his fellows then;
Masters, rulers, lords, remember
That your meanest hinds are men:
Men of honor, men of feeling,
Men by thought, and men by fame,
Claiming equal right to sunshine,
In a man's ennobling name.

There are foam embroidered oceans,
There are little weed-clad rills,
There are feeble inch-high saplings,
There are cedars on the hills;
God, who counts by souls, not station,
Loves and prospers you and me,
For to Him all famed distinctions
Are as pebbles in the sea.

Toiling hands alone are builders
Of a nation's wealth and fame.
Titled laziness is pensioned,
Fed and fatened on the same.
By the sweat of other's foreheads,
Living only to rejoice;
While the poor man's outraged freedom,
Vainly lifteth up its voice.

Truth and justice are eternal,
Born with loveliness and light:
Secret wrongs shall never prosper
While there is a sunny light;
God, whose word heard voice is singing
Boundless love to you and me,
Sinks oppression with its titles,
As the pebbles in the sea,

A TARIFF on coffee is a tax unquestionably.—C. K. Davis, in his speech at Buffalo.

H. TANNER, formerly editor at Howard Lake has now become editor of the Waverly Tribune, Jordan Bros. still being publishers. This makes a strong working force and should furnish a good paper. Of course they know and are not afraid to say that "Tariff is a tax. Success gentlemen.

C. K. DAVIS is about half way right on tariff as he gave his views at Buffalo, a short time ago, when he took the credit of having saved Minnesota farmers at least $25,000. on binding twine, this harvest, by getting a reduction in the tariff, which in this instance he claimed was a tax, as binding twine is a foreign production.

ADELBERT GOHEEN suffered the penalty of the law for murder by being hung at Fergus Falls this morning soon after midnight. The crime for which he died was the killing of Rosa Bray last March. He received the right of the Catholic church in the afternoon, yesterday. Sheriff Billings pulled the lever that sent the condemned man into eternity.

THE libel suit of Ignatius Donnely vs. the St. Paul Pioneer Press for the sum of $100,000. damages for raking up an old letter and publishing it, is in progress at Minneapolis. Should the "Sage" be successful in securing that amount he would be numbered among the capitalists and the People's party would doubtless be short of one of their ablest advocates.

DULUTH, Oct. 29.—The first case of selling cigarettes to minors came up before Judge Morris to-day, when one Ramah Cole was arraigned, upon complaint of Harry Haskins, the special police officer of the humane society. The prisoner was greatly surprised to find his offense was indictable, so he withdrew his former plea of not guilty waived examination and was bound over to the grand jury on $25 bail.

ROBBING WHEAT GROWERS.

Collusion Between Railroads and Elevators.

A Hennepin county farmer left a copy of the Farm, Stock and Home at our office last week with the request that we publish the following article from its columns:

FARM, STOCK AND HOME.

I have had a little experience in shipping wheat and thought it might be well to give your readers a knowledge of it.

I noticed recently that our grain men were buying rye at a 15-cent margin, so I took the liberty to which I suppose an American citizen is entitled and raised the price of rye 5 cents a bushel. I bought a carload shipped it, and found my net gain to be over $60. I also bought a carload of wheat, raising the price 2 cents per bushel. This netted me $51.

But immediately there went up a howl from the elevator companies to the general managers of the railroads, asking to be protected from "street buyers" of grain. The managers sent back orders to one of the railroad agents not to furnish any more cars to street buyers. I then asked farmers to order cars, but they were told that their requests could not be granted if I had anything to do with loading them. One man from whom I bought eight hundred bushels had placed one load in the car was ordered to take it out, because I had been seen helping to unload it. He refused to do so, whereupon they sealed the car, but after a day or so concluded to let me finish loading it. Yesterday a farmer ordered a car and the agent told him first that he did not wish him to weigh it, then that if he saw me having anything to do with weighing it he would compel him to take out whatever he had put in, though the farmer was going to haul wheat raised on my farm, in which I had a half interest.

This is the way the Northern Pacific road does business. The Great Northern is a little shrewder. They "would furnish cars if they had them, but haven't them to spare" (?)—with four empty ones on the side track at that very moment. Yet this town has just voted a $10,000 tax to get this road to build in here to give us "competition". I could put $25,000 into the farmers' pockets on what wheat would be marketed at this point, and then make more money in sixty days than I have made in farming here for eight years; so much less than its real value is being paid for grain here.

To cap the climax, Chief Inspector Clausen goes to Duluth, raises the dockage, and makes the nicest wheat I ever saw grown inspect No. 2, when there were buyers scrambling for it at the grade that it was going at, and when there was a margin of from three to five cents on Duluth prices to ship to Buffalo. But I suppose the Pillsbury-English syndicate at Minneapolis had to be helped out in some way, as there is an export demand for wheat at Duluth that would probably stop its making ten or fifteen thousand dollars a day. Between the bears in Chicago, those whoopers-up of big crops—the Minneapolis and St. Paul papers,—Chief Inspector Clausen and the general managers of the railrords, all trying to protect the wheat stealers in the elevators along our railroad lines, it looks as though the farmers' wives and daughters would still have to wear garments made of flour sacks ornamented with the four X brand, which is not an uncommon thing in our agricultural districts.

Our railroad commissioners were here recently on other business: I spoke my grievances to them; they told me to telegraph in case I was again refused cars. I did so three days in succession, and finally got a pamphlet with a letter saying that would show me how to proceed. It says that I am to make a petition to their august body; the railroad company will then have twenty days to answer, with the right to adjourn from time to time. Meanwhile our farmers are being robbed, the crops removed, and I get no cars. I think such transactions as these are what makes the unrest in farming communities, and certainly justify their political action.

While we have a nice crop of wheat here, there are more acres in Wadena county that will not measure fifteen bushels to the acre than there are that will go over that. A heap of lying is done about this crop in the St. Paul and Minneapolis papers.

Wadena, Minn. J. M. Stowe.

Farm for Sale.

I offer my farm for Sale. One Hundred and Twenty-seven Acres, adjoining the Village of Delano. Well watered, good meadow and timber. About 70 Acres under. Good buildings and everything in good repair, With or without stock. Am growing old reason for selling.

INDEPENDENCE.

Some might ask how this town derived its name. On the 4th day of July, 1854, some explorers discovered Lake Independence and gave it the name it now has in honor of the event of that day and when the town was organized it was called Independence. Lake Independence is partly in the town of Independence and partly in Medina. In early days there was Reciprocity between the two towns. The Medinaites could come over into the waters of Independence and fish, and vice versa, and neither paid any royalty. But last winter some poor Swede cut a hole in the ice and angled for a few fish and they had him arrested and brought before the lower court of Sanhedren and fined for this grave offense. Now, this always looked niggardly mean to me to arrest a fellow because he wanted a few fish for his breakfast, but it was in direct opposition to the sporting gentlemen and water spaniel.

It seems all the Nimrods in the country have been let loose. It is shoot on Sunday and shoot on Monday. They are hunting ducks. Carlton's Lake seems to be the place of rendezvous, Wild rice grows quite plentifully in this Lake and the ducks congregate there for their annual feast and so the men and dogs. Right here would ask does the McKinley bill raise the duties on dogs? If it does not it ought by all means. Never did take much stock in a fellow with no higher aspirations than the possession of a double barrel shot gun and a long tail dog at his heels.

Wonder if William McKinley near Delano is any blood relation to Major McKinley except through Adam. As he has rented his farm and is to have an auction on the 31st we did not know but the Major had made him a Custom House officer.

The Independence A. C. church was well filled last Sunday. After services the ordinance of baptism was administered to Charles Nelson and Mrs. Frank Styner by emersion in Lake Sarah.

Arthur Vanderwaker accidentally discharged his gun one day last week, while out duck hunting making a flesh wound on himself.

Mr. Dave Cox is on the sick list.

William Budd has returned from the west. In the locality where he was says there is but little threshing done yet. It rained eight out of the ten days he was there and wheat was sprouting.

Farmers are husking corn and digging potatoes. Another crop like this and some will begin to cry over production.

Mr. Henry Case gave a dancing party at his residence, Saturday evening there were a large number present who tripped the light fantistic until late. 'Twas an enjoyable occasion.

There has been considerable talk about opening the street West of Jos. Lerch's house, known as Lorenz street. This would make a good piece of road for hauling heavy loads and would be more convenient for people to get to the depot. Jno. Burg is circulating the petition to have it opened.

Rev. S. Mon the new Catholic priest will make headquarters here. He moves from Rodger's Siding.

L. Bowen, of Lake Sarah, was in Loretto on business Monday forenoon.

School commenced in the district north of Loretto Monday with only two scholars. A large number are busy husking corn and doing other farm work.

The Soo road is offering big inducements to threshing crews to go west and aid in saving the big crops.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16, 1891.

Representatives Mills and Crisp, the two candidates for the Speakership of the House who are by general acknowledgement the leaders in the race, and one of whom will, barring unexpected developments, be given the coveted honor of presiding over the next House of Representatives while the other will lead the party on the floor. Both happened to be in town at the same time this week, and everybody was on the look out for news of their Speakership prospects, but both of the gentlemen are apparently more interested in the several State campaigns now going on than in their own. The Speakership campaign will really not begin in earnest until after the State elections, because no considerable number of Representatives will be in Washington until then.

The Italian Chamber of Commerce of New York City has for a long time, in fact ever since the passage by Congress of the meat inspection act been at work trying to convince the Italian government of the wisdom of removing the restrictions which it had, in common with other continental nations of Europe, placed upon the importation of American pork. This week M. L. Contencin, the president of the Chamber of Commerce, came to Washington to announce that the efforts had been successful, and that the Italian government would shortly repeal the restrictions. Straight away there was a concerted yell from the administration crowd about "the great diplomatic triumph achieved by the administration through Minister Porter. Diplomatic fiddlesticks. There are, strictly speaking, no diplomatic relations between Italy and this country. Italy has had no minister here since the New Orleans incident. Whatever "triumph" there is about this pork busiuess is entirely commercial and belongs to the organization of Italian merchants in New York City, and not to the administration.

Here is another instance of the administration trying to claim credit to which it is not entitled. By the inscrutable will of providence Germany's grain crop was almost a complete failure this year and ours was the largest for years. The German officials casting about for some method to cheapen American grain to German consumers, thought of removing the duty on American wheat, and it is now announced as another "great diplomatic triumph for the administration", which is to be credited to "reciprocity", the Germans allowing our wheat to come in free in return for our admitting their beet sugar free. Their beet sugar has been admitted free ever since the sugar schedule of the McKinley tariff bill went into effect.

Senator Sherman is said to have captured the vacancy on the bench of the Court of Claims for his man ex-Representative Thompson, of Ohio.

A delegation of prominent Tennesseans were here this week to ask Mr. Harrison to promote U. S. District Judge E. S. Hammond, of the West Tennessee district, to the bench of the new circuit court.

Secretary Blaine's man, Joseph H. Manley, was here this week, and it is believed that he brought a confidential verbal message to Mr. Harrison.

Mr. Harrison has succeeded in corralling Fred Douglas, who since he was kicked out of the Haytian mission has shown a disposition to use whatever influence he possesses with the negro voters of the country against Mr. Harrison. Not only has Mr. Harrison gotten a flat footed avowal of support from Douglas, but he is also supposed to have been at the bottom of the slur which Douglas made in a speech here this week upon Secretary Blaine and his management of the unfortunate Mole St. Nicholas matter. Douglas claims to have documents in his possession that would, if published show the department of State in a very different light from that from which it is now viewed. Mr. Harrison may be the warm friend of Secretary Blaine that he professes to be, but it is nevertheless a fact that Mr. Harrison's friends invariably when saying in public something nice about him add something either directly or by implication derogatory to Mr. Blaine

Representative Mills, who made nineteen speeches in Ohio, is now resting in this city preparatory to taking part in the campaign in Massachusetts, where he is under engagement to make six or eight speeches. Mr. Mills reports Governor Campbell's prospects as growing better every day. Speaking of his speeches on the free coinage of silver Mr. Mills said: "I am convinced that the best interests of the party demand that tariff reform shall be made the principle issue in the present fight, and as nothing practical can be accomplished in the way of silver legislation, during the next Congress, there is no use to agitate the subject now."

DELANO, WRIGHT COUNTY. • MINN.

IN the British parliament there are 527 members of the house of lords and 670 members of the house of commons.

IN the museum of the dead letter office at Washington, D. C., there is a piece of parchment upon which is penned a copy of the Lord's Prayer written in fifty-four different languages.

THE most powerful telescopes now in use magnify 2,000 diameters. As the moon is 240,000 miles from the earth it is thus, to all intents and purposes, brought to within 120 miles of the earth.

A BRIDGEPORT (Conn.) boy was recently treated for a cut in his foot at the Emergency hospital. After probing the depth of an inch the surgeon felt an object that was removed with difficulty. It proved to be a live snail about the size of a hazelnut.

JAMES DREDGE and Sir Henry Wood, of the royal commission to represent Great Britain at the world's fair, have prepared a report eulogizing the prospects and arrangements for the fair and urging active participation by the people of Great Britain.

DURING the year ended March 31, 1891, the inhabitants of Great Britain consumed 27,828,284 gallons of whisky. Of this amount 4,821,146 gallons were disposed of in Ireland, almost a gallon per head. In Scotland the average was even greater, amounting to one and one-half gallons per head.

THE pocket umbrella has not yet arrived, but a Florida negro was out in the rain a few days ago under a combination hat and umbrella. It was his own manufacture, made of palmetto, and was about three feet in diameter. He walked around in the Florida downpour without getting wet at all.

THE young emperor of Germany does not appear, like that other product of his country, Rhine wine, to improve with age. It is asserted that he grows more arbitrary than ever and considers himself infallible. The disillusion when it comes—as it will—is likely to be extremely painful to this young believer in monarchies.

HALF seconds are close figures in trotting a mile, and the muscles that make such a change are wonderfully trained, and move like clock-work when the regulator is changed a little to faster time. Sunol, the phenomenal California mare, lowered her record of 2:10¼ to 2:10, but she is yet short of 2:08¾, the record of Maud S.

THE Alabama oyster law test case is decided by Judge Semmes in habeas corpus proceedings. The test was made to see whether the new law forbidding the shipment of oysters in the shell out of the state at certain seasons and by rail only would stand. The judge decides that a prohibition of this character is unconstitutional, as violative of the freedom of interstate commerce.

DWIGHT L. MOODY expects to leave this country next month for the winter, although he has not decided yet whether it will be to go to Scotland and England or to India. In the latter country Dr. Pentecost would be glad to have his help. In either case Mr. Moody will throw himself vigorously into evangelistic work. He has urgent invitations from a number of places in the Old World to come and labor.

A CHINAMAN out at Victoria married "a Melican woman." But he soon wanted a divorce. In his plea he complained that she has "too muchee talkee with neighbors, too muchee paint face and eyebrows, too muchee drink Yulepean brandy, too muchee fight, too muchee snore, too muchee boss, too muchee dream, too muchee say 'killum husband' and too muchee no good." But the court held the Chinaman to his contract, possibly with the idea of making a notable example to others.

TWO MEN are now hard at work cutting the Lord's Prayer in letters an inch deep and six inches high on the face of a big rock on the Bristol (Vt.) road. They are hired by Dr. Green, of Buffalo, who pays them forty-five dollars for the job. The rock is as big as a house, and stands at a bend in the road which here takes a sharp turn and goes up a steep hill. It is about the hardest place in Vermont for a team, and in the season when teaming is liveliest there is more cussing there every day than anywhere else in Vermont.

THE following are the names of the nations which have so far accepted the invitation extended to them by the United States to participate in the World's Columbian exposition in Chicago, the number being thirty-five in all: Argentine Republic; Bolivia; Brazil; British Honduras; Costa Rica; Cuba; colony of Spain; Denmark; Dutch Guiana; Chili; China; Colombia; Ecuador; France; Germany; Great Britain; Guatemala; Hayti; Honduras; Jamaica; Japan; Mexico; Nicaragua; Peru; Porto Rico; Russia; San Domingo; Salvador; Siam; Spain; Trinidad; Turkey; Uruguay; Venezula.

A BIG crop of old maids seems imminent, judging from statistics. If the statistics of Great Britain are correct the excess of women and girls over men and boys in that country is about 900,000, an increase in ten years of about 200,000. In Germany the number of females in excess of males is about 1,000,000. In Sweden and Norway the "weaker sex" is in the majority by about 250,000; in Austro-Hungary by 600,000, and in Denmark by 60,000. In the United States, Canada and Australia the males are in the majority. In this country there are about 1,000,000 more men than women.

DR. S. E. SYLVESTER and other well-known physicians of Portland, Me., have been experimenting with chloride of gold and manganese as a cure for consumption. Solomon Cheney, a well-known resident of that city, who had been given up by his physicians as having an incurable case of pulmonary tuberculosis, has been undergoing the new treatment for six weeks, and the physicians concur in the announcement that Mr. Cheney has since been steadily improving in health and strength and that he is in a fair way to be about his business again within a very short time.

TEMPERANCE WORKERS.

Woman Advocates of Cold Water from All Countries Soon to Meet in Boston.

BOSTON, Oct. 20.—The interest of temperance women of the United States and of the world is being centered about the coming world's and national conventions of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, which will be held in Boston November 10 to 18—the world's convention meeting the 10th and 11th and the national convention holding forth from the 12th to the 18th. This will be the first world's convention of the W. C. T. U. that ever convened and the eighteenth national convention. Five hundred delegates are expected from the United States alone, besides a large number from Canada and abroad. The conventions will meet in Tremont temple; the committee meetings will be held in Park Street Congregational church on Boston Common and at the Massachusetts state headquarters of the W. C. T. U. on Tremont street.

The address of the opening morning will be made by Miss Frances E. Willard, president of the world's and national W. C. T. U. She will make a survey of the world as to the present traffic in and use of brain poisons, the great deteriorators of the human race, treating principally alcohol, opium and tobacco, against all of which the faces of the white ribboners are set as a flint. The address of welcome will be given the evening of November 13 by Mrs. Mary A. Livermore in Tremont temple. The governor of Massachusetts and the mayor of Boston will deliver addresses of welcome also, and Bishop Phillips Brooks expects to make a speech in assisting the welcoming of the guests. The response for the union will be made by Mrs. Mary Clement Leavitt.

Lady Henry Somerset, president of the British Woman's Christian Temperance union, will be one of the most notable women to come before the convention. Lady Henry comes to America with Mrs. Hannah Whitall Smith, who will also address the convention. Prof. Rena A. Michaels will address the convention on the "Woman's Ballot," and Alice Fremont Palmer will also deliver an address. Prof. Anna E. Morgan will speak on "The White Lady." Mrs. Mollie McGee Snell, of Mississippi, will have for her subject: "What the White Ribbon Has Done for Mississippi Women." Mrs. Frances Griffin, of Alabama, will also speak. Dr. Kate Mitchell, of London, has for her subject "The Scientific Side of Temperance." Mrs. May Wright Sewall will write a presentation of the National Council of Women to be read before the convention. Mrs. Zerelda Wallace will also deliver an address. Matilda B. Carse will be on hand with a model of the Woman's temple, of Chicago. Mrs. Mary T. Lathrop will speak to the assembled delegates.

THE HUMAN FAMILY.

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—An announcement of interest to statisticians of the world comes from the little city of Gotha in Germany. It is to the effect that the famous publishing house of Justus Perthes, widely known for its "Almanach de Gotha," and its numerous geographical publications, has this year resumed the publication of the "Bevoelkerung der Erde." The new eighth edition is a large octavo of 279 pages, carefully arranged. The present population of the world, according to the edition of this work just published, is 1,479,729,409. These figures would indicate an increase with the rate of 5,750,000 a year since 1882, according to Dr. Behm's estimate in that year.

According to this work the area of Asia, the largest of the great divisions of the earth's surface, is 17,530,686 square miles, and its population is 825,954,000, or forty-seven inhabitants to the square mile. These figures do not include the Arctic islands. The second grand division in area is America, including both the northern and southern continents, but not including the Arctic regions. Its area is 14,801,402 and its population 121,713,000, or only eight to the square mile. Third in area is Africa, with 11,277,364 square miles and 193,953,000 inhabitants, or fourteen to the square mile, none of these figures including Madagascar or other islands. The area of Europe is put at 3,756,860 square miles and its population at 357,379,000, or ninety-four to the square mile, these figures not including Iceland or Nova Zembla. Next comes Australia, including Tasmania, with 2,991,442 square miles and 3,230,000 population, or only about one to the square mile.

Under the head of polar regions are included 1,730,810 square miles, with 80,400 inhabitants. Finally, the islands of the oceans are grouped together, with 733,120 square miles of area and 7,420,000 inhabitants, or about ten to the square mile.

In the figures for America the results of the census in 1890 in the United States are given. There are eight Americans to the square mile. Some corrections of areas of various South American states appear.

The most densely populated country of Europe is Belgium, with 530 persons to the square mile. England comes next with 480, though the United Kingdom as a whole has only 312. Holland has 365. The most sparsely populated countries are Norway and Finland, where there are only sixteen people to the square mile.

DEATH CAUSED BY FRIGHT.

It Was Not Hanging by the Omaha Mob That Killed Their Victim.

OMAHA, Neb., Oct. 20.—George Smith, or Coe, the colored fiend who is generally supposed to have been strangled to death by a mob, died from fright. Dr. Allison made the post-mortem examination of Smith's body, and, while there were sixteen wounds and bruises on the head and his back was broken in three places, the doctor testified that the contracted condition of the heart and the appearances indicated that death resulted from some great mental emotion, and he was satisfied that Smith died of fright.

For a Week of Prayer.

WASHINGTON, Oct 20.—In the Ecumenical Methodist council a committee made a report upon the subject of a week of prayer, recommending that the week beginning November 15 next, be set aside for that purpose. The report was adopted. A report made by Rev. Dr. Morley shows that since the London ecumenical council met there had been an increase of 30 per cent in Methodist believers. The report says that the totals in all branches of the church shows grand totals as follows: Ministers, 42,695; members, 6,494,399; adherents, 20,281,296.

AT THE STORM'S MERCY.

Great Damage to Property in England and Ireland by Fierce Gales, Swollen Rivers and High Tides—Loss of Life at Sea.

LONDON, Oct. 20.—The storms which were everywhere renewed Monday have caused immense damage. The continuous rains had filled all the rivers to the brim, and Monday's additional deluge caused freshets and inundations in all directions. The Trent burst its banks in many places and sluices were carried away, causing crops and cattle to be destroyed. The damage, however, is greater in Ireland than England. The Shannon is on a rampage, thousands of acres of land along its banks being submerged with disastrous effects to the farmers. The flood partially destroyed the Fergus Reclamation works at Ennis, which were built by the government at a cost of £130,000. The coasts are strewn with wrecks, chiefly coasting craft, and many have been lost.

There were pitiful scenes during the gale off St. Catherine's Point, Isle of Wight. The French brig Juene Benoni weathered the point in the fiercest of the gale, but the captain being unfamiliar with the locality, was driven into the dangerous channel locally known as Rooken Race, where numerous wrecks occur yearly and which is avoided by all navigators knowing the peculiarities of the coast. When he realized his danger he luffed up into the wind instead of keeping away before the seas. The brig at once became helpless, and the terrific seas swept her decks with such fury as to wash overboard the captain and five seamen. The boat was washed overboard at the same time and two of the men managed to reach it and keep afloat by its aid a moment, but were quickly forced to release their hold and were drowned as the other three seamen and the captain had been, within 300 yards of the lighthouse and in full sight of the coast guard, the local fishermen and a number of visitors from Ventnor, who could plainly hear the cries of the perishing men. Help from shore was impossible.

In the Irish channel shipping also had a severe experience. The big steamer Connaught, carrying the American mails, arrived at Kingstown five hours late, having had a rough passage. Its paddles were smashed, repaired and smashed again, and it seemed as if it would not live through the hurricane. The passengers, terribly frightened, were kept below by battening down the hatches. The steamer looked like a wreck when it came into Kingstown.

DUBLIN, Oct. 20. — The hurricane which has prevailed on the west coast of Ireland for several days past is pronounced to be the worst storm known in that part of the country in twenty years. The river Shannon has overflowed its banks and has submerged large quantities of land in its vicinity, drowning a considerable number of cattle and sheep and destroying several houses and many barns and other such buildings.

The gale has been raging with unusual fierceness about Queenstown and its vicinity. About thirty crafts large and small, mostly fishing smacks and small coasters, have been driven ashore in that vicinity.

At Youghal the sea has been so heavy and the water has been driven so far up by the wind that many parts of the town are flooded by the seas which have swept into the streets.

Many sheep and cattle have been drowned along the course of the Blackwater river. Dispatches from Holyhead state that 200 vessels, many of them much damaged, have sought refuge at that port from the storm.

The gravest apprehensions are felt by the inhabitants of Sandgate, a small town on the English channel situated about 2 miles from Folkstone, in Kent. The storms have caused a most abnormal high tide there and this, combined with the hurricane which is blowing there, is destroying the sea walls. Many houses situated near the shore have already been washed over by the angry waters, and the high road leading to Hythe and Folkestone is submerged and destroyed in many places.

The River Thames at Windsor, Eaton and other places is overflowing its banks into many houses. Similar reports are reaching this city from many other parts of England, Ireland and Scotland.

At Maryport, Cumberland, on the Irish sea, a thriving shipbuilding place, though the harbor dries at low water at some places about the town, the water is now 4 feet deep and is causing an enormous amount of damage, particularly at the stores and warehouses unlucky enough to be inundated.

The river Shannon has burst its banks in county Limerick, inundating large tracts of land. The Reclamation works near Ennis, in County Clare, which recently cost the government $600,000, have been nearly ruined. Many villages in the Trent valley are submerged. The rivers Usk, Ebbew, Runney and Otway have overflowed their banks. Many thousand acres of land are covered with water and the roads are impassable.

A large number of buildings weakened by the floods have collapsed. The loss of live stock is very great. The Parrot river has overflowed its banks. Between Bridgewater and Langport the country is for many miles like a sea. Hundreds of cattle have been drowned and many houses are submerged.

CRUSHED BY A LOCOMOTIVE.

Two Persons Killed and Three Fatally Injured in a Wreck Near Wichita, Kan.

WICHITA, Kan., Oct. 20.—The wreck of a locomotive on the Santa Fe early Monday evening about 6 miles south of this place resulted in the killing of two men and fatally injuring three more. The victims were all returning from a wreck further down the road when the engine on which they were jumped the rails and toppled down an embankment, burying the five men beneath it. The dead are Frank Maltby, yardmaster, and John Wade, fireman.

FATE OF THE ANARCHISTS.

Fielden and Schwab's Case to Be Heard Before the Holidays.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—Probably the fate of the anarchists Fielden and Schwab will be settled by the holidays. The supreme court has advanced their cases for hearing the first week in December. They are to come immediately after the New York election cases, which are set for the first Monday in December. Gen. B. F. Butler and Moses Solomon will make the arguments for Fielden and Schwab, and the state of Illinois will be represented by Attorney General Hunt.

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS

Students Quit Macalester College.

A most remarkable occurrence took place at Macalester college in St. Paul when the whole senior class deserted the institution. They did it, too, on the advice of the board of trustees, who passed a resolution instructing the faculty to encourage the departure. What was at the bottom of the affair—finances or bad feeling—was not known. The class left for Lake Forest Ill., to enter the college there. The junior, sophomore and freshman classes will remain at Macalester, but there will be no commencement next June.

Death and Mystery.

The remains of a man were found by a rabbit-hunter in Dixson's woods at Central Point, where they had evidently lain for more than a year. Nothing was left but the skeleton and half-rotted clothing. In one of the coat pockets there was a box of blacking and brush, but nothing that would serve to identify the remains. The man was about 5 feet 9 inches in height and his full sets of teeth were but little worn, indicating that he was young. A little tuft of brown hair was all that was left on the skull. The clothing had been of good quality.

Surveyor Lewis Is Safe.

County Surveyor E. R. Lewis, who was supposed to have been lost in the tornado in the upper woods, returned safe to Grand Rapids. He was only partially in the storm, having been on the north edge of it, but crossed its entire track on his return. From his statement the townships devastated cover about 400 square miles. In this area Surveyor Lewis estimates that over 25 per cent. of all the pine timber is down.

Tragedy at a Wedding.

There was an Austrian wedding at Soudan and during the dance that followed all of the participants got more or less drunk, when a man named Anderson attempted to run the house to suit himself. The Austrians objected and one of them took a double-bitted ax and struck the Swede over the left ear, nearly taking the top of his head off, death resulting almost instantly.

Settling Russian Jews.

Fifty families of the exiled Russian Jews will shortly be established in homes at Mille Lacs on the Great Northern railroad. President James L. Hill, of the road, has just had completed fifty houses of a neat and comfortable appearance, which, on behalf of the company, he has presented to the committee in St. Paul having charge of the Baron Hirsch fund.

The News Briefly Chronicled.

The Minnesota state bank of Minneapolis filed articles of incorporation The capital stock is to be $5,000.

Gus Schelke, of Farmington, was crushed to death while sinking a big bowlder in a plowed field.

Fred Engfer, a laborer in the St. Paul Barrel Company's shop, was killed while attempting to get out of the way of a cattle train on another track.

A wild black bear weighing 200 pounds was killed in the streets of Duluth. Hunger attracted the animal from the north woods.

Fred Mathias, August Templeman, John Stolp and Peter Kaul each paid a fine of $20 for selling milk in Rochester adulterated with water.

Charles Church, of Northfield, will sue the Milwaukee road for $15,000 for injuries sustained in an accident nearly a year ago.

It was said that hundreds of millions of feet of timber were leveled by the recent hurricane in Itasca and Beltrami counties.

A Minneapolis man received a decree of divorce the other morning and took dinner with a new wife the same day.

Ten dining-room girls in the Berkeley hotel at Minneapolis struck because they didn't like the head waiter.

Several cars of wheat and flour were destroyed in a wreck between Dover and St. Charles, but no one was injured.

The State Eight Hour league held a meeting in Minneapolis and decided that a movement should be started for an eight hour day at once.

While at work in a Rochester quarry George Annis was accidentally struck on the head by a heavy crowbar and perhaps fatally injured.

The current expense of the Fergus Falls hospital for the insane for September was $2,768.29; extra expense, $163.90, improvements, $3,102.

Theodore Stoltenberg, ex-county register of deeds of Yellow Medicine county, died very suddenly in Granite Falls of heart failure.

Charles Zeene, an employe on a threshing machine at Brown's Valley, had his right arm taken off by the cog-wheel on the engine.

Robert Martin, Tom Burke and one Evans made a brutal attack on John Haller, proprietor of the Haller house at Duluth, because he attempted to put them out of his saloon.

Minneapolis mills made 194,875 barrels of flour during the week ended on the 16th, breaking all previous records.

Eleven machinists were injured, John Clancy, James Dickson and John May probably fatally, by the explosion of a locomotive boiler in a machine shop at South Park, near St. Paul.

Isaac V. D. Heard, an attorney of St. Paul, assigned, with liabilities of $100,000 and assets less than half that amount.

W. E. Wilson, a traveling man from Chicago, died at the Howard house in Litchfield. He had been sick about a week.

Robert Burkle, car seal inspector at Little Falls, was killed by a switch collision. He was about 16 years of age.

Mrs. L. A. Cutts died at Northfield, aged 76. She was one of Northfield's oldest inhabitants, and had resided in Minnesota nearly forty years. She leaves a husband and daughter.

Miss Bertha G. Harris, second assistant principal of the Faribault high school, has been offered a position in a school in Spain which she would probably accept.

Prof. Harris, a prominent citizen and musical professor in Rochester for many years, died in Augusta, Ga., where he went about a year ago, of typhoid fever. He was 46 years of age.

Edward Nilson, a farmer living in the eastern part of Norman county who was by the county doctor pronounced to have leprosy, was found to be only suffering from rheumatism, of which disease he died.

CHIPPY AND ADDER.

Details of a Meeting of an American Sparrow and a Poisonous Snake.

Down in South Jamesburg, N. J., there is a long winding, sandy road that leads from the main thoroughfare up to and past the State Reform school for incorrigible boys. About a mile from the school the road is cut through a hill and has sloping banks on both sides.

The natives of Jamesburg know that portion of the road to be infested by snakes of many varieties, but the ones they fear most are copperheads, blacksnakes, and adders. Bushes on both sides of the slope and a small brook near by, skirted by a growth of rank weeds and underbrush, make the spot an ideal abode of snakes.

A reporter had occasion to visit the Jamesburg reform school a short time ago and walked up the winding road, not knowing that it had an established local reputation for snakes. When quite near the brook his attention was attracted to a peculiar noise in a bush. Looking toward it he saw a small field chippy, with its bill extended, and uttering the strange sound. The bird was perched on a top branch, and its wings were moving, as if trying to fly, but it was apparently unable to do so. The reporter saw, on investigating, that a large snake was stretched out under the bush, with its head erect, and small bead-like eyes cast full upon the frightened bird. He stopped to pick up a stone, and the motion caused the snake to crawl away in the high weeds. The bird ceased fluttering for a moment, and the reporter retreated across the road to watch proceedings from a distance.

The bird seemed to recover its self possession and began hopping about among the branches. When it had reached one of the lower branches it suddenly stopped, began uttering the peculiar sound as before, and then hopped to the ground. It was evident that the snake had returned, and the bird, which evidently saw it also, made the effort to escape before the serpent had again woven the spell round it. As soon as the snake saw the bird alight on the ground, it coiled itself up in a small knot and sprang at the bird. The calculation failed and the bird, with wings extended, hopped along the bare road, holding its head erect, and with bill opened wide, continued to make the screeching noise, louder and more plaintively than before. The snake crawled after its intended victim, which was too badly frightened to increase its speed, and too much overcome with fatigue to use its wings. The reporter tried to kill the snake. When the bird saw him raise his hand it turned sharply away and ran up the sand bank and was lost from sight in the field. The snake continued its chase until he threw the stone, which fell wide of its mark. Then, when almost half-way up the incline, it stopped, opened wide its mouth, and began pointing its forked tongue at him. The reporter returned within a few feet of it, when it lowered its head and flattened out until several inches of its body looked like a dark mottled ribbon. Before it could spring the reporter cut the creature in two. It measured over three feet.

The assistant superintendent said the snake was of the poisonous flat-headed adder species, much feared in that locality. These snakes, as well as copperheads, have been unusually numerous thereabout this season, and persons who venture in the woods and lowlands always go prepared to encounter them.—N. Y. Sun.

All over—your sufferings from Catarrh. That is, if you go about it in the right way.

There are plenty of wrong ways, that perhaps you've found out. They may relieve for a time, but they don't cure.

Worse yet, they may drive the disease to the lungs. You can't afford to experiment.

But there is a right way, and a sure way, that does cure. Thousands of otherwise hopeless cases have proved it. It's with Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. By its mild, soothing, cleansing and healing properties, it permanently cures the worst chronic cases. Catarrhal Headache, "Cold in the Head"—everything catarrhal in its nature, is cured as if by magic.

It's a way so sure that the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Remedy offer, in good faith, $500 for a case of Catarrh which they cannot cure.

If it's sure enough for them to make the offer, it's sure enough for you to make the trial.

They risk $500. What do you risk?

WHEN DAYLIGHT FADES.

When daylight fades
A silence broodeth over all the land,
The waves creep slowly up the glistening sand,
The roistering wind grows strangely still,
More sweetly sounds the music of the rill,
When daylight fades.

When daylight fades
Long shadows gather on the pine crowned hills,
The mossy wheel turns slowly at the mill,
The downy chickens seek their mother's wing,
The cricket in the long lush grasses sing,
When daylight fades.

When daylight fades
The whip-poor-will pipes forth his lonely call,
The dewdrops glisten on the old stone wall,
And sunset skies turn dim and faintly gray,
While fire flies flash their lamps across the way,
When daylight fades.

When daylight fades
The flowers drooping, nestle in their beds,
And babies, nodding curly, drowsy heads,
Are pillowed on their loving mother's breast,
All living things are touched to tender rest,
When daylight fades.

When daylight fades
Into death's dreamless lethe dipped starless night,
What fields elysian touched with unknown light,
What sun kissed arching azure summer skies,
What flower-gemmed world will greet our waking eyes,
When daylight fades.

How Commuters Catch a Train.

MISS PRUDENCE PRY, while taking a rather early morning walk through a street lined with rural homes in a village adjacent to the big city of New York, the other day, was struck by a number of singular occurrences.

As I passed along, happening to be going in the direction of the railroad station, I noticed that the front doors of most of the houses suddenly burst open and that a man in a state of excitement bounced forth from each, and immediately started on a run down the street toward the railroad.

Some of them had their mouths full of food—apparently a part of their breakfasts—which they were painfully trying to swallow; others carried coats which they struggled to get into while they were running; nearly all buttoned their vests while leaping down the front steps, and several had neckties and collars in their hands instead of around their throats.

Many of these frenzied and wild-eyed individuals were followed to the front gates by women rushing after them and frantically calling on their husbands, as I supposed, to stop. Some of these women had letters in their hands which were snatched and madly pocketed by those of the men who were stayed by their fair pursuers; others, after catching their man, quickly gave him a kiss, the smack of which seemed to me to be louder than necessary; and not a few shouted the names of articles used in the kitchen and sewing room with the injunction added that they must not be forgotten.

Some of the men never stopped at all, but contented themselves by only turning, for an instant, in their flight—just long enough to wave their hands to the "girls they left behind them" and get back a kiss thrown from the ladies' fingers or a salute from handkerchief or napkin. In most cases I think it was the napkin.

I walked a little quicker to keep up with the bursting doors and out-bounding men, while stretched out before me on the street was the string of red-faced and puffing racers all running as if to a fire and ever increasing in number.

Before I knew it I found myself skipping along also at a lively gait, for my woman's curiosity was aroused and I wanted to understand why these otherwise dignified gentlemen were in such a frenzy and where they were rushing to.

The whistle of an approaching train of cars caused the men to become more wild and excited and to increase their speed so I found it difficult to follow.

All at once I saw close at hand the railroad station with a train slowly beginning to move away toward New York. Then came the last mad scramble of the men up to the station steps and onto the platforms of the moving cars.

Those who got aboard at the risk of their lives I saw fall exhausted in the seats and commence to vigorously fan themselves with their hats or papers and to mop their crimson and perspiring faces with their handkerchiefs. Those who were left, looking madder than hornets, immediately pulled out their watches and studied the hands apparently amazed.

Without an exception each charged the train with starting ahead of time and vowed vengeance.

In a few minutes, however, they cooled off, bought a paper, took a seat inside, looked at the news and mopped their faces as demurely as could be.

As for me, now understanding fully the cause of the insane proceedings which had puzzled me at first, I just laughed in spite of my efforts to look solemn.

Luckily none of the sheepish looking commuters saw my unsympathetic levity or if they did they were ashamed to notice it.

On talking afterward about the affair with friends who lived on that and other streets and in other country towns I was surprised to learn that this mad racing and chasing occurred every day.

I was also informed that in winter, after a fresh snow fall, these ridiculous scenes were intensified and much more amusing owing to the frequent tumbles in the soft slush and frantic struggles to get through the drifts after the locomotive's whistle was heard.

As I have remarked, I am a maiden lady, and consequently was naturally surprised at the remarkable and strange way that men have in catching trains.

I knew very well that when a woman travels she plans everything ahead, and, giving herself plenty of time, marches in a dignified, leisurely and respectable manner to the station. Her only fault, if it be one, is to reach that place a good half hour before the train arrives.

I will confess, however, that on her home trip from the city she is not so successful, for she can never tell when her shopping will be through and therefore makes it a matter of chance as to what train she will catch to return on.

Still, her actions going to trains are consistent with her higher appreciation of order and good management. The only time she attracts attention by an undue excitement and speed on the street is when she happens to be with her always belated husband and then she is certainly not to blame.

She has no choice then but to be a "running mate" following as best she can the man who, not being handicapped with skirts, keeps many feet in advance and only turns to yell: "Hurry up" and other mean and provoking things.

I'd like to see myself running after a man, though, in that fashion.

After witnessing the street race to the train, I had an opportunity to study the home part of it by spending awhile with my married sister.

All the family except the husband were seated comfortably at the breakfast table at seven o'clock precisely, for that was the hour insisted upon by the head of the house. This gave half an hour to enjoy the bountiful and carefully prepared meal, and fifteen minutes to walk calmly to the railroad station. But John, the train catcher was not at his place. The servant rang the breakfast bell twice after we had commenced (as we had to by "John's" explicit orders and regulations) and my sister thrice left the table and called upstairs that it was late. Finally one of the children was sent to see if papa was awake and to mention the time and came back reporting that papa was just getting out of bed.

Then commenced in the room above a commotion that startled me, though none of the others paid attention to it.

Bare feet I heard running across the floor first to one place then to another—then a man's voice shot through the hall wanting to know where his clean shirt was and his collar and his necktie and the Lord knows what else.

Then slams and bangs of doors and sounds of drawers being opened and shut mingled with angry ejaculations and more rushing about.

Then the cyclone sounded nearer and into the dining-room popped Mr. John fastening his necktie on his unbuttoned collar and trying to pull his cuffs over his wrists.

He glanced at the clock and—"Why didn't you call me before? Don't you know it's after train time," etc., etc., he savagely asked.

Without waiting for a reply and neither expecting any, he jumped to the table and half sat on his chair. "Give me my coffee quick! Where's the biscuit? Pass me something—only got five minutes," he spluttered and then began ramming things in his overloaded mouth, bolting them till he choked, and finished by scalding himself well with the hot coffee—which pleased me immensely.

His breakfast (?) took four minutes by the clock.

Then up he jumped with: "Where's my hat?—who took my coat? Find my umbrella." When they were handed to him by different members of the upset family out he bounded—as if fired from a cannon—never saying "good-by," and off he rushed to join the rest of the train chasers.

It was an hour before the household was restored to peace and quietness again.

I'm glad I am not married. I would soon be made crazy by such goings on. I think a man ought to have more sense than to make himself and his family dyspeptic and nervous just by being too lazy to get up in proper time. —H. C. Dodge, in Goodall's Sun.

She translates but part of a work, a page or a chapter here and there, with critical comment on what she considers untranslatable, under which characterization comes so much of the American slang used in our fiction. Countess Dillon, better known as "Marian Darcy," has also done much toward making many of our writers known in France, her first great success being the translation of Katharine Green's "Leavenworth Case."

AGRICULTURAL HINTS.

LEAF BLIGHT FUNGUS.

A Parasitic Growth Which Destroys Thousands of Strawberry Plants.

As to conditions which affect blight in the strawberry, the Kentucky state college of agriculture, by the director of experiments in the published bulletin, goes into the subject in its minutia, of which the following is a synopsis:

Young plants are not liable to blight until their leaves are nearly grown, and new beds, commonly, show but few of the spots until toward fall. An exception to this rule was noticed this year which is worth recording. Some rows of young plants were put out alongside old, badly blighted ones. In the fore part of August it was observed that the young plants next the old ones were becoming badly spotted, the first row being especially affected, while the plants farthest away were but little injured. The explanation of this difference is to be found in the fact that the blight fungus is propagated during the summer by means of microscopic spores, which of course, fell in greatest numbers upon the young plants nearest the blight-infested ones. The lesson to be drawn from the fact is too plain to need pointing out. If it were possible, indeed, to isolate beds of young plants so as to prevent the access to the leaves of all spores, plants might be kept free from blight indefinitely.

All through the summer the blight is propagated by these long spores. Toward fall the threads which have been mentioned as forming the growing part of the parasite within the substance of the strawberry leaf, form solid, tissue-like masses in the dead part of spots, and finally these appear at the surface as small black dots. The function of these little nodules appears to be to preserve the parasite conditions of weather unfavorable to active growth and multiplication. They are in the old leaves all winter, and send out in spring threads bearing spores similar to the long, jointed summer spores.

The cut will show the peculiar character of this fungus.

RATIONS FOR PIGS.

Relative Amounts of Fat and Lean Unchanged by Ordinary Foods.

Bulletin 10 of the Virginia experiment station gives the details of experiments with 3 different rations fed to pigs to determine their relative economy and the comparative amount of fat and lean produced by each. The first ration was corn meal alone, in which the percentage of nitrogen was quite small; the second consisted of 10 parts corn meal, 4 parts bran, and 1 part beef scrap, and the third of 5 parts corn meal, 2 parts bran and 2 parts beef scrap, which had a large percentage of nitrogen. At the beginning of the experiment the 3 groups of pigs (3 in each group) weighed about the same amount, but it soon became evident the third group which ate most nitrogenous food, was not gaining as rapidly as the others, and after about 2 months all three of this group died. An examination showed that they perished from lack of power to assimilate food. The other groups were slaughtered after 13 weeks' feeding, but no difference in the relative amounts of fat and lean could be discovered. The group fed corn meal alone had gained 1 pound live weight for 14.79 pounds of dry substance in food eaten, at a cost of 5.3 cents per pound gained. The group fed 10 parts corn meal, 4 parts bran, and 1 part beef scraps gained 1 pound live weight for 12.94 pounds dry substance in food eaten, at a cost of 4.8 cents per pound gained. To summarize it appears: 1. That a very narrow ration is not fed with economy, and may even cause death through lack of power to assimilate food in so concentrated a form. 2. That not the slightest difference is made in the proportions of fat and lean meat in hogs fed corn meal alone and corn meal, beef scrap and bran. 3. That the cost per pound increase of live stock weight was one-half of 1 cent per pound in favor of the bran-fed lot.

THE SIZE OF SILOS.

Too Long Exposure the Cause of a Great Deal of Loss.

H. B. Gurler, in a recent issue of Hoard's Dairyman, said: Judging from some pointers picked up in conversation with feeders of ensilage, there are some making the mistake of exposing too much surface for the number of cattle fed. I know of some cases where trouble with milk from ensilage feed was traced to moldy and decayed ensilage, caused by too long exposure. Unsound feed of any kind will make milk of the same kind. I have traced off-flavored milk to rotten hay from bottom of stack or mow.

It has occurred to me that we might have a rule to apply to size of compartments in silos. Let it be a certain number of square feet per animal.

Probably a majority of farmers feed some kind of dry coarse feed besides ensilage and do not feed more than one cubic foot per animal per day, and if we remove two inches per day from the exposed surface as advised in the Wisconsin bulletin, we are using one-sixth of a foot in depth daily or one foot in depth in six days. By this rule we could have exposed six square feet per animal to be fed. For twenty cows a silo or compartment ten by twenty would be the proper size. This I believe to be a safe rule.

In cold weather the surface exposed per animal can be increased, but for fall and spring weather, I believe six feet per animal is plenty near enough the danger line.

I have been thinking for some time to give my ideas on this question and hope it is not too late to discuss the matter before we commence filling our silos.

J. M. SMITH tells the Rural New Yorker that he uses a silo for preserving the waste leaves trimmed from cabbage plants and other garden wastes. For the last two years he has put his small carrots into the silo without topping and finds that they keep nicely.

THE DAIRY.

—A dry, hot nose and a tight, hard skin are about the worst thing a dairy cow can carry around with her.

—If you have a cow that has an insatiable appetite and yet makes no response to what it eats, do not throw away good valuable food into such a bottomless pit any longer.—Western Rural.

—A large percentage of pure milk is spoiled when first drawn from the udder by being allowed to stand for a moment in filthy stables, or strained into cans standing close to cow or horse stables, pig pens, sink holes and cesspools, as it at once takes on the odor of the atmosphere surrounding it. Gassy curds, inferior cheese and rancid butter will always be found to result from filthy stables and improper care of the milk after it is drawn from the udder.—American Dairyman.

—The quantity of milk produced by a cow and the quality of the milk are influenced directly by the individuality, and indirectly by the breed, of the animal. Each breed is only a group of individuals of the same kind. The breeds differ from each other by certain characteristics which are preserved so long as conditions are not sufficiently strong to change them. To the distinct characteristics belong the disposition to produce a large quantity of milk, or milk possessing a specific peculiarity such as high content of butter fat and casein.—Farm, Field and Stockman.

—A writer on the dairy interest lays down what Mrs. Partington might call the "self-evident axiom" that we must have good cows to make dairying pay. There is no use, he says, in dairying with poor cows, and wonders why it is that dairymen are so unconcerned about the quality of their herds. There is plenty of room for reform, and now is a good time to begin, for the poor cows can readily be sold at a good price for beef, and be replaced for better ones, of which so large a number will not be required.—Prairie Farmer.

—The dairymen of Paris, France, to keep milk from souring in warm weather, are in the habit of employing a little sub-carbonate of soda as a preventive. This, by combining with and neutralizing the acetic acid formed, has the desired effect and keeps the milk from turning sour as soon as it otherwise would. The salt that is thus formed (i. e., the acetate of soda) is not at all injurious. And as pure milk already contains a small quantity of this salt, it would be difficult to pronounce upon the addition of any alkali, except there should be some in a free and uncombined state, which does not exist in the milk. The addition of a very small quantity of the potash will arrest the formation of the curd and delay the milk's turning.—Detroit Free Press.

REGULARITY IN MILKING.

A Valuable Suggestion for Easy-Going Dairymen.

Regularity is a great thing in the dairy, in fact it may be classed as a positive essential of success. Nature in all of her workings is automatically regular, and she seldom fails in her calculations. You may not believe it, but it is nevertheless a fact, that regularity in milking, with cows on average rations, will cause them to produce a better flow than if they had heavy feed and were milked irregularly. It takes no longer to milk at one time than at another, and if you save feed and gain milk by doing this important chore on the tick of the clock, it certainly pays. It is a gross irregularity for a milker to jump up and fire a stool at an inoffensive boss because she innocently slaps his face with her tail. Such a savage attack will make a gentle cow ugly, and injure her usefulness as a milker. Docile cows are generally valuable ones, and docility is fostered by urbane human treatment. Some of the most profitable milch animals that we ever saw were so gentle that they would turn and lick the men who were milking them, not being stanchioned. Quiet, rest and peace pervaded the atmosphere surrounding these creatures, and from their human keepers they received nothing but the gentlest treatment. As a cheese-maker we have had ample opportunity to notice the worth of regular milking by dairymen, and to compare it with the erratic methods of their brother farmers. Almost invariably it works thus: Mr. A., the man of method, milks, say at six o'clock in the morning and at six in the evening; his daily mess of milk does not vary in weight at the factory only through the tendency of the season or the state of the feed.

On the other hand, Mr. B., who does his work according to convenience, often finds it necessary to milk his cows at 5 o'clock a. m., and if he is rushed with work to delay the operation again till 7 or 8 p. m. His night's milking will show up wonderfully large, and his morning's milking correspondingly small, and when he gets around to comparatively regular milking again the next day, the aggregate yield will be slightly reduced. We have stood at the scales where we could test these matters and know whereof we speak. The lover of careless work may say: "Well, if it only slightly reduced the aggregate yield the accommodation gained by letting the milking go, balanced the loss in yield." The fact is, however, the reduction is apt to stay right there unless extra feeding is done, and when the dairyman gets careless and irregular again about this chore, another permanent "reduction" takes place.

We also know another thing about the quality of milk drawn from the udder at irregular periods. To allow milk to stand in a cow's udder several hours longer than the normal time, does the fluid an irreparable injury; lessens its keeping quality, and in many cases renders it positively unwholesome for human food. Thus, while you convenience yourself for the moment by "letting the milking go," you lose tenfold more than you have gained both in yield and quality. Easy-going dairymen please think on these things and investigate for yourselves. —Geo. E. Newell, in Prairie Farmer.

The Milk Tester.

When the use of the milk tester becomes more general, dairymen will be forced to recognize more fully the vast difference in cows, not only in the quantity of the milk that they give but in the availability of their milk for butter-making. In the record kept of their herd for one year, by a firm of noted breeders, the amount of milk required to make one pound of butter ranged from 12.27 pounds to 24.98 pounds. The possibility of maintaining a high rate of production in a large herd is shown by the same record; 159 cows gave during the year from 10,000 to 20,000 pounds of milk each. Even the smallest of these yields was sufficient to insure a profitable dairy cow.—Western Rural.

—Remember, my son, that the owl's reputation for wisdom is not due to his staying out all night. It is rather due to the fact that he has too much sense to stay up all night and day, too.—Indianapolis Journal.

—It is said of more than half the men that they resemble Napoleon; it is said of more than half the women that they have Madonna-like faces. Still, there was only one Napoleon, and only one Madonna.—Atchison Globe.

—Old Fogy (reading paper)—It says they weighed anchor; but, confound them, they don't say how much it weighed. What I want is facts, but these newspapers never tell what a man wants to know.—Boston Transcript.

—A good Quaker, eighty-five years of age, whom no one had ever heard speak a cross word, was asked by a young man how he had been able, through the trials and perplexities of a long life, to keep always so pleasant. He replied: "If thee never allows thy voice to rise, thee won't be likely to get very angry."

—"Yaas," he said, as he removed his cane-knob from his mouth "he said some very cruel things about me, you know, and next time I see him I intend to give him a piece of my mind." "I wouldn't if I were you," she said. "Why not?" "I would give him the whole of it or nothing. Even then he will perhaps fail to see it."

The Only One Ever Printed—Can You Find the Word?

There is a 3 inch display advertisement in this paper, this week, which has no two words alike except one word. The same is true of each new one appearing each week, from The Dr. Harter Medicine Co. This house places a "Crescent" on everything they make and publish. Look for it, send them the name of the word and they will return you book, beautiful lithographs or samples free.

"German Syrup"

A Throat and Lung Specialty.

Those who have not used Boschee's German Syrup for some severe and chronic trouble of the Throat and Lungs can hardly appreciate what a truly wonderful medicine it is. The delicious sensations of healing, easing, clearing, strength-gathering and recovering are unknown joys. For German Syrup we do not ask easy cases. Sugar and water may smooth a throat or stop a tickling—for a while. This is as far as the ordinary cough medicine goes. Boschee's German Syrup is a discovery, a great Throat and Lung Specialty. Where for years there have been sensitiveness, pain, coughing, spitting, hemorrhage, voice failure, weakness, slipping down hill, where doctors and medicine and advice have been swallowed and followed to the gulf of despair, where there is the sickening conviction that all is over and the end is inevitable, there we place German Syrup. It cures. You are a live man yet if you take it.

DELANO DIARY.

—The Delano Roller Mills are shipping considerable flour and feed now-a-days.

—The base ball dance given at the City Hall last night is counted a success.

—The ladies of the M. E. church have been cleaning the church and preparing for winter. A good job has been done.

—The Delano literary society has not yet materialized. It is about time it awoke from its Rip Van Winkle slumbers. Come wake up.

—William T. Ziebarth left on Wednesday evening for St. Anthony Park where he will pursue his studies in the School of Agriculture.

—Thomas Worthy who fell from a bee tree last week and laid in a semi-conscious condition for several days is now on the gain and able to recognize people again.

—Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Gott returned from their wedding trip to the cities Wednesday evening. They will keep house in the Eckman residence on Fourth street.

—The local brickyards don't seem to be supplying the demand for brick at the present time and our lumber dealers have recently received several car loads from the cities.

—Tom Rader, of Dassel, was shaking hands with Delano friends to-day. Tom says Dassel is all there, but we suspect when he is out the citizens would not agree with him.

—Len Dedrick patronizes the town pump now with his stable of horses. He claimes to have a colt that is fast, and if folks will wait long enough he will have him on exhibition.

—The beautiful weather is highly appreciated by everybody, especially when they read of the storms in other lands as three feet of snow in Montana and quite a sprinkling of the beautiful in far off Maine.

—Bad colds are quite prevalent with our citizens, young and old. People should not too long defer donning their flannels, or, at least, should not neglect the use of extra clothing while out in the evening as "chill November's surly blasts" are drawing near.

—An unusually long flat car containing a threshing outfit passed through town one day this week Baron Von Kruger secured a square and measured it, surprising the onlookers by reporting 52 feet. Ordinary freight cars are 33 feet long.

—The following letter found this morning posted on a Delano residence was handed us for publication:

DELANO, Oct. 23, Friday morning 3 o'clock.

Dear ——, I hear you are a going to be married. My heart broken. I came up to see you and you were not to be seen. Answer this and let me know. Yours truly, ——

The names we do not print. [Ed.]

—Rev. William Campbell informs us that he will alternate his services between Delano and Maple Plain preaching at Delano on next Sabbath morning and at Maple Plain in the evening; on the Sabbath following at Maple Plain in the morning and Delano in the evening.

-John Nelson, of Pellican Lake, passed through town on Wednesday, on his way home from Beardsley, where he has been threshing. He reports the outfit as having lost one week on account of rain; and that it is awful windy on the prairie; but says they are doing well, now. He expects to return Monday.

—The Eagle in commenting on the coroner's inquest held last Monday says the dead man was "handled more like a diseased hog than a human being". We presume they intended to say "deceased hog". Even then the story would read quite roughly to many. They evidently did not hear the testimono in the case or were not very careful in publishing it so that some of it was about as correct as their comparison.

—Yesterday afternoon about 4 o'clock, quite an excitement occured on Rail Road ave. Two buggies came up from River street each bearing two ladies and each trying to be first. The race was neck and neck, the town pump was safely passed; the band stand left behind, and as they drew near the round elevator the vehicles collided. But, forunately, not with sufficient force to produce any serious results. After arriving at Third street two of the party alighted and looked over the damages where they again took to their rig and the entire party disappeared up Third street.

—On Saturday evening Mr. William Davis an old and much respected citizen of Franklin, died, suddenly, in his bed, at 11 o'clock, p. m. He was in Delano with his wife on Thursday and then appeared in his usual health and spirits. He had long been a sufferer from heart disease but was usually able to his work and was considered one of the most prosperous farmers in the nieghborhood. He leaves a wife in easy circumstances, to mourn his sudden death, and who has the sympathy of all who know her. He was buried on Monday from the Catholic church at Watertown.

—J. E. Nelson is now a citizen of Minneapolis.

—The wood market begins to look up a little as the nights grow cooler.

—Some of our farmers must be building quite freely this fall judging from the large number of wagon load's of lumber, daily seen wending their ways toward some farm on some of the many highways leading out of our beautiful little village.

—Five of Delano's noted sportsmen hied themselves away to the prairies on Monday evening with expectations great leaving many friends anxiously awaiting their return and speculating on the "jolly time", the "baked duck", the "roast goose, etc., etc.," only to be awakened at 5:23 a. m., on Wednesday morning from their beautiful dreams to open the door and welcome home the weary travelers who, thanks to the well filled lunch baskets (now empty) had not suffered from the pangs of hunger, and to have their fond hopes ruthlessly dashed to pieces by the pitiful announcement of "Never a duck. they all flew too high!"

Next time the "quintette" sally out among the winged rovers they will most likely provide themselves with long ranged guns or stay in the woods where they can climb a tree and get nearer to the game and not be humiliated by witnessing the disappointment depicted on every lineament of the most trusting friends who depeneed upon them to furnish fowls for feasts.

—On Saturday morning news was recieved in town of the death by shooting of Ernest Zierman an old man living at the forks of the Buffalo and Montrose road about a mile and a half northwest of Delano. As there had been considerable domestic unhappiness and home was not a pleasant place for the old gentleman it was thought best to hold an inquest. Coronor Cassel, County Attorney, Cutting, and Sheriff Nugent came to investigate the affair. Coroner Cassel summoned a jury as follows: Fred Dow F. J. Brandes, Len Dedrick, John Steffes, Hiram Dyer, and Sam Murphy. Several witnesses were sworn giving evidence as to the family troubles: to the fact that the old gentleman had expressed himself several times as being tired of his life, and that he had waded into the water to drown himself, but when the water came up to his chin he thought it time to get out and waded ashore, that he had a week or two ago tried to shoot himself but he could not reach the trigger with his hand and could not fire the gun with his foot. On Saturday morning Mrs. Z. heard a shot, got up, built a fire called up the family and soon found Mr. Zierman standing in the granery supported by his gun having caught in his vest, with her clothes-stick in his hand, dead. She sent for nieghbors and after the coroner came the body was brought to town where the inquest was held, After hearing the testimony the jury rendered a verdict that they found that Earnest Zierman came to his death on Saturday, Oct. 17. by a gunshot wound in the mouth by his own hands.

Moved and seconded that the appointment of a village constable be laid over until the next meeting. Carried.

On motion the council adjourned.

A. W. WITTMAN,
Recorder, pro tem.

Figs and Thistles.

Jesus Christ never tried to make a disciple by argument.

Birds with bright plumage do not always make good pot-pie.

Real troubles never kill. It is those we imagine that are deadly.

The man who gives to the world a good thought gives to somebody life.

The devil has no use for the man who always does as he would be done by.

The man who fights to-day's battle faithfully will not be whipped to-morrow.

More people have learned to read from the light of a tallow dip than from that of an electric light.

One of the hardest things to do is to believe that the man is honest who dosen't look at things as we do.

You do not praise the Lord very much if you never sing any songs except those you find in the hymn book.

There are people that never give away any milk until after they skim it, and then they want credit for cream.

There are too many people in the church who won't march unless they can be at the head of the procession.

If some people would be a little more careful where they step, those who follow them wouldn't stumble so much.

Some folks who are always anxious wheather we shall "know each other there," pass their next door neighbors in the street without speaking.

When a man is looking for a wife he wants an angel, but when he goes to housekeeping he sometimes says ugly things because he didn't get a cook.

The world is full of people who would starve before they would sell whiskey who are glad to take the saloonkeeper's money in a thousand different ways and put it in their pockets.

—Ram's Horns.

A CLOSE MAN.

A hard, close man was Soloman Ray,
Nothing of value he gave away;
He hoarded and saved;
And the more he had the more he craved.

The hard-earned dollar he toiled to gain
Brought him little but toil and pain;
For little he spent,
Add all he lent
He made it bring him twenty per cent.

Such was the life of Solomon Ray,
The years went by and his hair grew gray;
His cheeks grew thin,
And his soul within
Grew hard as the dollars he worked to win.

But he died one day as all men must,
For life is fleeting and man but dust.
The heirs were gay,
That laid him away,
And that was the end of Solomen Ray.

They quarreled now who had little cared
For Solomen Ray while his life was spared.
His lands were sold,
And his hard-earned gold,
All went to the lawyers, I am told.

Yet men will cheat, and pinch and save,
Nor carry their treasures beyond the grave.
All their gold some day
Will melt away
Like the selfish savings of Solomen Ray.

THE unveiling of a splendid monument to the memory of Georgia's distinguished son, the late Henry W. Grady took place Oct. 21, at Atlanta his recent home. The speech of the occasion was made by Governor Hill, of New York.

IN a collision on the "Soo" near Glenwood E. G. Holmes, of St. Paul, Fred Renn, Conrad Prince, Brazil Fyle, and John Collin of Monticello and vicinity were killed add George Wilson, fireman, injured by jumping. Albert Cressey and Ed Rin were also wounded.

TROUBLE seems to be brewing between the new Chilian government and the U S. Several American seamen were assaulted in the streets of Valparaiso, one killed outright and several wounded. Some claim that it was a street fight for which the government was not responsible.

THE suit of Ignatius Donnely against the Pioneer Press for $100,000.00 damages for libel terminated on Saturday last, at Minneapolis before Judge Hooker assisted by Judge Lochren and a jury of twelve men. The verdict was $1.00 for the plaintiff. This relieves Mr. D. of the fear of becoming a capitalist at once. He is said to have instituted proceedings against the same paper again on another complaint.

THE North Star Democratic Club met in Minneapolis on Tuesday and changed their name to the North Star Association of Democratic Clubs. Its object is to organize Democratic clubs throughout the state. A letter was received by the Association from William Campbell chairman of the Democratic Central committee declining an invitation from Chairman Durant, of the club, to be present at a mass meeting te be held in the evening at Minneapolis. The letter as published in the Minneapolis Times would lead one to infer that Chairman Campbell would like Democrats to consult him before starting a boom on their own hooks. He seems to think the county committees are able to take care of the party's interests. If they are to be depended on to do this they should at once be looked after and organized and placed on a working footing and commence operations before other parties are so well organized as to make it much more difficult to reach the people with literature and educational matter as will be needed in the coming campaign.

OHIO has been a doubtful state for several years, the majorities received by either side growing smaller until an election ih that State, especially when the issues at stake are of national importance, as is the case in the pending campaign to be decided by ballot on November 3d, has grown to be exceedingly interesting. A few figures on former elections will be read by many of our readers with no small degree of satisfaction:

1868	Republican plurality was		41,428
1872,	"	"	36,368
1876,	"	"	7,516
1880,	"	"	34,227
1884,	"	"	31,802
1888,	"	"	19,599

The above were Presidential years and won by the Republicans. Below are the Democratic pluralites on some of the so called off years:

1877,	Democratic plu. for Gov.,		22,550
1882,	"	" Sec. State,	19,115
1883,	"	" for Gov.,	12,529
1889,	"	Gov. Campbell,	10,872

This being an off year, Gov. Campbell running for a second term and the tariff issue with its strongest advocate for his opponent serves to make things exceedingly interesting, and more especially when the chances for the winner to have his name on the Presidential ticket are taken into consideration.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23, 1891.

Senator Faulkner, who was one of the democratic missionary party which recently travelled through the northwest, is now in Washington. He is not a man who allows his enthusiasm to run away with his judgment; therefore his impressions of the political situation in that section are worthy of the most careful consideration. He says: "one of the most encouraging things for the democracy in the west is that the young, active, go-adead men, many of whom have been raised as republicans and whose family associations have all been with that party, are becoming democrats on the tariff issue. Heretofore they have been too busy developing new regions and attending to their business enterprises to devote much time to politics. Now they are taking hold of politics and it is the principle of tariff reform that they believe in and work for. The McKinley law was constructed against the interests of the great northwest, and the active men, with little regard to what their former political affiliations may have been, want relief from the burdens imposed by the republican tariff policy. On the silver question the people of the west are divided in opinion as we are of the east, but they all agree on the tariff question. The democrats all over the country are of one mind on this: therefore it is the national issue. The democrats in that section have not had good working organization long enough to warrant us in expecting that we can carry in 1892 all those States which are naturally coming into the democratic column. We shall probably carry two of the new states in 1892, and we will gradually become the dominant party of the northwest. One disadvantage we labor under in that section is that the republicans have most the leading morning papers. That will be overcome in time, but in spite of it the tariff question is rapidly recruiting the democratic party."

Senator Eustis, who has just returned from Massachusetts, thinks the democrats are certain to re-elect Gov. Russell and that there is a bright prospect of Senator Dawes being succeeded by a democrat when his term expires in 1893.

Whether Commissioner of Pensions Raum, has resigned or not continues to be a mooted question, although the majority, including some of his personal friends, believe that he has, but that it will not be announced nor accepted until after the state elections. Raum continues to deny that he has resigned and to assert that he enjoys the confidence of Secretary Noble and Mr. Harrison; meanwhile it is worthy of note that neither of the three Pension Office employees whose dismissal Raum asked for, has been dismissed, although one of them has resigned, it is stated, voluntarily. The man who resigned was not one of those who furnished Secretary Noble with affidavits charging young Raum with having offered to get them promotions for a cash consideration. Everybody here is sick and tired of this whole Raum business, and republicans do not hesitate to say publicly that they wish the administration would kick Raum out.

The bit of "jingoism" displayed by the administration on alleged private information that England was about to gobble up the Hawaiian Islands with the consent of the present rulers of the islands, was unexpectedly but effectually settled by a gentleman who visited Washington this week. This gentleman was Mr. A. S. Cleghorn, the Collector General of Customs of the Hawaiian Islands, and father of the heirapparent to the Hawaiian throne, who said: "I have assured the President and the State department that no government is so close to Hawaii as the United States, in spite of our trade with you being somewhat damaged by your new tariff law, and that there is no thought among our people, who are perfectly satisfied with our present status, of anything even looking toward British supremacy on the islands."

Numerous prominent Government officials are on the anxious bench, because of an undefined sort of an understanding which exists here that there is to be a general re-oaganization of the administration soon after the State elections, and that all of those who have not proved themselves efficient political workers, are to be made to walk the plank in order that Mr. Harrison may take care of the workers upon whom he relies for a renomination. Everything is to be politics from this on, and the hustlers who left Washington in disgust in 1889 because they were not recognized by Mr. Harrison, are to be recalled and given the choice places at the public table.

It is learned that the reason Secretary Forter delayed going to Ohio until the first of this week, was that he was waiting for a big corruption fund, which Mr. Wanamaker, Chairman Clarkson and others have been quietly raising for him to put where it would do the most good to the g. o. p. This money is all to be disbursed by Mr. Foster and will not go through the State committee.

CORRESPONDENCE

MAPLE LAKE.

Dr. Tessier has moved to Franconia where he will practice his profession.

John Rohrenbach has a gang of plasterers at work on his new building.

The building of the new Catholic church at this place has been given up for the present. The committee has concluded to erect a temporary structure.

It is reported that the threshing crew that left here yesterday met with a terrible railroad accident west of here and that there were four or five of the men killed outright and others injured.

Lots of wood is being brought into town every day.

The village council met Monday night and appointed J. F. Collins village attorney.

The recent Republican love feast held at Buffalo no doubt created some enthusiasm, aroused new courage in the old leaders and politicians of that party but so far as the rank and file of the party are concerned the enthusiasm was the most artificial and effervescent kind. It is decidedly improbable that the people will reverse their verdict of last fall without better reasons than mere fustian and buncombe that was palmed off at Buffalo. The salvation of the people lies in the hope that this pow wow was but another feast of Belshazzar.

MONTROSE CHIPS.

Miss Mary F. Hainlin and Mrs. Mary A. Hainlin called on Montrose friends this week.

George Ruppelius and J. H. Ferrell are now legal residents of our village.

W. H. Stacy and wife, C. H. Ferrell and Mrs. Mapes transacted business in Buffalo one day this week.

J. M. Belden has engaged to teach school in the neighborhood of Waverly the coming winter.

Mr. Staddon, the photographer, has removed his gallery to Cokato where he will pursue his calling.

Our public school commenced on Tuesday morning of this week with a corps of three teachers.

Our village council has finally seen fit to repair, in a manner, the unbecoming and dangerous sidewalks which we have been forced to put up with for nearly the whole summer compelling the pedestrian to take to the streets over certain portions after dark. The people who have occasion to use these sidewalks are very thankful that even so much has been granted by the present council.

Mr. J. R. Gardner, life insurance agent of Minneapolis is talking up insurance among our neighbors this week.

ROCKFORD.

Fine weather and farmers are busy husking corn.

Mr. G S. Shelby, brother of G. W. started for Warsaw, Ind. Wednesday after visiting here for the last two months.

D. R. Farnham has been appointed post master. It was a surprise to the community but D. R. likes to work for Uncle Sam in some capacity.

Ben Alberts and D. R. Caldwell are plastering at Maple Lake.

J. Brennan and C. M. Johnson did business in the city Wednesday.

Dr. Fertig will lecture at the G. A. R. hall to-night. A large crowd is expected.

INDEPENDENCE.

Most all the leading papers tor the last three months have been taking on a good deal of sail in telling what a tremendous crop of grain the state of Minnesota had this year and not Minnesota alone but all the states but I was satisfied their estimates were too large. In consulting the last monthly agricultural report received feom Washington D. C. find that the average of bushels of wheat per acre in Minnesota is only a fraction over 17 bushels and the general average throughout all the states is just 15 buhsels. In Minnesota rye 17 bushels, oats 37 bushels, barley 27 bushels, this is official statistics from headquarters and is supposed to be nearly correct. In the fore part of the season high estimates were given by those making reports enabling buyers to get the cream of the crop in to their hands at a cheap rate while returns of product indicate a short crop just in time to help the grain brokers make a fat profit on their previous purchases. Overestimates are injurious to the produeers, the farmer should remember this, but as the farmer (the producer) and labor are the mudsills for the rest of the world suppose it is all right but ever since Adam left the garden the producer has had the burden to bear.

This is fine weather for all kinds of business such as plowing, husking corn, digging potatoes, and discussing the tariff question.

A good many people are having colds caused by the cold damp weather of two weeks ago.

There was a travelling menagerie passed through Independence last Saturday consisting of one black bear and a man.

Quite a number from Rockford attended church in Independence last Sunday.

In last weeks Eagle appeared an article under the headline of "Democratic Thunder Spoiled". This was in Delano. Just wait until the 3rd of next month and there will be some Republican thunder spoiled in Ohio if I am not mistaken.

JOHN H. MCGARY.

LORETTO

While Sunday felt like a genuine summer day, Monday was a fair reminder of winter's chilly blasts.

John Lohmiller and Aug. Bernick of Delano were doing business in Loretto, Friday.

Mrs. Henry Baker took the morning train Monday, for Lidgerwood N. D., where she will visit relatives a few days.

VIOLETTA VORHEES.

Dr. Edward Judson, son of Adoniram Judson, who voluntarily left a large and prosperous church that he might do mission work in the most unattractive and hopeless part of New York City, penned these expressive lines;—

"The brightest Christian virtue is devoid of self-consciousness as well as of self-seeking. Piety, like beauty is undone as soon as it is conscious of itself. The best men and women in our churches are those who don't know it. They mourn over their imperfections rather than claim to have reached some higher plane of goodness. In passing through the great fields of Indian corn in some western state, one observes that the ears which are small and green and are not filled out stand perfectly erect upon the stalk, while the ears that are ripe and brown and weighed down with the golden grain, bend over, so that the husk forms an umbrella, completely protecting the frnit. The best people are like that. Laden with the fruits of Christian experience, they bend low with humility and a sense of imperfection. As bees fly home to their hive, their thighs laden with pollen, which they shake off, and never looking behind fly away again for another load, leaving it for others to pack away in cells, so the true Christian forgets those things which are behind, and reaches forth unto the things which are before. It is a good motto, to do all the good to all the people you can, and make as little fuss about it as you can."

One of the most eloquent pleas ever made for prohibition against high license was in the famous speech of Henry W. Grady at Atlanta in 1887, when he says, "Have you ever thought about a woman being turned out of her house—the little cottage that covers her and her children? Can you picture—you who live in comfortable homes filled with light and warmth and books and joy—can you think of these people—human beings, our brothers and sisters, the poor mother, brave, though her heart is breaking, huddling her little children about her, and the father, weak but loving, and loving all the deeper because he knows his weakness has brought them to this want and degradation, and little children, those of whom our Saviour said, 'Suffer them to come unto me forbid them not:' their asking, 'Mamma, where will we sleep to-night?' Can you picture that and then their taking themselves up and the woman putting her hand with undying love ann faith in the hand of the man she swore to follow through good and evil report, and marching up and down the street, this pitiable procession—through the unthinking streets, by laughing children and shining windows, looking for a hole where, like the foxes, they may hide their poor heads?

"My friends, they talk to you about personal liberty, that a man should have the right to go into a grog-shop, and see this pitiable procession—now stopped—parading up and down our streets again. They talk to you about the shades of Washington, Monroe and Jefferson. I would not give one happy, rosy little woman, uplifted from that degradation, happy again in her home, with the cricket chirping on her hearthstone and her children about her knee, her husband redeemed from drink at her side—I would not give one of them for all the shades of all the men that ever contended since Cataline conspired and Cæsar fought!" As he closed, after summing up the grand result of the two years of prohibition, he said: "The best reforms of this earth come through waste and storm and donbt and suspicion: the sun itself, when it rises on each day, wastes the radiance of the moon, and blots the starlight from the skies, but only to unlock the earth from the clasp of night and plant the stars anew in the opening flowers. Behind that sun, as behind this movement, we may be sure their stands the Lord God Almighty, Master and maker of this universe, from whose hand the spheres are rolled to their orbits, and whose voice has been the harmony of this world since the morning stars sang together."

DELANO, WRIGHT COUNTY. • MINN.

IT IS somewhat amusing to read that the artificial rain experiments in Texas have been postponed because of wet weather.

CONGRESSMAN LEE, of Virginia, is the seventh member of the next congress that has died prior to the assembling of that body. This is rather extraordinary mortality.

POLAR bears are reported to be unusually plentiful in Alaska this season. They are found further south, which is said to be a sign that the winter will be very cold.

SURVEYORS at work on the Gila river in New Mexico claim that they have discovered a mountain of pure alum a mile square at the base and 3,000 feet high.

OUR bountiful harvests are supplying Europe's deficiency, and just as great Britain is figuring on the probable exhaustion of her coal fields, discoveries of immense supplies of that fuel are being made in Alaska.

MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON, the philanthropist, is the only woman who has received the freedom of the houses of congress—a right presented to her in consideration of her gift to congress of Carpenter's "Lincoln."

A CONNECTICUT man writes to the New York Sun that he has in his possession an apple that he picked at Sharpsburg, Md., and the apple weighs over twenty-six and a-half ounces, and measures sixteen inches in circumference. It is the biggest apple he ever saw.

A CONFERENCE has taken place between the Austrian ministers concerning the succession to the throne, and a document will be presented to the Austro-Hungarian parliament at the beginning of 1892, creating the Archduke Francis Ferdinand heir to the crown, in place of his father.

Two hundred school-teachers are needed at once in New Mexico, "school ma'ams" being preferred. And a railroad official of that territory declares that hundreds of eligible men in New Mexico are anxiously awaiting the opportunity to offer their hands, hearts and homes to some good woman.

THE mysteries of English vernacular precipitated a big row in the Methodist ecumenical council at Washington. An English delegate asked the chairman to knock another delegate down, and the council wasn't able to recover its equanimity until it was explained that the expression was only English for calling a delegate to order.

SCRANTON, Pa., has a remarkable wheel which weighs 400,000 pounds. It is a cog-wheel, fifty-four feet in diameter and eighteen inches face, and has a capacity of 30,000,000 gallons of water and 2,000 tons of sand per twenty-four hours, run at velocity of ten feet a second on the inner edge of the bucket. The total length of the shaft is twenty-three feet and six inches.

RUDOLPH VIRCHOW, the great German pathologist, was 70 years old a few days ago and Europe's scientists, statesmen and physicians joined in doing him honor. Prof. Virchow is the originator of the cell-growth theory of disease, the adoption of which, says a competent writer, is "the most important step in pathology" of the period, as it has "little less than revolutionized pathological study."

WORD comes from Nicaragua that work on the ship canal is steadily progressing. The canal is not the only American enterprise on foot in Nicaragua. The government there has granted two million acres of land to a San Francisco company that proposes to build a railroad across Nicaragua, a transatlantic line 268 miles long. The land will be conveyed in tenths as the railroad progresses, and the work must be completed within five years.

THE census figures of a late bulletin show that the range cattle industry is being constantly pushed to remoter parts of the country and confined within more narrow limits, while the land once occupied by great ranches is now divided up into cultivated farms. It is the natural law. As population moves on toward the outposts of civilization land becomes too valuable to be used for grazing, and cattle-raising like sheep-raising must be carried on under new conditions or given up altogether.

IT SEEMS curious to think that tea and coffee, which Europe got on without for 6,000 years, should at last have become one of the necessaries of life. Neither have food properties in their component parts; they give neither flesh, fat or bone, being simply stimulant in their effects upon the system. Another curious fact is that which tells us that both tea and coffee acquire their stimulating powers from a principle named theine, of which no other known plants possess any considerable quantity.

THE tea plant is of a genius of shrubs of the natural order Termstroemiaceæ, closely allied to the tribe Camellia. The seeds are sown soon after they ripen in holes 4 or 5 inches deep and 3 to 4 feet apart. As the rains come on it grows rapidly, soon forming large clusters, which require little care other than an occasional weeding. The leaves of the shrubs are not gathered for "tea" until after the end of the third year from the time when the seed was planted. Each shrub is good for from seven to ten years, when it is cut down and young and healthy shoots allowed to rise.

THERE is one way to talk through a telephone and few mistakes would be made by "Central" if all users would become acquainted with that fact. That way is to stand back just a little ways and talk in an ordinary tone, as if you were speaking to a man a couple of feet away instead of to one three or four miles away, over a wire. Don't yell, don't whisper, simply speak in an ordinary tone and distinctly. The words are carried by electricity, not by the force of your enunciation. The instrument is not to be compared to a deaf man, but, to the opposite, is exceedingly sensitive.

Killed in the Cars.

GLENWOOD, Minn., Oct. 27.—Last night at 9:15, at Thorson, nine miles east of here, the regular freight train on the "Soo" was standing in the yard, and an extra running wild, telescoped the rear end of the caboose, which was occupied by Oscar E. Helmes, a traveling salesman of Seabury & Co., of St. Paul, and three threshing crews bound for North Dakota. The approaching train was signaled to stop, but came thundering along at the rate of thirty miles an hour. The foreman of the threshing crew, seeing the danger, ran to the caboose and gave warning. All heeded, but twelve were unable to escape before the awful crash. The engine smashed the caboose and three box cars, and lifted others from the track.

The dead are: O. E. Helmes, Fred Renn, Conrad Prince, Brazil Lyle, John Coffin.

Oscar E. Helmes' legs were smashed and his body crushed. He died in a few minutes.

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS

BIG FIRE AT MINNEAPOLIS.

Sash, Doors and Blinds for the World's Fair Destroyed.

The warehouse of Bardwell, Robinson & Co., sash, door and blind manufacturers at Minnneapolis, was burned, involving a loss of about $100,000, with insurance for about half. The warehouse was stored with valuable material. The company recently secured an immense contract for furnishing sash, doors and blinds for the Columbian exposition in Chicago, and the most of this material, which had been finished ready for shipment, was stored on the upper floors of the warehouse and is a total loss.

Beware of Them.

There are a set of swindlers of the worst kind working in the vicinity of Faribault among the farmers. They have mostly dry goods, clothing and notions. They begin with a small pile which they say can be bought for $1, but to this they add more of their goods until it becomes a large pile, which they would sell for $35, when in fact it is not worth $50. The swindlers claim that they represent a large firm in some city and that they will also buy butter at 25 cents the whole year, which is to be shipped to the firm. All of the persons who have purchased of their goods have been taken in badly.

UNCLE SAM'S DEMAND.

Chili Sternly Notified That Ample Reparation Must Be Made for the Attack on the Baltimore's Crew.

SANTIAGO, Oct. 27.—The United States government on Monday, through Minister Egan, formally demanded reparation from the government of Chili for the attack recently made in Valparaiso upon a number of the seamen of the United States cruiser Baltimore. The demand made by the United States minister is no informal suggestion that the government at Washington expects some kind of satisfaction for the killing and wounding of the Baltimore's sailors. It is a firmly put notification, given according to direct orders received from the state department at Washington, that the United States demands an immediate explanation of the whole affair and reparation for the injuries inflicted.

Acting upon the instructions sent to him from Washington Mr. Egan presented the junta with a detailed statement of the results of the investigation made by Capt. Schley, of the Baltimore, and by Mr. Egan himself. These investigations show that Charles Riggan, one of the Baltimore's petty officers, was brutally assaulted by several Chilians while he was riding on a street car. Riggan resisted, but was dragged from the car and murdered by a pistol shot while in the arms of his companions. Turnbull, another of the Baltimore's wounded men, who died Monday from his injuries, received no less than eighteen wounds in the back, two of them penetrating his lungs. After giving a full list of the Baltimore's crew who were injured by the mob Mr. Egan's statement called attention to the fact that thirty-five of the cruiser's crew were on the day of the riots arrested, unnecessary violence being used by the police, and that they were detained in custody without due cause. In conclusion, Mr. Egan said that the surgeons of the United States warship expressed the opinion that some of the wounds inflicted upon the American sailors were bayonet wounds, and that this clearly showed that the police officers of Valparaiso, who were armed with bayonets, took part in the attack. The Americans were without arms and practically defenseless.

Mr. Egan, in presenting the Chilian junta with this statement of the assault on the American sailors, expressed in distinct terms the feeling of great indignation which the state department at Washington feels at the whole affair, and especially at the brutal conduct of the police of Valparaiso in joining with the mob in the latter's attack upon the Baltimore's seamen and in drawing their bayonets and using them against the unarmed Americans. Mr. Egan particularly called attention to the additional brutality of the police of Valparaiso in using horses to drag the Americans to prison.

After making a brief but pointed summary of the facts to which he had been instructed to call attention, Minister Egan informed the representative of the junta that, in the name of the United States, he demanded reparation for the insults and injuries complained of.

Now the question which arises is, What will be the action of the Chilian government? As appears now, there seems to be no doubt that the junta will soon make the reparation demanded. Naturally the action taken by Minister Egan is attracting the attention of the foreign ministers and of the foreigners generally who are resident in this republic. The sympathy of the American colony is entirely with Capt. Schley and his blue-jackets, and they are one and all glad to receive the news, made public Monday, that another United States war vessel, the Boston, has actually sailed for these waters. Chilians try to smooth over the assault upon and imprisonment of the American sailors by classing it as a simple street row. Up to the present time the junta has expressed no regret for the attack made on the American sailors.

MR. BLAINE'S POSITION OUTLINED.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—The only word received at the state department from Minister Egan Monday was a brief cipher dispatch which was said to confirm the statement that he has made the formal demand for reparation on account of the attack on the crew of the Baltimore, as directed by the president.

Within a few days a report is expected from the minister outlining the attitude of the junta and indicating what action may be looked for. The administration, having, through its minister, made the position of the United States clear, will wait a reasonable time for the position of the junta to be defined.

At the department it was said that no disposition would be shown to hector the Chilian government. In the past no notice has been taken of the silly boasts of the victorious faction that it would get even with this country for not allowing it to violate its neutrality laws. Such vaporings were beneath the dignity of notice. Secretary Blaine's idea is simply that the Chilian government shall be treated precisely as any other nation. The fact that it has only 3,000,000 citizens will not cause one jot more to be asked than if it had 60,000,000. On the other hand, Chili will be held to the same strict accountability that the United States would demand of the most powerful nation in Europe.

While Trying to Save a Woman's Life a French Engineer Loses His Own.

PARIS, Oct. 27.—The driver of a steam tram car in this city on Sunday saw a woman upon the line in front of the engine. She was paralyzed with fear and apparently unable to move. It being impossible to stop headway in time to save her life the engineer courageously crawled along the side of his engine in the hope of being able to snatch the woman up away from death. Unfortunately, at the critical moment he missed his footing, and falling heavily both were ground to atoms. It seems too bad that the name of the dead hero has not transpired.

BURNED TO DEATH.

The Terrible Fate Met by a Negro Murderer at the Hands of an Angry Mob in Texas.

QUEEN CITY, Tex., Oct. 27.—The negro, Lee Green, who murdered the wife and child of Farmer Law, 7 miles from this place, on Saturday, was on Monday burned at the stake in sight of the scene of his double crime. Before he died he confessed the murders and said that he committed the crime for the money, $60, which he obtained.

Green was captured Sunday night by a posse and taken to the jail at Linden. He was caught near Kildare after some resistance, but when he found he was to go to jail accompanied the officers without making any trouble. Monday morning at 5 o'clock a crowd appeared about the jail and demanded the keys.

The jailer's wife refused at first to give them up, but yielded finally to the threats of the determined men. Green was hastily taken from his cell and put on a horse and closely guarded as he was conveyed to the house of Farmer Law. No attempt to harm him was made as the men seemed determined to make no possible mistake.

Upon the arrival of the crowd and the negro at the house of the farmer the negro was turned over to Mr. Law and the crowd drew back, recognizing the right of the bereaved to take his revenge. Green was led by Law to the side of the well in which had been found the bodies of the woman and her daughter. The heart-broken man asked the negro if he had committed the crime and Green confessed it. He said that he approached Mrs. Green as she was bending over a washtub and struck her over the head with a heavy stick which he carried. He had not at first intended to kill her but fearing he had done so took up the body to throw it into the well when the 7-year-old daughter of the woman began to scream. He threw the body of the mother down the hole and then beat out the brains of the child and dropped the second body as he had the first.

A little 4-year-old boy ran up from the yard and began to cry as he discovered that his mother was missing. In desperation and determined to leave no possible chance for discovery, the young negro grasped the boy and dropping him into the well threw the tubs and washboard after him, expecting that the child would be killed by them. Green then robbed the house, securing $60, and started to escape, stealing a horse from a neighbor.

When the confession had been made Mr. Law turned the negro over to the guards and retired into the house and entered into a consultation with his neighbors, who made up the principal portion of the crowd. They did not constitute all of it, however, for all day long there had been arriving at the plantation groups of men, white and black, from all parts of this and adjoining counties.

Shortly after noon Mr. Law told the leaders of the mob to take Green out and lynch him. They in turn yielded to the strong solicitations of the colored men who made up a great portion of the party and told the latter that they could wreak on him fitting punishment. The consultation between them was not protracted. There was little need of it, and at 2:30 o'clock Green was led out to the side of the road and placed against a tree and a log-chain twisted about his neck and body to hold him in an erect position.

Immediately forty-six negro men began to pile about the tree a mass of fagots. The young fiend saw that his fate was at hand and began to beg for mercy and yell with terror. A number of aged negresses had collected and their chants, mingled with the stronger ones of the men who were constructing the funeral pyre, made a wierd scene. One, an itenerant preacher, began to pray, but his voice was lost in the din, he could not make himself heard and the young ruffian who stared death in the face received no consolation from the supplication. Suddenly an old negress walked out of the throng which had drawn back as the pile had been completed and touched a match to the light wood. In a moment the smoke and flames began to arise. The cries of the dying man, encircled by them, became fainter and fainter, and in a few minutes his soul had passed to eternity not fifty-four hours behind those of his victims.

The crowd which witnessed the burning of the murderer numbered about 1,000 and was made up about equally of whites and blacks.

SWEPT BY FIRE.

Widespread Loss Occasioned in Oklahoma Territory by the Flames—Cimarron City Destroyed.

GUTHRIE, O. T., Oct. 27.—The sky is lit up in every direction by the lurid glare of prairie fires. Some of the fires have been burning three days and have done a great deal of damage. Hundreds of farms have been swept of crops and fences and in two score or more of cases the houses and barns have been consumed, the stock perishing and the people escaping only with their lives in the Iowa country. The fire has gotten in the timber and will burn for weeks. It is feared a number of people have perished there. Cimarron City, a small town northeast of here, has been entirely wiped out, the people escaping by jumping into the river. M. B. Emery, stage driver to Chandler, and the Perkins mail carrier were caught in the fires and both terribly burned.

Seven Years for Forger Fursman.

PONTIAC, Ill., Oct. 27.—W. H. SIMPLE BEN.

In a narrow valley of the upper course of the middle One-Hundred-and-Two in the state of Iowa, lived years ago (and now lives) three old maids whose names were respectively Tabitha, Dorcas and Abigail. What their ages were was a matter of conjecture to everybody but themselves. Indeed, they looked older than they really were; which arose partly from the fact that they wore caps as was the fashion in those days. These caps, however, were always a spotless white, and the kerchiefs which they wore, pinned behind and before, were immaculate purity itself. Their dwelling was a log cabin and though very unprepossessing without, within it was as tidy and cleanly as any house could possibly be. If in summer you had occupied one of their ponderous feather beds, you would have slept the sleep of peace; which cannot truthfully be said of many far more costly and pretentious homes on the Hundred-and-Two.

The farm that these three old maids owned occupied the valley from hill to hill. Though to be sure it was not very wide, yet it was ample enough to support them by its rent, they, as is the custom in the west, getting one-third the crop in the bushel, delivered in the crib and granary. Nor will we deny but that they laid up a dollar or two now and then, for they always kept three or four cows and a flock of poultry, selling more or less butter and eggs the year round.

They were a kindly trio, these three old maids; a fact that Ben Miller, a poor, half-witted man who lived at the foot of the hill a little further down the valley, but on their land, would frequently aver. Many were the times in winter when they filled his basket with good things for his wife, who was consumptive, and for John, his little boy, too small as yet to be of any service in making a living. Poor Ben, he had once been as bright as the best, till one day felling a tree, a bough flew back, striking him on the temple, and he was never himself again afterwards. "It was God's mercy," the neighbors said, "that it hadn't killed him outright."

Throughout the months during which Ben was bedridden, the old maids, one or the other of them, visited him every day, and they never went empty handed. "We should have gone to the poor-house had it not been for them," said Ben's wife many a time after that. "We can't ever pay them, but God will," she would continue; "for has He not said: 'Blessed is he that considereth the poor.'" And the thin, consumptive body had no doubt but that the Father would bless the three old maids.

Time slipped away. Summer and autumn and winter came and went, and when May made the hillside lovely with flowers and the corn was all planted, and the trees were shooting their leaves, John's mother slept the last peaceful sleep. The three old maids were there and laid out the corpse, and sent the man who rented their farm for the coffin and when the mother was laid in it, dressed in one of the very best gowns in the wardrobe of the three old maids, she looked positively beautiful. There was that smile of ineffable peace upon her face which the dead generally wear and that seems so full of contentment and repose.

After the funeral Ben returned to his cabin, nor would anything induce him either to change his abode or his way of living. He continued to do odd chores for neighbors, and with his fishing, made out to get along. The truth is, the old maids saw that he was provided for and suffered for nothing. Ben regarded them as his protectors and upon John and them he lavished all his affection.

As we have said, Ben often went fishing in the little stream that wandered in tortuous and "stony ways" through the narrow valley. In the daytime he caught sunfish, suckers and bass. At times he would prolong his fishing into the night, so as to catch catfish, for night is the time when they bite the best. He had done this at the particular time to which we now refer. He was sitting in the shadow of the sugar trees intent upon his line, when he was aroused by voices. Ben listened. Presently he heard pronounced the names of the three old maids. He was wide-awake at this and strained his poor faculties to the utmost to learn what the topic of the voices was.

HE WAS AROUSED BY VOICES.

"They've lots of money," said one.

"Well, we'll have it to-night," said the other with an oath.

Ben listened until he learned the whole plan. The enormity of the crime, the danger of his benefactresses penetrated his slow faculties until he was terribly frightened. He crept away from his fishing with stealthy step until well clear of the neighborhood when he started off with great speed for the house of the old maids.

"Tabitha, Dorcas, Abigail!" he cried, and being out of breath sat down on the floor to recover himself. The old maids were getting ready to retire for the night and looked at Ben with astonishment.

"What on earth is the matter, Ben?" said Dorcas.

"Robbers, thieves!" ejaculated Ben.

It was now the women's turn to be filled with terror. By dint of rapid questioning, Ben told all he had heard.

"Oh, what shall we do?" said Abigail.

"I know," said Ben, who seemed struck with an idea. "Give me the rifle!"

"We shall all be killed!" exclaimed Miss Tabitha, wringing her hands.

"No, we won't," said Ben, who now had hold of the gun. It seemed as if the excitement of the hour had brought him back his senses. Such cures do happen. "Put out the candle!" commanded Ben, "and be quiet!"

Scarcely had a quarter of an hour elapsed when a knock sounded upon the door.

"Who is there?" demanded Ben.

"A friend," was the reply, "who wants to stay all night."

"Can't stay," said Ben.

"I know you!" said a voice recognized by Ben and the sisters as that of their renter. "Ben Miller, open the door! Will you!"

"I know you, too," replied Ben. "You'll not get in."

The next moment the door was struck by a rail, but the ponderous wooden hinges and bar held fast.

Ben stood with leveled rifle squarely in front of the door. Another blow followed; the door gave a little. Another and it flew wide open. That moment Ben touched the sensitive trigger and a loud cry proclaimed one of the house-breakers wounded or killed. A pistol shot was fired at Ben and then all was silent.

Ben uttered no groan nor word. The sisters for half an hour trembled in the darkness and silence of their chamber, and then Dorcas came forth and struck a light. There lay Ben at full length across the doorway, the rifle underneath, while just before him, on the porch floor, was the dead body of the robber, his eyes staring at the morning glory vines trained along the eaves.

"Speak, Ben," said Dorcas, "the danger is past!" But Ben answered not a word.

"Oh, Ben, are you hurt?" uttered all three in a breath. Ben lay upon his rifle motionless.

They raised his head; his face was bloodless; the eyes looked straight before him.

"Oh Ben, Ben, faithful Ben!" cried Dorcas in agony. "Speak to us! Oh say you are not killed!"

Suddenly a light shone in the eyes, the lips moved. "Mother, mother * * my Johnny!" gasped Ben. The limbs thrust themselves out, and Ben, Simple Ben, had recovered his intellect in the land "beyond the river."

Abigail ventured to the next neighbor's and soon the male inhabitants of the valley assembled. Johnny was brought home by the sisters. The next day Ben was buried; the entire settlement followed the wagon that bore the coffin, as mourners. The white-haired itinerant who ministered on the occasion selected for his text: "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." There was not a tearless eye in the assembly. Old and young sobbed aloud, while the three old maids were in a very passion of tears.

Dorcas held Johnny's hand, and led him to the wagon after the service. He became their delight and pride; and although dangerously petted and indulged, has grown up into an honorable manhood, his delight being to cherish his benefactresses in their old age.

The second robber was captured and met a well-merited punishment. It is known that, years ago, one of the tribunals of Justice Lynch was in a dense forest on the headwaters of the One-Hundred-and-Two.—Edward B. Heaton, in Prairie Farmer.
